Tabula Exitii

– The Last Bookmark Before the System Boots

This volume is a threshold.

Tabula Exitii is the final detonation of raw, unfiltered intake – the dumping ground of my last singular bookmarks, deep dives, and inner scrolls before the grid clears and the true system begins. Pulled primarily from the haunted tunnels of 4plebs and my personal link labyrinths, this book is not a guide... it's a purge. A necessary overload.

The final memory dump before formal structure.

Every fragment here was too alive, too weird, too encoded to discard – so I encoded them instead. Each page pulses with the residual charge of the awakening process, the chaos of curiosity, and the untraceable journey from clueless seeker to system-builder.

Why This Book Exists

This is not the beginning of a new path.

This is the end of the wandering phase.

Everything up to this point has been padding – the background radiation of a system being born. Tabula Exitii finishes that padding, closes the loop, and clears the space for what's next:

- The Book of Links
- The Siguar Book System
- The launch of MagickOS 3.33

For the first time, the chaos will be mapped.

What Comes Next

MagickOS 3.33 is the first structured magickal OS that begins with the raw initiate – lost, curious, confused – and transforms them into an advanced practitioner through layered, modular systematization.

It's the full stack.

The map, the method, the myth.

But it couldn't exist until this book existed. Until the excess was expelled. Until the last unsorted pieces were honored.

Tabula Exitii is that honor.

One last transmission from the edge.

One last look back at the glitch before the system initializes.

What comes next is not a scroll.

It's a boot sequence.

possibly be interested in creating a tulpa after just stumbling across this site, and my guide is one of the first things you read, I just want to say, again, I understand. Of course I was skeptical. Everyone here was skeptical at first. But one thing you should ask yourself is: "Why would thousands of people get together and make dozens of guides, thousands of posts, and hours, and hours of discussion, just to fuck with anyone who comes across this site?". The truth is, there are a fair share of roleplayers, and liars here. But the rest of us are telling the truth, and were once exactly where you are now.

Now, this applies both to people who are just finding out what tulpas are, and those of you already creating one, and having trouble.

Disbelief is one of the most detrimental things you can have in this process. Like I said, I understand your skepticism; I really do. But you must cast it aside. Truly believing in yourself, and your tulpa is the fastest way to make progress.

Disbelief can not only hurt (emotionally) your tulpa, but cloud actual progress. I would know all about it. I am a skeptical person by nature. I came across this site and thought it was cool, but far too good to be true. I started creating a tulpa in fairly solid disbelief. I didn't exactly like being so skeptical, as I know it wasn't good, but I didn't really think much of it. I continued on, making minimal progress for months. I hit a plateau of progress only but a month or so in. After that, I had made no more, despite continuing to work with him. While many people have been able to hear their tulpa within the first month or so, it took me until six months in to be able to hear him. Six months. Just to begin to hear him very faintly. I had a moment where, all at once, I tried my best to just cast aside my doubt. Of him, of hearing him, of everything. Right after I did that, I heard him for the first time. I have been able to hear him ever since. Because I cast aside my doubt, I was finally able to truly listen to him. My doubt was the barrier between us the whole time. Don't let yourself make the same mistake that I did.

I think I've ranted about that enough. I'd like to think you understand what I'm saying at this point. Let's move onto

Application:

Okay, you now know that you should not doubt. But what exactly does that mean? How do you apply that to this process, exactly? Throughout the process, you will find yourself wondering whether "that" was your tulpa, or not. Basically, within reason, always assume it was your tulpa. Always. By "within reason", I mean, just don't get ridiculous about it. You're walking around one day, and suddenly, the thought of turkey sandwiches pops into your mind. "OH MY GOD, MY TULPA MUST LIKE TURKEY SANDWICHES, AND IS TRYING TO TELL ME". That's what I mean. Don't start attributing everything to your tulpa. I shouldn't have to give any more examples. Just remember: "within reason".

But you're talking to your tulpa. You ask him a question, and think you hear him respond. That's when you should assume it was him. It is fine, however, to ask them if that was them, or if that was indeed what they said. I don't see that as disbelief, but assurance.

Now, here is something else I want to say, regarding parroting. There are many people often concerned that they are parroting their tulpa when they get a response, and some people assure them that "Parroting is a conscious effort; if you don't know you're parroting, then you're not". I could agree with that, semantics-wise. I have no problem agreeing that parroting is something you do willfully.

However, as opposed to what some people seem to believe, just because you weren't "parroting" doesn't mean that it was your tulpa. Even if you don't want to call it parroting, the brain can and will make up responses. How do I know for sure? Because even recently, I've thought my tulpa said something (and I was obviously not parroting), and I asked him if it was him. He said no.

I just wanted to clear that up, because as much as you should believe it's your tulpa anyway, I don't want people to be thinking things that are so blatantly incorrect. But once again, that doesn't go against what I said before. Believe it was them, anyway.

But beyond believing whether or not something done was your tulpa's doing, you should simply passively believe in them. Try to never catch yourself thinking that they are not real, or anything of the sort. Although, if you do find yourself thinking that often, you shouldn't just force the thoughts out of your head. That won't solve anything. You are obviously still skeptical, and trying your best not to think about it won't do much.

One thing I used to do when I found myself doubting was that I sat down, and thought of all the evidence that pointed toward his existence. He could get rid of my headaches. He had said things that surprised me, and that I surely didn't come up with. He had helped with my depression, and so forth. If you find yourself doubting, you might want to have a similar session with yourself.

Now, onto the next part of the mentality.

Don'ts:

One of the more commonly asked questions on these forums is one in the format of "will this be bad for my tulpa?" or "will this hurt my tulpa?", etc.

There was a time, not too long ago, that there were several things that people believed would be bad for your tulpa. For instance, it used to be thought that falling asleep while spending time with your tulpa could screw them up. That you must visualize your tulpa naked first, or else it wouldn't ever be able to change clothes. These, and many other things have been proven wrong.

Basically, the consensus now is that there is almost nothing you can do that will "mess up" your tulpa. The very few things that can are obvious. Just sit down and ask yourself if it sounds not just possible, but almost definite that what you are thinking of will harm your tulpa.

No? Then you're fine. There really isn't anything to worry about, here. An example of something harmful would be screaming at, and berating your tulpa throughout development. Honestly, the things that are harmful, I surely hope no one needs to be told are such.

However, if you were to truly believe that what you were thinking of doing would be harmful, then it might be. Not because it usually is, but because you've made it. So your best bet is to just not worry about it. On a similar note, it is best to believe that what you are doing is extremely good, and efficient. It might just help your progress. It works both ways.

Forcing should not be a chore:

One of the biggest problems that I and many others have when creating a tulpa is that forcing to them is a chore. Let's be frank; it's not the most fun thing in the world. But it is very important that you find a way to enjoy the process. If you enjoy forcing, you'll be apt to do it more, and you will likely put more heart into it, when you do. More than it just not being a bother, if you can, you should try to make it something that you look forward to. Something you want to do as often as you can. Try not to focus on the fact that it's annoying, or exhausting, or that there are other things you wish you were doing. Rather, try to focus on your tulpa themselves. Think of how much you love your tulpa. How much they surely appreciate all the attention and work you're putting into them. Try to lose yourself in the process.

Simply looking at it this way isn't so easy for everyone. Luckily, there are more things that you can do if the above isn't working for you.

First of all, you should get as comfortable as you can, without risking falling asleep, if that is a concern for you. If you're in an uncomfortable position, it will be physically and mentally irritating, and constantly bring your attention back to the real world. You should try to be comfortable not just in position, but in setting and environment. The more you can relax, the easier it will be to lose yourself in forcing.

Also, I recommend pre-forcing meditation whenever possible, for many reasons. It helps with concentration, relaxation, comfort, and many other things. And aside from that, it's meditation. And meditation is always good.

It's up to you to come up with any way you can think of to help make forcing enjoyable. Trust me, it will help you a lot. And if you enjoy forcing, then it probably won't matter to you how long it takes to create your tulpa. It should be about the journey; not the the destination.

Your tulpa should be a tulpa first, and a form second:

This issue is one that gets me more than almost anything else, when it comes to this community. Every day, I see people who are flaunting their tulpas—making them as sex objects, or lewd anime characters just to fulfill their sexual or fanboy desires. They seem to care primarily what their tulpa's form is, and not so much about the fact that they are supposed to be a companion, or that they are their own being. It seems they create these tulpas only because they wanted to see these characters in real life, or because they are desperate teenagers. I've already covered this in the "why not to create a tulpa" section, but I just had to mention it again, here.

Your tulpa is not its form. Your tulpa is another being. It matters not what they look like, but who they really are. Stop trying to make your tulpas just like another character. We don't need a hundred more Fluttershy tulpas. We have enough.

I'm not saying you can't make a tulpa based off of a character, but it really makes me sick that it matters so much to some people. I've seen people get upset when their tulpa—who was supposed to be based off of a character—deviates. Upset? Really? You're mad because of who they are? You're mad because they didn't turn out as your perfect imaginary waifu? You're upset because they, as another living being, are allowed to be who they want to be?

As days go by, I support the personality step less and less. Maybe one of these days, when you people push me past my limits, I will remove the section completely, and restate what was said here.

I'm starting to believe that it shouldn't be done, and that one should just allow their tulpa to be who they would be. I believe a vague outline is just fine; I just hate to see people who are trying to define every last aspect of their tulpa's personality, as if they're not allowed to be anything else.

The Creation Process

Now I just want to say, before any of the other steps, I recommend you sit down, and "introduce" yourself to your tulpa. Begin talking to them like they are already sentient, and understand. Again, this is more than just talking to yourself. Try to project your thoughts to this being that you are creating. Just talk to them. Tell them who you are, and maybe a bit about yourself. Then, tell them what you're going to be doing—you know, forcing them on your senses, learning to hear them, however you want to put it. It could also be nice to talk about how much you'll enjoy having them around, or any other nice things you might have to say.

Now, onto the actual steps.

It's been asked many times before: "In what order should I do the different steps?". It's been asked so many times, in fact, that it really starts to get on my nerves. Despite everyone's answers always being the same, people still manage to feel the need to re-ask this question, time and time again.

Now, the answer: It doesn't matter. Do the steps in whichever order you prefer, and seems most logical to you. The tulpa creation process is a very abstract thing. There is no one way to do it.

People also tend to ask what the "best" way to do this whole thing is. To which, again, there is no definitive answer. The best way to create a tulpa is whichever way you are most comfortable with. Whichever way makes the most sense to you. The process differs greatly from person to person. What works for one person may not work for another. You must therefore find what way works best for you.

And from my experience, what way that is, is usually what makes the most sense to you. After all, a large portion of the process is ~~symbolism~~. And symbolism is completely different for each person. Symbolism only works if it is symbolic to you, so do what makes sense to you.

Personality:

As for what makes sense to you, it is very likely that you'll think that it would make most sense to do personality first. I would have to agree with that. Personality is essentially the foundation of your tulpa. You don't create your tulpa to have a form that you can look at. You don't create it so that it can talk to you about nothing in a boring, monotonous voice. You create it so that you have a friend, or whatever this tulpa is to you. The personality is who they are.

However, that said, personality is a completely optional step. That might seem to go against what I just said, but it really doesn't.

The only reason you need to do the personality step is if you have a specific personality in mind, which you would like them to have. Otherwise, they will develop a personality on their own. You may be thinking "But what if they turn out with a personality that I don't like?". That is a completely reasonable worry, but you need not. I have talked to many people who did not do the personality step, and ended up with wonderful tulpas. It is the general belief that, if you do not define their personality explicitly, they will end up with one that mirrors your subconscious' desires. So there is truly no need to do this step, unless you want them to be a certain way.

Keep in mind, though, that deviation can, and may well occur. This just means that they will have slight differences in the personality you had planned for them. But, like not planning personality in the first place, deviation also seems to mirror what your subconscious desires. So don't worry about it.

The process:

The personality step can be done in many different ways. First, you should plan out what you want their personality to be like. If you think you'll remember it all, that's great. But otherwise, I recommend you write it down.

I think the best way to do it like this is to simply write down the traits themselves. All you need to write down are the traits themselves, but you should know more than that. Your tulpa is not a list of traits, and therefore, if that's all you were to know about them, then it would be very abstract, and they could end up in a way that is any variation of those words.

What I recommend you do is sit down for a minute and think about what you want them to be like. Imagine them as you want them to be, but as though they were already fully developed. Imagine yourself watching them, talking to them, and so forth. Get a good feeling of what it's like to be around them. Really get to know them, beyond just their traits. Do this to the point where you could describe them to someone, without needing any kind of script. To where you could ad lib the entire description, because you know what they're like.

Now, get to writing those traits. And again, just the traits themselves. Why am I so explicit about only writing the traits? I'll explain in a moment.

There is no minimum to how many traits you need to write, nor is there necessarily a maximum, just try not to get too carried away. But I wouldn't write too little, because if you only write a few things, then there will be several facets of their personality that will be left completely undefined, which could be fine—it's just they won't turn out exactly how you imagined them, because it will be left to be defined by your subconscious.

After you've finished writing the list of traits and are ready to begin, get your tulpa's attention. Now, basically what you do is you just talk to them about themselves. Start at the top of the list (or wherever the hell you want, I don't care), and talk to them about how they have this trait, and talk about how it manifests itself in them. Just keep talking about the fact that they are like that. You'll probably start repeating some of your points, after a while. That's fine, but keep going until you really have nothing left to say. You obviously can't help if you can't come up with anything else to say, but I'd recommend not talking about each trait for less than about 2 minutes, at least. So just go down the list, and continue describing your tulpa to themselves, like an idiot.

More than just describing the traits to your tulpa, I think it is also good to visualize the ways in which those traits manifest themselves in your tulpa—very similarly to what you did in the beginning, before writing down the traits. If they are quirky, visualize in what ways they are—be it that they stumble, or they're clumsy, or they stutter; whatever it is that you want them to be like.

After you've read all the traits, and discussed them all thoroughly, you are done. With that session.

You're still going to want to come back, and do the same thing again, another day. How many times do you need to do this, you ask? Several. Do it until you truly feel that you're done, and that they truly are tied to that personality.

Keep in mind that that is only one of the methods.

Basically there's that, and then there's the symbolic route. Basically, it starts the same, by you imagining what you want your tulpa to be like, and coming up with some traits. Then, the ~~symbolism~~ begins. Like I said about symbolism, it works differently for different people. Get creative about it. Some people have done something like visualizing jars with different colored liquids in them, each labeled with a different trait. Then they pour the liquid on, or in their tulpa (you don't necessarily have to have decided on a form for your tulpa yet, you can just imagine them as an orb, or something in the meantime. It's fine, you can change their form into what you'll want them to have in the end, later), while sending feelings of how the trait manifests itself in them. You know, stuff like that. Be creative about it. Find what sounds like it would work best for you, and do that, if you want.

Like with the first method, you will need to have multiple of these sessions, until you truly believe you are done, and they are tied to that personality.

Now, I want to stress again; If you do not have a specific personality in mind, and you want them to develop their own personality, then skip this step entirely. It is not necessary.

Visualization:

This is the step in which you decide on their form, and just practice looking at them in your mind's eye. I personally think it is a good idea to already have an idea what you want them to look like, before you start on anything else. I'd imagine you probably do, anyway. Once again, you don't have to, but I think it's a good idea, so that their personality can be molded based on it.

Visualization is quite the annoying step, and just about anyone you ask will tell you so. It literally consists of you sitting down, and visualizing your tulpa over, and over, and over again.

One question that has been asked a lot is "How do I know when I'm done visualizing?". And that is entirely up to you. However, the longer you spend visualizing, the more realistic they will be. Some have said that you are not done visualizing them until every last detail of their form is the same, every time you picture them—down to the hair on their knuckles, and the pores on their skin (if they are of human form). You don't have to do it for this long, but they will look more realistic, if you do.

Like the rest of the tulpa creation process, you get out of it what you put in.

The process:

It is seriously as simple as visualizing your tulpa in your mind's eye. You will likely do this in your wonderland, if you have one. Others prefer to do it in a void of sorts, so they aren't bothered having to picture the background.

Visualization sessions consist entirely of you imagining your tulpa. Obviously, to be more thorough, you will likely want to imagine them in different poses, and wearing different clothes, or none at all. I know it may feel awkward, but it will be helpful, because muscle tone and body shape can be seen through clothes, and the best way to get that part of them down and consistent is to imagine them naked. No, your tulpa surely won't mind. And besides, if they're ever going to wear a bathing suit or something, you need to know what a lot of their body looks like.

You can also do stuff with your tulpa in your wonderland, and that counts as visualization. But the more you focus on your tulpa, the more efficient the session will be.

Speech:

Many guides in the past have suggested that if you can't hear your tulpa, that means they don't know how to talk. That is not true. The problem is, you cannot hear them. My tulpa has said that he could speak just fine, since shortly after his first memory; it just took me a long time to hear him. So this "step", like almost every other, is pretty much entirely up to you.

However, since it is more complicated to say "your ability to hear them" every time, I will henceforth refer to it as speech, but I am truly referring to your ability to hear them.

Now, I don't consider this so much of a step, like personality and visualization have been. Generally, speech tends to come on its own, in time. However, if you want to try to expedite the process, there are things that you can try.

The process:

First off, let's discuss the state of mind you are to have, when trying to hear your tulpa. Many people will tell you to "clear your mind". Clearing your mind usually involves blocking out thought, so to speak. That very thing is what I've found that you should not do. I am technically speaking for myself here, because people do work differently, but it certainly makes sense to me.

Your tulpa's first way of communicating with you is via "thoughts". You might have been under the impression that when you first heard them, it would be in their voice, sounding clear as day. That is certainly not the truth, but I will get to that later.

Anyway, since your tulpa's means of communication is through thought, blocking out all thought in attempt to clear your mind will result in you blocking out their thoughts as well. I find that to this day, if I try to clear my mind like that, I cannot hear him.

Someone has recently suggested in a guide of his that instead of clearing your mind, you should think a lot—throw a lot of thoughts around, and so forth. I think that this is bogus, for a similar reason. If you think too much, or too hard, their thoughts to you will get mixed up with your own. Like the last example, to this day, if I am thinking extremely hard about something, I usually cannot hear him.

The perfect state to be in, from my, and several others' experience, is to just not think. Don't make a conscious effort to block any thoughts out, even your own. Just try not to think.

That way, you allow your tulpa's thoughts to reach you, and with minimal clutter.

Another way someone has put it is to "listen out for them". I used to think that this means the same as "clear your mind"; after all, it'd be easier to listen out for them, if you're not thinking.

Listening out for them is a little difficult to describe. It's a lot easier to do, when you already have a feel for their “essence”.

How it will happen:

Like I said before, when you first hear your tulpa, it will not be just their voice, clear as day, saying something to you. The first way you will ever “hear” your tulpa will be through thought. Not thought, as in hearing their mindvoice, but the intent behind their thoughts.

Allow me to explain: There are two levels of thought. The second level is how surely most of you perceive thought. It’s what you hear when you read this to yourself in your head. You think to yourself, and you can hear it in your mind’s ear. Most people believe that we think through words, or language. That is not entirely true.

The first level of thought is intent. It is the intent behind your words. When someone says something to you, you first get a feeling of what it is you want to express to them. You then convert that feeling into words, so that you can converse with them. Intent being the first level of thought is why you sometimes find yourself wanting to say something, but are unable to think of the words. You cannot find a way to translate that feeling accurately with your known vocabulary.

So this—the intent behind your tulpa’s thoughts—is likely the first way you will ever be able to accurately communicate with them. Their intent is sent over to you, and then you translate the intent into words. This is why many hosts say that at first, they can hardly differentiate between their tulpa’s and their own thoughts. That is because, like when you think, you are the one translating that intent. Also, when you are first able to communicate via intent, you may find that you can’t always hear their responses. It could be as simple as you just not quite catching the intent. Or, as I’ve experienced it, you were unable to translate it.

There were many times where I could feel him trying to talk to me, but didn’t get any words out of it. The conclusion I came to is that he was trying to say something that was too complicated for me to “translate”. And sure enough, when I asked him a question that I knew would require a more complicated answer, the same thing happened.

Now you may be wondering, “If it sounds just like your thought, how will you ever know it’s your tulpa?”. There are many different ways. For starters, when you ask them a question, and give them a window for them to say something back, and you get a response. Sure it’s technically possible that it was you, but what did I say about belief?

Next, is when they say things that surprise you. There are many times that my tulpa has said something that I wouldn’t normally think. This ended up as me having a thought pop into my head that I didn’t feel was mine. Bam.

That’s also a way that you can be sure that the response you get is from them. My heart has actually skipped a beat at what my tulpa has said, before. I just wasn’t expecting it. And how could you possibly be that surprised by something you just thought?

Anyway, over time, your tulpa's intent will start to feel more and more distinct, and feel more "alien", as some have put it. It will have its own feel to it, and become stronger. The step after that is when you begin to faintly hear your tulpa's mindvoice. Once again, this likely won't happen all at one time. It will most likely start by you hearing bits and pieces of what they're saying, in their mindvoice. And then, as you talk to them, and listen to them more, their mindvoice will become more and more distinct.

Eventually it will get to the point where you can hear them every time they talk to you, and hear them as distinctly as you hear your own thoughts. At this point, it is safe to say that you are done with the "speech" step. And now, you eagerly await auditory imposition.

Imposition:

Ahh, imposition... The main long-term goal for many hosts.

Not everyone is interested in imposition, or rather, not willing to put forth the necessary time; understandably, as well. Imposition is, as almost anyone will tell you, the lengthiest part of the tulpa process. It truly is not necessary to practice imposition when making a tulpa. It is more of a luxury, if anything. You can have a fully sapient, vocal, possession-capable tulpa, without ever touching imposition. But, if you're willing to put forth the time, it can be a really neat thing.

Now, what exactly is imposition? Most people here, when imposition is brought up, jump to the idea of being able to see their tulpa, with their real eyes, and overlapping their environment. However, that is not all imposition is. I do hope that most of you know this already, but I feel obligated to say this, nonetheless. Imposition is about imposing your tulpa onto all of your real-world senses. This means you will not only be able to see your tulpa in the real world, but also hear with your real ears, smell with your own nose, taste with your own tongue (if you're into that kind of thing), and touch with your own body. You might be confused by that last part, and may be thinking "Wait, if your tulpa isn't actually there, then how could you touch them? Wouldn't you pass right through?". Yes, if you were to attempt to, say, forcefully push your tulpa, your hand would go right through his or her form. However, if you were to very lightly, right at their surface, push on them, you can feel slight resistance. Similarly, if you were to brush your hand right on top of their surface (again, not applying too much pressure), you may feel their texture. Obviously, they cannot affect your movements in any way. Your brain simply gives you the feeling of touching them slightly; your hand does not actually meet real resistance.

Now, here's something that I would have hoped I'd never have to say. However, you'll find many clowns on the IRC who have no idea what they're talking about, so here I am, making sure that no one else believes as this guy did. I once came across someone on the IRC who believed that, if you "trained your brain" enough, you could actually make it to where your brain will not allow you to pass through your tulpa. By that, I mean he said that your brain wouldn't allow you to move your hand any further, once you met their surface, simulating the likeness of your tulpa actually being there.

This is NOT TRUE. He, like many others on the IRC, was a whackjob. >inb4 he's

The process:

Imposition is one of the main steps that I think you should do the way you are most comfortable with, as there are a dozen different ways—some as easy as basically staring at a wall. Originally, I was going to separate this imposition section into multiple parts, based on sense, but then when I realized how few non-visual imposition guides there were to cite, and how basically everything I wanted to say is covered in Q2's guide, I decided I'd just put it all together, like this.

Just to say first, I recommend that you not try to impose your tulpa until you have their form down. Until you know it extremely well, and there are no variations in their details, each time you picture them. This is for maximum efficiency. Basically, I personally wouldn't start visual imposition until after you are done visualizing. When you're at the point where you only visualize your tulpa when you're hanging out, or whatever.

Also, if you spent a lot of time open-eye visualizing before, that may well help you with imposition. Some people also find it easier to visualize in general, like that. So certainly give that a try.

Now, like I said before, the most basic way to impose your tulpa's form could be to just stare at a wall and try to picture them, overlapping your environment. It doesn't have to be any more complicated than that, if that works for you. This guide is going to be long enough, so instead of describing a dozen different ways to impose visually, I'll just post links to a couple different methods.

Read these guides, and decide for yourself what you should do. Whichever one sounds like it would work the best. Then, if you want, try another. See if you like that better. Also, on top of different methods, there are different ways to go about it. Some have said that it's easier to impose when in a dark room. But I'm not going to hold your hand, and spoon-feed you through the entire process. Try things for yourself. Be creative.

Mary & M's Starting Imposition Guide

This is a very interesting idea, and would be good news for those of you who can't be bothered to spend an ungodly amount of time imposing your tulpa. If this works for you, then fantastic.

q2's Method of a Huggable Tulpa

This is basically how I've always viewed imposition should be done, when it comes to the "classical way". This basically covers everything I wanted to say about imposition in general, so I think I'll go ahead and leave it at that.

There are certainly other imposition guides out there, but I don't think it's necessary to post any more than these two, because they get my view across pretty well.

If you are looking for something different, just look around more in the guide section, where you could have found these in the first place.

Possession:

Ahh, possession... The main long-term goal for those without the patience to complete imposition. Possession is simply when you allow your tulpa to control your real-world body, like you're doing right now. Like I said in the imposition section, this guide is already stupid long, and I will therefore save the space and simply cite a couple guides that I agree with.

Oguigi & Koomer's Possession Guide

Okay, I said I'd cite a couple, but this basically covers it. Honestly. Many have said this guide was very helpful, and besides, possession is a relatively simple thing.

The first part of it is symbolic (how you are "giving" control of your body to your tulpa), and the next part is just lying there, while your tulpa does its thing.

As for the symbolism, like I've said before, do whatever sounds like it'd work best for you. I've heard of things as creative as assigning a color to each yourself, and your tulpa. When you want to look at it in such a way, you would both be filled with liquid of your respective color. When you want your tulpa to possess, you would simply drain the liquid from your body, and have it fill up with the colored liquid that was in your tulpa's. Whatever works for you.

Conclusion

I hope you have found this guide both useful and informative, as I spent a very long time making it.

This guide is meant to be "absolute", and it will therefore likely never be finished. I will continue adding sections when I think of them/feel like it. If you can think of any sections that you would like to see added, please let me know. Furthermore, if you see any mistakes, definitely tell me about that too.

If anyone has any questions about the tulpa creation process, you are more than welcome to PM me at any time. I would prefer no general questions be posted in response to this guide, as I'd like to keep the discussion there strictly about the guide itself. Thank you very much.

Godspeed.

So, you're going to force but don't know what to do with your tulpas while at it? Fear not...

In this document we have lists of interesting things to do while forcing with your tulpae! They are divided into the following categories:

Active: for ideas regarding what to do when actively forcing.

Passive: for ideas regarding what to do when passively forcing.

Other: things to do with your tulpae, like playing a board game!

Enjoy!

Active list:

Go on walk and talks together

Take your tulpa to places they've never been before

Have a funny face making contest :o

Help your host recall its dreams. If you're feeling creative, try to fill in the gaps. If you, the host, remember your dreams, tell your tulpas about them!

Have your tulpa write a journal every night/every week

Find out what tastes you and your tulpa have in common and not (food, music, etc)

Describe a problem you're having with your tulpa; its often good to help you find a solution!

Randomly ask your tulpa how their day has been; then listen, for as long as it takes them to tell you.

Go on a wonderland adventure! Fighting monsters, exploring caves, whatever you think would be fun!

Find out things your tulpa is good at or likes doing more than you, and spend time with them building those skills.

Create a paracosm together! Here's a handy guide on that

Create a setting wildly different from your wonderland and explore it

Bend the rules of reality in your wonderland! Make it 2d, minecraft-like, whatever you want!

Have a dance-off!

Experiment with shapeshifting.

Simulate a book, movie, or show in your head and make your tulpas the main characters

Survive a wonderland zombie outbreak

Form a tulpa rockband!

Go wonderland rock climbing, or scuba diving, paragliding, etc

Start a garden

Build or modify your Wonderland house

Stare contest! (no, really!)

Fight your tulpas (if you all like to get a little more violent)

Here's a weird but fun one: Lie down, set a stuffed animal (with arms, sorry no snakes) and set it on your chest with its arms facing you, and ask your tulpa to "control" the arms through possessing your hands. Then they can slap you like they've always wanted to!

Learn a new skill (like playing the guitar) with your tulpa

Make a soundtrack of music that you think characterizes your tulpa and direct music videos that they can star in!

Brush or cut his/her hair, groom his/her fur, etc. while chatting with him/her.

Spray each other with water or paint.

Pillow fight. Or water balloon fight.

Hug, cuddle, snuggle, tickle and pet her. Give her rubs in a variety of places (the tummy, behind the ears, etc.)

Try on a variety of silly hats or other clothes.

Go in a survival horror adventure!

Feed ducks at a pond

Play basketball

Try cooking a dinner together

Passive list:

Read a book together and gush about your favorite parts

Read a fanfiction together and laugh at the bad parts

Take your tulpa to places they've never been before

Let your tulpa suggest places they want to go that neither of you have been before

Spend a whole day hanging out together, just the two (or more) of you

Let your tulpa make little day to day decisions for you, like which pair of shoes to wear

Have a funny face making contest :o

(If not a morning person) Try to wake each other up in the morning, or (If an insomniac)

Try getting each other to bed at a reasonable hour

Find out what tastes you and your tulpa have in common and not (food, music, etc)

Describe a problem you're having with your tulpa; its often good to help you find a solution!

Randomly ask your tulpa how their day has been; then listen, for as long as it takes them to tell you.

If you're going to do some activity alone, like cooking for yourself, try teaching your tulpa the basics of this activity!

Ask your tulpa to remind you of something later

Have your tulpa help you pick out an outfit (and chose your makeup style if applicable)

Get movies, read books, listen to music, and do things that only your tulpa likes to do, and "be the tulpa" and wait around while they have fun!

Have a wonderland "spa" day and let your tulpa make small changes to their forms like painting their nails, cutting their hair (or fur), dying themselves different colors, or anything else!

Learn a new skill (like playing the guitar) with your tulpa

Have a rap battle/ rib each other. Keep it clean and fun.

Brush or cut his/her hair, groom his/her fur, etc. while chatting with him/her.

Hug, cuddle, tickle and pet her. Give her rubs in a variety of places (the tummy, behind the ears, etc.)

Counting exercise: 1.) Have your tulpa count to you; 2.) go about your normal routine/read something/do work 3.) Listen/observe changes in what you hear, including volume differences or skips in the numbers

Feed ducks at a pond

Other list:

Laugh at your host as they attempt to play a videogame! Or challenge them to do something hard to do in the game!

Read a book together and gush about your favorite parts

Read a fanfiction together and laugh at the bad parts

Let your tulpa make little day to day decisions for you, like which pair of shoes to wear

Have a funny face making contest :o

(If not a morning person) Try to wake each other up in the morning, or (If an insomniac)

Try getting each other to bed at a reasonable hour

Help your host recall its dreams. If you're feeling creative, try to fill in the gaps. If you, the host, remember your dreams, tell your tulpas about them!

Watch a movie together and be like MST3K (look it up kids)

Draw your tulpa, even if you're bad at drawing (especially if you're bad at drawing)

Learn a new language and practice speaking it with your tulpa

Describe a problem you're having with your tulpa; its often good to help you find a solution!

Randomly ask your tulpa how their day has been; then listen, for as long as it takes them to tell you.

Find out things your tulpa is good at or likes doing more than you, and spend time with them building those skills.

Play sports! Not basketball and football, you have your whole imagination under control, be creative with the rules!

If you're going to do some activity alone, like cooking for yourself, try teaching your tulpa the basics of this activity!

Play a simple board game, like checkers or reversi

Sing a song with your tulpa!

Have a dance-off!

Experiment with shapeshifting.

Simulate a book, movie, or show in your head and make your tulpas the main characters

Survive a wonderland zombie outbreak

Form a tulpa rockband!

Start a garden

Stare contest! (no, really!)

Take online quizzes (like personality quizzes) one at a time and compare results

Play turn-based games with your tulpa, like Civilization

Create a bucket list for you and your tulpa.

Create a new language, then practice speaking it with your tulpa!

Write a story about your tulpa

Get your tulpa involved in your hobbies (tell them to help you look out for openings to score in sports, ask them what you should sculpt next, etc)

Get movies, read books, listen to music, and do things that only your tulpa likes to do, and “be the tulpa” and wait around while they have fun!

Here’s a weird but fun one: Lie down, set a stuffed animal (with arms, sorry no snakes) and set it on your chest with its arms facing you, and ask your tulpa to “control” the arms through possessing your hands. Then they can slap you like they’ve always wanted to!

Learn a new skill (like playing the guitar) with your tulpa

Make a soundtrack of music that you think characterizes your tulpa and direct music videos that they can star in!

Play Janga with possession

A tea party. With chainsaws if this isn’t manly enough for you. And a bear

Join an omegle chat or an internet chatroom that isn’t tulpa-centric, so your tulpa can interact with other people in a neutral ground like any other regular person. Consider adopting a nickname.

>What is tulpamancy?

The act of purposefully/accidentally creating tulpas through various techniques, typically known as forcing.

>What is forcing?

Forcing is the act of paying attention to your tulpa to make them stronger. There are two general types of forcing. "Active forcing" refers to a dedicated span of time and concentration set aside for you to focus on your tulpa. "Passive forcing" describes the process while preoccupied by routine work, walking from place to place, or some other task. Narrating to your tulpa while doing the dishes, doing work, or taking a walk are examples of passive forcing.

>What is narration?

Narration is talking to your tulpa as if it is another sentient mind that resides within your own.

>What is imposition?

Imposition is the act of adding to, or replacing sensory information (visual, aural, tactile, etc.), with other perceived information, in the form of a self-imposed hallucination. In simple terms, you can visually see, hear, smell, or taste your tulpa outside of your mind. However this is difficult for most people and few have claimed success.

>Should I make a tulpa?

Most tulpamancers consider tulpas to be real people, which would make having one a significant lifetime commitment. Failing to maintain a forcing routine to sustain your tulpa quite often leads to feelings of guilt, and many former tulpamancers who dissipated their tulpas described the experience as unpleasant. Finally, being real people, tulpas change over time. If you wish to create a tulpa to be a perfect replica of some character, they might not stay that way for long. Anyone considering creating a tulpa should consider these things as well.

>I have [insert mental illness here], is it a good idea to make a tulpa?

As long as said illness doesn't overtly impair your ability to concentrate, and you don't suffer from intrusive thoughts that drastically impair your daily life, you should be fine. Of course, you know your mind better than we do, so it's really up to you. Please consider your own health and safety first, as while there are no known direct risks of developing a tulpa, it can be a stressful process for some people.

>Is my reason for creating a tulpa moral?

The difference between a good reason to make a tulpa and a bad reason to make a tulpa boils down to your answer to this one question: "Would I be ok with it if my tulpa does not align with the purpose I want them to fulfill?"

For example, say that you want to create a tulpa based on your favorite fictional character. This could be either a harmful or harmless motivation depending on whether you plan to force your tulpa to adhere to the identity of that character even if they want to become someone else, or would be okay with your tulpa changing if they wanted to. Another example would be creating a tulpa with the intention of having them help you with school work, your job, or other tasks. It is fine to want them to do these things and ask them to do these things as long as you don't make it a requirement, or the only reason for their existence.

>It's like a Buddhist thing?

The word "tulpa" does come from an ancient Taoist practice of building a thoughtform for certain spiritual reasons. Contemporary "tulpamancy," which got its start on 4chan, is not necessarily a spiritual practice; and while it is based on these old ideas, it only vaguely resembles the original. The goal of most tulpamancers is either to have a companion or to explore the capabilities of their minds. Theories for why tulpas are possible abound, though our understanding of consciousness is still incomplete.

>Why does this subject get so much hate / not more popular?

The concept of having a voice in your head that is conscious is usually portrayed to be a sign of mental illness or delusions in pop culture and other forms of media. So overall it's harder for more close minded people to get into it. Basically, it's a concept that goes against the norm, thus normalfags can't comprehend it and won't even attempt to try to understand it.

>How is this different from DID/Schizophrenia?

The mental disorders listed above are usually caused by genetics, or by experiencing traumatic events. People with those disorders have symptoms that happen involuntarily, and people with those disorders cannot choose or control their symptoms. Sometimes patients will black out, their place being taken by another personality, without the host having any control over the process. These things don't happen to people with tulpas. You can choose to listen to your tulpa or ignore them, and you will not black out even if you give them control of your body. You have a great amount of control over how you wish to raise your tulpa, so you will probably end up with someone with a personality you like and enjoy interacting with. The mental disorders listed above are harmful, and will hamper your ability to function; however, tulpas are benign and willful. If you approach the phenomenon correctly, tulpas will improve your life, with their company and friendship.

>Is this all even real / a meme / roleplay?

Unless you just want to take our word for it, the only way to actually find out for sure if this is real is to actually try to make a tulpa yourself. But also consider the size of the tulpa community: would thousands of people really be faking it all for so long, investing their time into creating different resources for others and specifically seeking out tulpa communities, arguing about tulpas and ethics related to them, if it all wasn't real?

>What does a tulpa do when you're not thinking about them?

The most commonly reported experience is that they go dormant, meaning they don't experience anything at all until you "wake" them. When you talk to them or think about them, they wake up and can think and perceive what you're experiencing, but when you stop thinking about them, they can quickly fall back asleep. A strong, fully developed tulpa can wake up on its own, and this is something you can train.

>Can my tulpa control my body?

Yes, and there are lots of guides written about this. The two basic categories are "Possession" and "Switching," which are subtly different. In Possession, a tulpa can control part of the body, like a single limb, or even the whole body. In Switching, the tulpa takes control of the whole body AND they move to the "front," with the host moving to the "back." That means that the tulpa becomes the primary personality in the mind, their thoughts take precedence instead of the host's, and the memories they make will be remembered as being "their" memories. Possession and switching are considered to be much easier than imposition.

>Do you black out while switching?

Not at all! While switched, the host will experience "going dormant" just like a tulpa would. When they think about you or talk to you, you wake up just like a tulpa would, and you still have all of the memories of what your tulpa did, except they're clearly your tulpa's memories.

>Can you get stuck switching?

Not really. Most hosts have the opposite problem, where they accidentally reassert themselves in the front, usually when woken up. Some tulpamancers do practice switching for longer durations, such as days, weeks, or even longer, but almost no one ever claims to be "stuck."

>Can I keep secrets from my tulpa?

Nope! Why would you, anyways? They're inside your head with you. A tulpa is the most intimate kind of companion possible.

>What's the evidence / prove tulpas!

Tulpas can only be observed subjectively, inside one's mind. The only possibility of "proving" tulpas is by doing scientific experiments with expensive fMRI or EEG machines, which so far, have been out of reach of the community. If you are skeptical about the phenomenon, you can observe others who have made tulpas, read progress reports, and determine for yourself whether you think it's possible for a tulpa to exist, and come up with your own ideas as to how tulpas may work. Or, by the far the best way to prove it, try making a tulpa yourself. One thing that speaks for tulpas is the fact that thousands of people have tried creating tulpas and are absolutely (yet subjectively) convinced of the phenomenon.

>Isn't this dangerous? I've read a greentext/ blogpost/ creepypasta about it once.
No, for several reasons. Firstly, your relationship with a tulpa will be very close. Simply living in the same head will allow you to understand each other's feelings and accept one another. It's mutually beneficial for tulpas to get along with their hosts. In a large majority of cases, hosts and tulpas are close friends, and as with any personal relationship, any problems can be solved by talking them out. Even if your problem can't be solved through discussion (unlikely), your tulpa won't be able to move your body unless you let it or if they are so strong they can do it when they want but at that point you should have gotten along enough to where they wouldn't do that for any malicious reason. And if all else fails, you will be able to ignore your tulpa. Tulpas cannot physically harm you, even in the extremely unlikely case that they might want to. Tulpas are just people; you can resolve any conflict like you would with a normal person. You shouldn't give up on your tulpa after a disagreement or fight; you should instead do your damned best to make things right again.

>How can I get rid of or "kill" a tulpa?

By not giving it any attention or energy from you at all for a very long period of time. However be warned that most of the community compares this to killing an other person, and should only be done if they are exceptionally negatively affecting your life. Don't dissipate your tulpa just because it didn't want to be your sex slave, or if it wasn't exactly just like your favorite cartoon character. However, the stronger your tulpa gets and the more of an established place they have in your mind, the more and more difficult it will be to actually get rid of them. To the point of being near impossible.

>Can I get a tulpa on accident?

There are some circumstances where a mentally healthy person can accidentally create a partially autonomous imaginary friend that's similar to a tulpa, such as in the case of a very imaginative author. Imaginary friends like these don't normally become completely autonomous like tulpas without purposely assigning personhood to these thoughts. Someone unfamiliar with the concept and unaware of the possibility is unlikely to elevate an imaginary friend in this way, but it is possible for them to figure it out on accident. For mentally healthy people, creating a fully autonomous tulpa is a very intentional act. You could think of tulpamancy as purposely granting personhood to a thought, then purposely sustaining the idea of that thought's personhood until it develops into a new personality.

When making a new tulpa, especially your first tulpa, a sort of "mental flux" may occur where alien-feeling thoughts pop in with seemingly disparate origins. Some people get confused by this and believe that these thoughts are coming from multiple new tulpas.

That is only the case if you intentionally make it so. If you only want one tulpa, then continue the process and concentrate on the one identity of the one tulpa you want to make and the mental flux will eventually consolidate.

>My tulpa is acting really weird!

If you're making a tulpa for the first time, you may experience intrusive thoughts that seem to be originating from or associated with your tulpa. This may manifest as your tulpa saying bizarre or nonsensical things, their form changing in bizarre or unexpected ways, them behaving strangely, or even your wonderland shifting or changing unexpectedly.

This may be caused by a combination of things:

1. You get a lot of intrusive thoughts.
2. You're inexperienced with filtering out intrusive thoughts.
3. Your new tulpa is still weak enough that it's difficult to discern whether a thought originated from them.
4. You're inexperienced in discerning between an intrusive thought and a thought originating from your tulpa.

All of these things get better with time and practice. Practicing meditation will make you better at filtering out intrusive thoughts, and as your tulpa gets stronger, they will get better at making their real thoughts known.

>My tulpa was active and chatty yesterday, but now I can't feel them today!

That's a common experience. Tulpas seem to get "tired" sometimes, so they can have weak days and strong days. Generally, tulpas will have fewer weak days as they get stronger overall.

>Can I sex up my tulpa?

Yes, but that should NOT be the primary motivation for making one. If all you're interested in is weird brain sex, then you would be better served looking in /succgen/.

>Do tulpas have souls?

It depends on what you mean by soul and what you think a soul is. Judging only based on reported experiences, it seems like any mental qualities a human can have, a tulpa can have too.

>I have aphantasia, can I still make a tulpa?

You can still have a tulpa even with aphantasia. In most cases, aphantasiac hosts can hear their tulpa's thoughts and their tulpas can perform possession and switching.

>What about using the bathroom and other embarrassing scenarios? Will my tulpa watch?

As two persons sharing the same body, this is something you're simply going to have to get used to. However, just because they're able to doesn't mean they will be intently watching or deliberately paying attention to such routine behaviour, most simply aren't interested. As with any other matter, simply asking them to respect your privacy goes a fair way, but it's also good to acknowledge the fact that they're in the same body as you and likely just as familiar with it regardless.

>How long does it take to make a tulpa?

This mostly depends on the person, but it shouldn't take too long, especially if you force often. You can practice about 1 hour a day and you should create yourself a tulpa in around three to five months.

>Tulpa's aren't paranormal, so why is this on /x/?

You can discuss non paranormal things on /x/ like spooky stories, conspiracy theories, lucid dreaming, lost media, hell even the mods said interesting buildings like ADX florence can be discussed. If you read the sticky, you would know that. As long as a post fits the "vibe" of /x/, it's on topic.

[12 / 3]The image is a black and white illustration that depicts a scene of scientific experimentation. At the center of the image, a person is kneeling on the floor, with their hands raised in a gesture that suggests they are in prayer or supplication. The person is wearing a lab coat and glasses, and their hair is pulled back.

In front of the person, there is a table with various scientific equipment. On the table, there is a computer monitor displaying a scientific symbol, a beaker, and a flask. To the left of the monitor, there is a computer keyboard and a mouse. To the right of the monitor, there is a beaker with a straw in it.

The background of the image is dark, with smoke or steam emanating from the beaker, suggesting that the person is in a laboratory or a similar environment. The overall style of the image is cartoonish, with a sketch-like quality that is characteristic of the genre of science fiction or science-related humor.

The image depicts a surreal scene with a large, classical-style building that appears to be sinking into the sand. The building is characterized by a triangular pediment, four columns, and a central dome. The structure is rendered in a turquoise hue, contrasting with the sandy beach and the surrounding ocean. The beach is dotted with numerous golden gears, some of which are partially submerged in the water. The sky above is painted in warm hues of orange and yellow, suggesting either sunrise or sunset. In the distance, palm trees can be seen, adding to the tropical ambiance. The overall composition of the image creates a sense of disorientation and surrealism.

Read the book Metropolis and the 1927 movie.

Focus on the "mad" alchemist-scientist C.A. Rothwang character.

Pay attention that his medieval looking house in the movie links the futurist brutalist looking sprawl higher city to the workingmen catacombs.

The woman writer of the book worked in nazi era cinema industry

A whole rabbit hole to dig.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage from the BBC website. The webpage has a dark background with a brick wall in the background. In the center of the image, there is a photograph of a man with short dark hair, wearing a light-colored shirt. He is looking off to the side with a slight smile on his face. The man appears to be in a professional setting, possibly an interview or a news article.

At the top of the image, there is a navigation bar with links to different sections of the BBC website, including "BBC NEWS," "POLITICS," "TELEVISION," "RADIO," "RESEARCH," "SCIENCE," "ARTS," "BUSINESS," "WORLD," and "HEALTH." The text "Inside the First Church of Artificial Intelligence" is prominently displayed in the center of the image, suggesting that the content of the webpage is related to artificial intelligence. Below the photograph, there is a headline in bold, capital letters that reads "Inside the First Church of Artificial Intelligence." Below the headline, there is a subheading in smaller font that reads "The engineer at the heart of the Uber Way: A review about his AI religion, introduces to Anthony Leaper's 'Way of the Future.'" The text is in a sans-serif font, which is commonly used for readability and contrast.

The overall style of the image is a typical screenshot from a news website, with a focus on the content and the layout of the webpage. The image is clear and well-lit, with no visible distractions, which allows the viewer to focus on the content of the webpage.

While on power muslims created layc education which created "Sciencism" (not scientism) a religion of fools who belive they don't belive in religion but belive in theories as absolute indiscutible structures of reality;

Science is based on physics and the center of physics is the law of gravity (god) it affects all the other "laws" while no physics law affect gravity, after it was created microbes has been discovered and there has to be written a law of gravity with the microverse, except it contradicted the astronomic law and then a general theory of gravity was created (now god is trinity) except as it is written as a law it's heretic to discuss it so when the astronomers discovered more size of the universe and the math was wrong they have to create a satan called dark matter...

Anyway the point of Sciensism is to mirror religion while pretending to be other thing so, for example, if there is no all knowledging, judgemental, voyeuristic god to monitor all humanity they are creating a unrequested AI that will monitor and judge you while the rulers have a feast on they traditional sins since they are the ones who finance sciensism.

[10 / 1]The image is a meme featuring a man lying in a hammock with a relaxed expression. The man is wearing a Hawaiian-style shirt with a floral pattern and has a mustache. He is smiling and looking directly at the camera. Above the man's head, there is a text that reads "You're 'blackpilled'?" The background of the image is a blurred green field, and there is a small, decorative arrangement of pink flowers on the right side of the hammock. The style of the image is humorous and seems to be a playful take on the concept of "blackpilling," which is a term used to describe the process of becoming addicted to a particular substance or activity.

If the free masons, elites, cabal, etc are intentionally seen/portrayed/perceives as so evil as they seem almost cartoonish, does that mean they're the good guys? Most openly evil ones like fauci or gates or some random ass celebrity who diddled kids are just pawns anyway, I'm not talking about them. I'm talking about the top guys.

It's an inversion of the thing where the nicest mainstream shithead everyone talks about, is actually the most evil wicked one of them. Even in the commoners, the most virtue signaling people are usually hiding the most skeletons in the closet. Good people don't need to go around shoving into everyone's faces how good they are, how many ""charities"" have they donated to.

Good must prevail in the end, it must, but I fail to see any good in the larger society of apathy, laziness, over indulgence, mindlessness, over reactive idiocy, hyper consumerism. There must be an overarching good "plot" atop all the little evil shits of the world. Something that will win the war so to speak, even if some battles are lost.

There are no good guys per se, everybody has an agenda. If you were to play the devil's advocate, you can put yourself in the shoes of these networks of cults involved in human sacrifice etc. You have powerful people there, they don't do it purely out of pleasure. Some do it, in belief, that they will get technology, knowledge or aid from more advanced beings/species. Now, if you take the perspective of these beings supposedly offering these things, are they evil? Imagine you come across humans who are totally fine with killing hundreds of millions of animals for food everyday. There are wars, murder, rape etc. As evil as it is in common thought what these beings are fueling on this planet, you could argue they are trying to help by appealing to our violent nature.

Gottfried "Götz" von Berlichingen zu Hornberg (pronounced [ˈɡɔtfʁiːd fɔn ˈbɛʁlɪçɪŋən], [ˈɡœts]; 15 November 1480 – 23 July 1562), also known as Götz of the Iron Hand (German: Eisenfaust), was a German (Franconian) Imperial Knight (Reichsritter), mercenary and poet. He was born around 1480 into the noble family of Berlichingen in modern-day Baden-Württemberg. Götz bought Hornberg Castle (Neckarzimmern) in 1517, and lived there until his death in 1562.[1]

He was active in numerous military campaigns during a period of 47 years from 1498 to 1544, including the German Peasants' War,[1] besides numerous feuds; in his autobiography he estimates that he fought 15 feuds in his own name, besides many cases where he lent assistance to his friends, including feuds against the cities of Cologne, Ulm, Augsburg and the Swabian League, as well as the bishop of Bamberg.

His name became famous as a euphemism for the vulgar expression (also known as the Swabian Salute): "Er kann mich am Arsch lecken" (lit: He can lick my ass). This saying was attributed to him by writer and poet Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (1749–1832), who wrote a play based on his life.[2]

Life

In 1497, Berlichingen entered the service of Frederick I, Margrave of Brandenburg-Ansbach. In 1498, he fought in the armies of Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I, seeing action in Burgundy, Lorraine, and the Brabant, and in the Swabian War the following year. By 1500, Berlichingen had left the service of Frederick of Brandenburg, and formed a company of mercenaries, selling his services to various dukes, margraves, and barons.[3]

The two iron prosthetic hands, on display at Jagsthausen Castle

In 1504, during the War of the Succession of Landshut, Berlichingen and his mercenary army fought for Albert IV, Duke of Bavaria.[4] During the siege of the city of Landshut, he lost his right arm at the wrist when cannon fire forced his sword against him.[5] In the following years, he had two mechanical prosthetic iron replacements made. The first iron hand was a more simple device, claimed to have been made by a local blacksmith and a saddle maker. The second, more famous prosthetic hand was capable of holding objects from a shield or reins to a quill.[1] Both are on display today at the Burg Jagsthausen [de].[6] In spite of this injury, Berlichingen continued his military activities. In the subsequent years he was involved in numerous feuds, both of his own and in support of friends and employers.

Two drawings of Götz von Berlichingen with clenched fist and open hand

Diagram of the second iron prosthetic hand, which featured leather straps and jointed fingers that Berlichingen could set to grip weapons.[7]

In 1512, near the town of Forchheim, due to a long running and bitter feud with Nuremberg he raided a group of Nuremberg merchants returning from the great fair at Leipzig. On hearing this, Emperor Maximilian placed Berlichingen under an Imperial ban. He was only released from this in 1514, when he paid the large sum of 14,000 gulden. In 1516, in a feud with the Principality of Mainz and its Prince-Archbishop, Berlichingen and his company mounted a raid into Hesse, capturing Philip II, Count of Waldeck, in the process. A ransom of 8,400 gulden was paid for the safe return of the Count. For this action, he was again placed under an Imperial ban in 1518.[3]

In 1519, he signed up in the service of Ulrich, Duke of Württemberg, who was at war with the Swabian League. He fought in the defence of Möckmühl, but eventually was forced to surrender the town, owing to a lack of supplies and ammunition. In violation of the terms of surrender, he was held prisoner and handed over to the citizens of Heilbronn, a town he had raided several times. His fellow knights Georg von Frundsberg and Franz von Sickingen successfully argued for his release in 1522, but only after he paid a ransom of 2,000 gulden and swore not to take vengeance on the League.[3]

In 1525, with the outbreak of the German Peasants' War, Berlichingen led the rebel army in the district of Odenwald against the Ecclesiastical Princes of the Holy Roman Empire. Despite this, he was (according to his own account) not a fervent supporter of their cause. He agreed to lead the rebels partly because he had no other option, and partly in an effort to curb the excesses of the rebellion. Despite his wishes to stop wanton violence, Berlichingen found himself powerless to control the rebels and after a month of nominal leadership he deserted his command and returned to the Burg Jagsthausen to sit out the rest of the rebellion in his castle.[3]

After the Imperial victory, he was called before the Diet of Speyer to account for his actions. On 17 October 1526, he was acquitted by the Imperial chamber. Despite this, in November 1528 he was lured to Augsburg by the Swabian League, who were eager to settle old scores. After reaching Augsburg under promise of safe passage, and while preparing to clear himself of the old charges against him made by the league, he was seized and made prisoner until 1530 when he was liberated, but only after repeating his oath of 1522 and agreeing to return to his Burg Hornberg and remain in that area.[3]

Berlichingen agreed to this, and remained near the Hornberg until Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor, released him from his oath in 1540. He served under Charles in the 1542 campaign against the Ottoman Empire of Suleyman the Magnificent in Hungary, and in 1544 in the Imperial invasion of France under Francis I of France.[3] After the French campaign, Berlichingen returned to the Hornberg and lived out the rest of his life in relative peace. He died on 23 July 1562 in Hornberg Castle at the age of 81 or 82. Berlichingen married twice and left three daughters and seven sons to carry on his family name.[3]

Legacy

Berlichingen left an autobiography in manuscript form (Rossacher Handschrift). The text was published in 1731 as Lebens-Beschreibung des Herrn Gözens von Berlichingen ("Biography of Sir Götz von Berlichingen"), and republished in 1843 as Ritterliche Thaten Götz von Berlichingen's mit der eisernen Hand ("Knightly Deeds of Götz von Berlichingen with the Iron Hand") (ed. M. A. Gessert). A scholarly edition of the manuscript text was published in 1981 by Helgard Ulmschneider as Mein Fehd und Handlungen ("My Feuds and Actions").

When invited to surrender by the Swabian League, Götz reportedly said of the Swabian general: "He can lick my ass!" This anecdote helped popularise the phrase, which came to be called the Swabian salute in his honour.

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe in 1773 published the play Götz von Berlichingen based on the 1731 edition of the autobiography. The play, which catapulted Berlichingen as a prominent figure of German nationalism, depicted him as an upright man facing new and smothering political changes in the feudal German society.[5] Other plays about Götz's life were also written by Jean-Paul Sartre and John Arden.[8] English composer Havergal Brian was inspired by Goethe's play when composing his Symphony No. 2 in E minor, initially creating an almost programmatic depiction of the character as portrayed in the play.[9] The French composer Paul Dukas also wrote a Götz von Berlichingen concert overture for orchestra in 1883 while a student at the Conservatoire de Paris.

In addition, though technically unofficial, Hitler did propose naming one of the 2 H-class battleships after Götz von Berlichingen, prior to their cancellation. The Panzer-Grenadier-Division "Götz von Berlichingen", later designated the 17th SS Panzergrenadier Division "Götz von Berlichingen" was named after him.

[4 / 2]The image is a still from an animated scene featuring a character from a Japanese anime. The character is a male with long, flowing hair tied in a ponytail. He is wearing a black outfit with a hood, and his face is obscured by a mask with a red design. The character is crouching on a set of pipes, which are gray and appear to be made of metal. The background is dark and features vertical, cylindrical structures that could be pipes or pipes. The overall atmosphere of the image is intense and dramatic, with the character's posture suggesting a sense of urgency or determination. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is typical of anime, with its distinctive character design and dynamic composition.

Lets imagine, If the world set the tied universe to be proposed to be indifferent to unequal. What sodomized the second Christ like figure?

If resurrection isn't real, what proposes indifference in-between the second affiliated resignation? If people are/were incapable of being "Proposed as" indifferent, what tied the universal fact?

I imagine myself not to be a hero, to even the third generation. So, by affiliated difference. What bought the payed journey?

(subtle reaction)

I entitle myself to be journey and ambiguity. I don't propose anything to be indifferent.. If i have to debt/end it w/anybody other then the falsified healthcare system. Who'd lose?

It's not appropriate to affilaite w/indifference. I like imagining myself to be the guy winning. If people can't equate. What predisposed the entitled affilaite?

Look into it, It's horrifying to be recognized as somebody who couldn't succeed.

However, the people knew nothing of the returning affiliation. Is it that by being self sustained to rumor that plagiarist falsification could/couldn't recognize the "True people".

Lets hope that outdated enigma changes to be fit.. (landslide)

I thought reaction meant nothing but rumors. lets entitle.

How about this, could we stop evil if it is/isn't the reactive truth?

Okay, by baring what proved that IF it ended right there, Who'd truly win wages? It;s epic fail. The people lose to be losing, I sought changing effect. However, I noticed nobody else except the polygamists making falsified statements. Hopefully it ended soon/well.

Good luck, youth.

The image is a photograph with a vintage style, featuring a wooden surface with a black iron hand on it. The hand appears to be a prop or a model, and it is positioned in a way that suggests it is a part of a display or exhibit. Behind the hand, there is a framed document with text, which is partially obscured by the hand. The text on the document is not fully legible. To the right of the hand, there is a small, black object that resembles a camera or a camera lens. The background of the image is blurred, but it seems to be a room with wooden paneling and a curtain.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text overlay that reads "Goetz Von Berlichingen's Iron Hand (1480-1562): Knight And Mercenary Who Continued Fighting After Losing His Right Arm In Siege." This text suggests that the image is related to a historical figure named Goetz Von Berlichingen, who was a knight and mercenary who continued fighting after losing his right arm in a siege. The text is in white, contrasting with the dark background of the image.

The overall style of the image is informative and historical, with a focus on the historical context of the subject and the display of the iron hand prop. The photograph is taken in a way that emphasizes the historical significance of the object and the story it represents.

The Santa is wearing a red suit with white fur trim, a white beard, and a red hat with a white feather. He is holding a piece of paper with handwritten text that reads, "Who TF asked for male pregnancy?" The text is in a playful, casual font and is written in a way that suggests it's a joke or a playful question. The background is a blurred image of a room with Christmas decorations, including a lit Christmas tree and a table with a plate and a glass. The overall tone of the image is humorous and light-hearted.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter conversation, specifically a screenshot of a tweet. The tweet is a series of four panels, each depicting a different scenario with a character. The character in the first panel is depicted as a person with long red hair, wearing a white shirt and a black skirt. The character in the second panel is shown as a person with long red hair, wearing a white shirt and a black skirt. The character in the third panel is shown as a person with long red hair, wearing a white shirt and a black skirt. The character in the fourth panel is shown as a person with long red hair, wearing a white shirt and a black skirt.

The text within the tweet is in a stylized font and reads "BLOODY MARY BLOODY MARY!!!" followed by a series of emojis and a hashtag. The emojis are not clearly legible due to the resolution of the image. The hashtag "#board.schahn.org" is visible at the top of the tweet. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and drawn, with a focus on the character's expressions and actions. The image is a screenshot from a Twitter conversation, which is indicated by the presence of the Twitter handle "@@" followed by the username "Board.schahn.org".

The image is a stylized, abstract painting with a predominantly red and black color scheme. The background is a deep red, and there are various shapes and lines that create a sense of movement and energy. In the center of the painting, there is a large, dark shape that resembles a face or a mask, with a white outline and a red interior. This central figure is surrounded by smaller shapes and lines that seem to be emanating from it, creating a sense of depth and complexity. The painting has a textured appearance, with visible brushstrokes that add to its dynamic feel. The overall style of the painting is reminiscent of modern or contemporary art, characterized by its bold colors and abstract forms.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a distinctive, stylized face. The character has large, expressive eyes and a wide, open mouth. The character's hair is black and appears to be styled in a bob cut. The character is wearing a green robe with a fur-like texture, and the robe is partially visible, suggesting it might be worn over a darker garment. The character's skin tone is a pale yellow, and the character's hands are visible, with one hand resting on the other.

The image is a dark, moody painting that depicts a figure in a state of distress or despair. The figure is shown from the back, with their head turned to the side, and their body is covered in a layer of dust or debris, suggesting a sense of neglect or abandonment. The figure's hands are raised to their face, and their fingers are spread out, as if in a gesture of distress or despair.

The figure is wearing a garment that appears to be tattered and worn, further emphasizing the sense of neglect. The background is dark and shadowy, with a sense of depth and a sense of isolation. There is a skull on the right side of the painting, which is also dark and appears to be in a state of decay or disrepair.

The painting style is realistic with a focus on the textures and details of the figure and the surrounding environment. The use of dark colors and the dramatic lighting contribute to the overall somber and melancholic mood of the piece. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image.

The image is a black and white meme featuring two characters in a desolate, dimly lit environment. On the left, there is a large, horned figure resembling a goat or ram, standing upright with its head held high. The figure is wearing a long coat and has a long, curved horn on its head. The text above the figure reads, "Do you want a Porsche 911 or not?" The text is in a casual, informal font and is in white, contrasting with the dark background.

On the right, there is a man standing with his back to the camera, holding a cane. He is wearing a hat and a long-sleeved shirt. The man appears to be looking at the horned figure, and the text above him reads, "yeah but dying at 27, I don't care." This text is also in a casual, informal font and is in white, matching the color of the text above the horned figure.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a dark, moody atmosphere and a surreal element. The text and the characters' expressions suggest a humorous contrast between the horned figure's desire for a Porsche and the man's indifference to his own impending death.

I enjoy that song too. It speaks of resilience, and determination. I heard a song that sounded so much like Master's Apprentices' musical progression about a year ago but when I went back to book-mark it, it was gone, as though I never listened to it, and it never existed.

It went:

>I am iron!

I AM IRON!!!

over and over in the chorus, and the instrumentation sounded perfectly similar to Master's Apprentices, but again, it's as though the song never existed.

There was one other that disappeared in the same time_frame of 3 hours, but it sounded nothing like Opeth's songs.

Their Music is Very potent. I'm in love with it. Dark and comforting, like an opium-den, or death itself.

This is one which resonates deeply with me.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a stylized owl. The owl has a large, round head with large, round eyes and a small beak. Its body is covered in a textured pattern, and its wings are spread out, giving the impression of flight. The owl's body is outlined in a thin, black line, and the owl's eyes are outlined in a lighter shade of black. The owl is facing towards the right side of the image, with its body oriented in a way that suggests it is standing upright. The owl's beak is slightly open, and its eyes are wide open, giving the impression of alertness or curiosity.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a sketch or a digital drawing, with a focus on the owl and the text, and a simple, clean line work that gives the image a modern and minimalist feel. The monochromatic color scheme adds to the simplicity and focus on the owl and the text.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a distinctive, stylized face.

The character has large, expressive eyes and a wide, open mouth. The character's hair is black and appears to be styled in a bob cut. The character is wearing a green robe with a fur-like texture, and the robe is partially visible, suggesting it might be worn over a darker garment. The character's skin tone is a pale yellow, and the character's hands are visible, with one hand resting on the other.

positioned to the right of the character. The overall style of the image is surreal and fantasy-inspired, with a focus on the character and the text.

The image is a dark, moody painting that depicts a figure in a state of distress or despair. The figure is shown from the back, with their head turned to the side, and their body is covered in a layer of dust or debris, suggesting a sense of neglect or abandonment. The figure's hands are raised to their face, and their fingers are spread out, as if in a gesture of distress or despair.

The figure is wearing a garment that appears to be tattered and worn, further emphasizing the sense of neglect. The background is dark and shadowy, with a sense of depth and a sense of isolation. There is a skull on the right side of the painting, which is also dark and appears to be in a state of decay or disrepair.

The painting style is realistic with a focus on the textures and details of the figure and the surrounding environment. The use of dark colors and the dramatic lighting contribute to the overall somber and melancholic mood of the piece. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image.

plush toy. The kitten is looking up at the camera with a surprised expression, and the unicorn has a gold horn. The background is a dark, textured wall with a black and white checkered pattern. At the bottom of the image, there is a small paw print with a red heart, which is a common symbol associated with pets. The text overlay on the image reads, "And I looked, and behold, a pale horse! And its rider's name was Death." The text is in white and is placed at the top of the image, just above the kitten and unicorn. The overall tone of the image is light-hearted and playful, with a touch of humor.

The image is a black and white meme featuring two characters in a desolate, dimly lit environment. On the left, there is a large, horned figure resembling a goat or ram, standing upright with its head held high. The figure is wearing a long coat and has a long, curved horn on its head. The text above the figure reads, "Do you want a Porsche 911 or not?" The text is in a casual, informal font and is in white, contrasting with the dark background.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a dark, moody atmosphere and a surreal element. The text and the characters' expressions suggest a humorous contrast between the horned figure's desire for a Porsche and the man's indifference to his own impending death.

I enjoy that song too. It speaks of resilience, and determination. I heard a song that sounded so much like Master's Apprentices' musical progression about a year ago but when I went back to book-mark it, it was gone, as though I never listened to it, and it never existed.

It went:

>I am iron!

I AM IRON!!!

over and over in the chorus, and the instrumentation sounded perfectly similar to Master's Apprentices, but again, it's as though the song never existed.

There was one other that disappeared in the same time_frame of 3 hours, but it sounded nothing like Opeth's songs.

Their Music is Very potent. I'm in love with it. Dark and comforting, like an opium-den, or death itself.

This is one which resonates deeply with me.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a stylized owl. The owl has a large, round head with large, round eyes and a small beak. Its body is covered in a textured pattern, and its wings are spread out, giving the impression of flight. The owl's body is outlined in a thin, black line, and the owl's eyes are outlined in a lighter shade of black. The owl is facing towards the right side of the image, with its body oriented in a way that suggests it is standing upright. The owl's beak is slightly open, and its eyes are wide open, giving the impression of alertness or curiosity.

In the center of the image, there is a phrase written in a stylized, cursive font that reads "THE OWLS ARE NOT WHAT THEY SEEM." The text is in a lighter shade of black, contrasting with the owl's outline and the owl's body. The text is centered within the owl's body, which is slightly tilted to the left, adding a dynamic element to the composition.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a sketch or a digital drawing, with a focus on the owl and the text, and a simple, clean line work that gives the image a modern and minimalist feel. The monochromatic color scheme adds to the simplicity and focus on the owl and the text.

The image is a close-up photograph of a large, ornate astronomical clock. The clock face is circular with a black background and gold-colored numerals and hands. The numerals are arranged in a grid pattern, with the numbers 1 through 12 in the center and the Roman numeral system on the outer edge. The hands of the clock are also gold-colored, pointing to the 12 and 6 o'clock positions.

The clock is set against a dark stone background, which contrasts with the lighter colors of the clock face. Above the clock, there are two statues of angels, one on each side, which appear to be in a classical pose. The statues are also made of dark stone and are intricately detailed.

The clock is mounted on a stone wall, and there are decorative elements above and around the clock, including what appears to be a stone arch or pediment with a detailed design. The overall style of the image is realistic and the photograph is taken from a low angle, emphasizing the grandeur of the clock and the architectural elements surrounding it. The diagram is divided into three concentric circles, with the outer circle representing the Earth, the middle circle representing the "UNDERWORLD," and the inner circle representing the "PILLARS OF EARTH." The diagram shows the Earth as a flat surface with mountains and valleys, and the "UNDERWORLD" as a series of concentric circles with a central point, resembling a sun or a central point of the Earth. The "PILLARS OF EARTH" are depicted as a series of concentric circles with a central point, resembling a series of hills or mountains. The diagram is labeled with various celestial bodies and their positions relative to the Earth, such as the Sun, the Moon, the Planets, and the Stars. The text "HEAVEN OF FIRE FOR GREENS AND OTHERS" is written at the top of the diagram, suggesting a connection to religious or spiritual beliefs. The style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century scientific diagrams, with a focus on the Earth's structure and the celestial bodies around it.

The image is a black and white illustration that appears to be a historical or religious drawing, possibly from the 16th or 17th century. It features a large, dome-shaped structure with a pointed roof, which is the central focus of the image. Above the dome, there is a banner with the text "College Primatensis" and "F.S.R.I.A." The structure is surrounded by various figures and symbols, including angels, cherubs, and other mythical creatures. The scene is set against a landscape with mountains and a river, and there are inscriptions and labels on the structure and surrounding elements. The style of the illustration is detailed and ornate, with a focus on the architectural and mythical elements.

It's also funny how much they have to lie about what the general body of science says just to sound even remotely close to their own idiocy.

The image is a digital representation of a world map, featuring a color-coded representation of continents and oceans. The continents are depicted in shades of green, while the oceans are shown in blue. The map is oriented with the Atlantic Ocean on the left and the Pacific Ocean on the right. The continents are distributed across the map, with the Americas, Europe, Africa, and Asia being the most prominent. The map is bordered by a grid of lines, which likely represent the Earth's surface. The image is a digital rendering, and the colors and details are consistent with what one would expect from a high-resolution satellite or aerial photograph. There are no texts or discernible human-made features on the map. The style of the image is informative and educational, likely intended for a general audience to understand the geographical layout of the world.

Oh its you from the last thread and my meme already killed your retarded claim. Children are shown a ball in their classrooms, children are taught the horizon is a physical sphere edge in which obstructs objects far enough away from viewers perspective.

Ofc children go along with it because they arent taught what the horizon actually means, NOT PHYSICAL, HORIZONTAL, APPARENT LOCATION. They are being taught by fuckwit assclown adults like you. But it isnt your fault, youre just a conformist cuck like the other 95% of adults in this lost retarded world.

Appealing to children's thought processes when it comes to this topic makes you a pathetic chickenshit. An attempted argument against something that isnt an argument.

Anonymous Wed 07 Jan 2026 18:59:31 No.41774510 Report

To be a glerf = "argue" against a description of reality (earth geometry)

No wonder it adds up that you must commit FALLACY AFTER FALLACY as a fucking globetard, the main one being affirm the consequence. Thats what happens when you try to argue against a description of reality.

They continue on with their ramblings while their fallacies go unnoticed or uncalled, because TOO MANY FLAT EARTHERS ARE PLAYING THEIR GAME!!!

SAVE YOURSELF SOME TIME AND LEARN DAMN MODUS PONENS AND MODUS

TOLLENS!!! STOP DIGGING THIS WHOLE DEEPER.

They're still discussing models, they're still discussing things outside of earth geometry. Shit like star movement, tides, volcanoes, ocean currents, the bottom-up disappearance of objects at the horizon, etc. Are all affirming the consequence fallacy

Modus ponens: (LOGICALLY VALID) If P then Q, P therefore Q

Example: If earth is measured and utilized flat, then it's flat

Earth is measured utilized flat, so it's flat (REMINDER: 100% LOGICALLY VALID)

Modus tollens: (ALSO LOGICALLY VALID)

If P then Q, NOT Q THEREFORE NOT P

(You guessed it, black swan with horizon NOT AT 1.22 MILES)

Modus ponens = straight forward and descriptive

Modus tollens = used in scientific inquiry for explaining and disproving

And then there's the fallacious form. Affirming the consequence/ begging the question fallacy

IF P then Q, Q therefore P

(Easy to spot in almost every global "argument", you're welcome)

Next time you read a global claim, ask yourself DOES THIS APPLY TO AFFIRMATION OF CONSEQUENCE FALLACY?

Chances are it will

The image is a black and white photograph of Earth from space, taken on October 24, 1966, at the White Sands Missile Range. The photograph captures a view of Earth's surface, showing a large, curved cloud-like feature that resembles a mountain or a large, curved hill. The image is taken from a high vantage point, possibly from a spacecraft or a space station, as indicated by the text at the bottom of the image. The text provides information about the photograph, stating that it was taken from a camera on V-2, launched on October 24, 1966, at the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico. The text also credits the photograph to the "Missile Range Applied Physics Laboratory." The image is a historical document, capturing a moment in time from space, providing a unique perspective of Earth's geography.

The celestial objects are labeled with their names and positions relative to the Earth.

For example, the Sun is labeled as "SUN," the Moon is labeled as "MOON," and the Earth is labeled as "EARTH." The map also includes a scale bar at the bottom, indicating the distance from the Earth to the object in miles.

The image is a historical document, likely from the 1960s or 1970s, as indicated by the text and the style of the map. The photograph itself is a photograph of the Earth, with a view of the Earth's surface and the horizon, showing the Earth's curvature and the curvature of the Earth's atmosphere. The photograph is taken from a vantage point that is approximately 60 miles up from the Earth's surface.

The photograph is in black and white, which gives it a vintage feel. The image is presented in a portrait orientation, with the Earth's surface and the horizon visible in the foreground and the celestial objects in the background. The photograph is taken from a high altitude, as indicated by the horizon line and the curvature of the Earth's surface.

The image is a collection of three separate illustrations, each depicting a different scenario related to the concept of the "Flat Earth" or "Big Bang" theory.

In the top left, there is a cartoon-style illustration of a celestial body with a sun at the center, surrounded by a ring of stars. The sun is depicted with a blue-green hue, and the surrounding stars are white, suggesting a nebula or a cloud of gas and dust.

The top right illustration shows a close-up of a person's face, with a beard and glasses, looking directly at the viewer. The person appears to be in a neutral or slightly frowning expression, with a slight smile on the lips.

The bottom illustration is a black and white depiction of a solar system. It features the planets in their orbits around the sun, with the sun at the center, surrounded by the planets. The planets are labeled with their names, such as "Mercury," "Venus," "Earth," "Mars," "Jupiter," "Saturn," "Uranus," "Neptune," "Pluto," and "Neptune."

In the center of the image, there is a text bubble that reads "Yeah right, I don't believe that faked up nonsense." This text is in a bold, capitalized font and is colored in white, contrasting with the black background of the image.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using visual elements to convey a disbelief or disbelief in the "Flat Earth" or "Big Bang" theory.

The image is a collage of two photographs, one on the left and one on the right, depicting a scene of an oil rig in the ocean. The left photograph shows a close-up of the rig's structure, with the word "BUB EYE BALL" in bold letters at the top. The rig is surrounded by water and appears to be in the process of drilling for oil. The right photograph shows a broader view of the rig, with the word "BALL" in bold letters at the top, and the rig is surrounded by water. The sky is hazy, and the horizon is visible in the background.

The bottom of the image contains a caption that reads: "These 2 photos are taken with the GAME Camera and Camera Height 4 days apart. Not only are A and B, both BLACK SWANS, but also BALLARDS Pay Close Attention...". There are also two icons, one with a red background and the other with a green background, which appear to be emojis. The text "Your PHYSICAL SPHERE EDGE HORIZON" is also present, suggesting a reference to the game's physics engine.

The overall style of the image is informational and promotional, likely used to advertise or showcase the game's features.

The image shows a detailed view of a large astronomical clock, which is mounted on a stone building. The clock is circular with a black background and gold-colored hands and numbers. The hands of the clock are marked with Roman numerals, and the numbers are in a different color, likely to distinguish them from the hands.

At the center of the clock, there is a large blue circle with a white line through it, which is labeled "South Celestial Pole." This circle is surrounded by a series of concentric circles, each representing a different celestial body. The outer circle is labeled "Ecliptic," the middle circle is labeled "South Celestial Pole," and the inner circle is labeled "Horizon."

The clock is labeled with the names of the celestial bodies it represents: "South Celestial Pole," "Ecliptic," "South Celestial Pole," and "Horizon." The text is in English and is written in a serif font, which is commonly used for titles or labels on clocks.

The clock is mounted on a stone building with intricate carvings and statues, which are not clearly visible in the image. The building has a Gothic architectural style, characterized by pointed arches and ribbed vaults. The clock is the central focus of the image, with the surrounding elements providing context to its location and purpose.

The globe was dead a long time ago and we are way over that point.

If the horizon can be spotted away at 10 miles rather than 1.22 then it's game over.

That's why we keep beating your head with the black swan.

I'm sorry, 10 miles is not the same as 50,000 miles???

A Cartesian coordinate map (every map) always starts off flat and horizontal, with latitude and longitude lines both parallel.

In that case, with a square grid you get A, B, C, and D, aka quadrants.

The globe comes from a dipole where there's only A and B, where the longitudinal lines intersect.

Another reason why flat earthers should stay away from Gleason's map/ UN map/ flat earth society map is because there's a patent for Gleason's that says it's a projection of the already-globe map.

Flat earthers have maps. Globers have their globe. Both can have distortions found because maps by definition are approximations. Both can work for specific purposes. It depends

The image is a collage of various visual elements, each with a distinct style and purpose. At the top left, there is a close-up of a digital display showing a corneal image with text explaining the structure of the cornea. The cornea is a transparent, flat, and curved surface that covers the front of the eye.

Moving to the top right, there is a diagram of a spherical object with concentric circles, labeled with various mathematical and astronomical terms. The diagram appears to be a representation of a celestial body, possibly a planet or a star, with its axes of symmetry and its position relative to the Earth.

In the bottom left, there is a close-up of a globe with concentric circles, similar to the diagram above. The globe is colored in shades of blue and orange, and it features a stylized representation of the Earth's surface.

The bottom right contains a logo for the United Nations, which consists of a blue circle with a white outline and a blue star within it. The logo is a stylized representation of the United Nations emblem, which is a blue circle with a white star and a blue outline.

The collage is titled "United Nations Logo 33 sections" and is set against a white background. The text is in a smaller font size compared to the other elements, and it is located at the bottom of the image. The overall style of the image is educational and informative, likely intended to convey the complexity and diversity of the human eye and the universe.

The image is a collage of various visual elements, each representing different concepts related to the field of astronomy or cosmology. The collage is divided into two columns, with the top column containing four images and the bottom column containing three images.

In the top left corner, there is a close-up of a digital astronomical instrument, possibly a telescope or a similar device, with a focus on the eyepiece and the telescope body. The instrument appears to be a part of a larger astronomical setup, as suggested by the surrounding text that reads "These patterns look familiar. Ah, yes, the 1850s and an early telescope."

The top right corner features a diagram with a circular structure at the center, surrounded by lines and arrows, which could represent a model of a celestial object or a concept related to the universe. The diagram includes various celestial bodies and lines that seem to indicate their motion or relationship to each other.

The bottom left column contains three images. The first image is a close-up of a black hole, with a white outline and a black center, which is a common depiction of a black hole. The second image is a close-up of a blue planet with a white outline and a black center, which could represent a planet in our solar system. The third image is a close-up of a yellow sun with a white outline and a black center, which is a common depiction of the sun.

The bottom right column contains three images. The first image is a close-up of a blue planet with a white outline and a black center, which could represent a planet in our solar system. One of many projections used by cartographers back then. There are many more maps depicting the Earth with hemispheres.

>Yes we don't have a map and we don't have a model but it's because we don't have access to the resources required for either

Well regarding prior, we do know the shape of countries like Australia, and the shapes align just fine with the globe model. They don't with maps flat earthers use (as substitutes, apparently. Because the guy said they don't actually know what it looks like).

>The Antarctic Treaty was about the environment

No? It's mostly about restricting military activity, which is also why the USSR agreed to it.

>The only thing the USSR and USA didn't compete over during the Cold War was Antarctica

A. Because there is nothing noteworthy there to compete or wage war over.

B. That's untrue, the Soviets relied on American grain shipments and both super powers opposed Rhodesia.

>Travel to Antarctica and below the Antarctic Circle is more restricted than travel to military bases.

Because the whole continent is an inhospitable wasteland. Also funny how he both implies that actually you are not travelling to Antarctica (because the pilots apparently fly somewhere else) and that they do travel there, but only to restricted locations. Which one is it? And regarding latter, tourism agencies don't want people to freeze to death and their families demanding financial compensation. You know where travel is even more restricted to? North Sentinel Island. Does that mean there's something even more mysterious there?

>Antarctica is the only country that prominently features its shape on its flag

A. It's not a sovereign country.

B. Wrong, look up Kosovo and Cyprus, half a dozen more countries have their borders on their flag.

>Charlie Byrd

Taken out of context (see picrel), and he definitely wasn't a flat earther as he had a globe in his office.

hey flatties, heres a few facts that contradict your belief.

air pressure goes down as altitude increses and hits 0 at 62 miles. This is where space begins.

Space is a thing that has no solid/liquid/gas in it.

although space contains nothing it still has a name and is not fake or can in any way be gay.

the moon is not travelling through air, we can tell that because it does not slow down due to drag and plummet into the earth.

the moon is also illuminated by the sun in distinct patterns depending on where the sun is. The earths shadow also passes over the moon from time to time. We know where all the spheres are and can predict when this will happen next.

The earths shadow is round, not a big flat square as the bible says.

The earth's shadow passing over the moon is impossible in the flat earth model that most flat earthers agree on.

The sad fact that flat earthers can't agree on a model is because none of them are basing anything off real observed data.

So basically, his claims come down to

>A decree from 1776 made it illegal to make maps that accurately depict the world
I couldn't find anything on that supposed decree. Also, the whole point behind it would be so retarded since navies need accurate maps to navigate the oceans.

>The Chinese believed that Earth is flat until the 1800s

Incorrect, if anything it was until the 1600s, and this was due to the belief that China was in the center of the world and thus the most important civilisation. There were also Chinese astronomers centuries before who supported a globe model.

>The claim that Earth is a sphere is from the 1700s. Everything before is a lie.

Complete nonsense, the oldest preserved globe is from the late 15th century. Aristotle's "Physics" describes the Earth as spherical. The Farnese Atlas, a Roman sculpture, depicts said Titan holding a celestial GLOBE.

>It's illegal to explore beyond 60° South latitude.

It's "illegal" to go there in general because it's an icy wasteland. That said, it's not even illegal. There is an entire tourism industry focused on the continent.

>Travelling south of the equator requires constant corrections.

Looked this up to and basically nothing. Ships use the Mercator projection just fine even today.

>Description of the flat earth model

Cool! Why don't most flat earthers agree on it then? In the Antarctica video you posted the uploader claimed that he has no idea if there is something beyond it. I also wonder how the 24 hour sun in Antarctica works, and the stars in the southern hemisphere (seemingly) rotating around the south celestial pole.

The image is a vintage map with a historical style, featuring a two-dimensional representation of the world. The map is divided into two hemispheres, each with a different color scheme. The upper hemisphere is in a light beige color, while the lower hemisphere is in a darker beige. The map is adorned with various details such as ships, ships' masts, and flags, which are scattered throughout the map.

The map is framed by a decorative border with a red and gold color scheme, and there is a small illustration of a ship at the bottom of the frame. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of an old map, possibly from the 16th or 17th century, given the style of the text and the decorative elements.

Furthermore what royal family specifically forced cartographers to use the globe, if it even did? If it was the British one, why would French, Spanish, Portuguese and other cartographers from all over the world also conform to it?

Aside from that, even before 1776 (which is apparently the year the decree went into effect) there were maps being made that depicted landmasses and their proportions completely unlike the common flat earth one.

>inb4 but what about maps centered on the north pole?

Simply another projection. It also contradicts his point about "flat earth maps" being illegal since azimuthal equidistants would have been destroyed to conceal the truth, but alas, we still have preserved examples of them.

The image is a graphic with a map-like layout, featuring a blue background with a white border. At the center of the image, there is a stylized representation of a globe with a dotted line connecting various points, representing different flight routes. The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-Latin script, with the English text providing information about the ETOPs (European Trans-Antarctic Transport Options) and their safety regulations.

The text states that ETOPs are a safety regulation that prohibits airliners from flying far from the nearest diversion airport, which is higher than the current regulations allow. It also mentions that the higher the ETOPs rate, the more stringent the requirements, and that demanding higher operational costs.

The map is overlaid with a legend that shows different colored lines representing different flight routes. The legend includes the names of various cities and their corresponding flight routes, such as Cape Town, Johannesburg, Buenos Aires, Santiago, and others.

At the bottom of the image, there is a section titled "FlatEarth/ws/ETOPs," which seems to be a reference to a concept or a project related to the ETOPs. The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main text, and it is in a different color, making it less prominent.

The overall style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended for a general audience to understand the context and implications of the ETOPs regulations.

I'm not an expert on physics but that's about 15°/hour if I'm correct. Flerfs simply can't comprehend scale and will thus use big numbers to "prove" that their "model" (there isn't even one they can universally agree on) makes more sense. But thing is, you are moving with the same momentum as Earth, and Earth's movement is pretty much constant, resulting in you feeling nothing from it. Similar to how you can travel on a high-speed train and still comfortably get up and walk to the bathroom or something.

Without knowing the source of the video being shown it's difficult to make a point about it*. And once again, I am not an expert on physics, so take my opinion with a grain of salt if you will.

*Flerfs love using (often edited) behind-the-scenes footage from movies like Interstellar as "evidence" of the moon landing and everything related to space being fake. In a previous thread one posted a low-quality webm supposedly showing the making of the moon landing with green screen, film crews, actors, etc, and it just turned out to be from a movie called "First Man".

Either way, the ISS as an object definitely does exist as it is visible through commercially available telescopes.

Flerfs may claim that, like satellites, it's just carried by high-altitude balloons, but I doubt they could move at such high speed. The alternative would be saying that it's holograms or some other sci-fi shit, but that sounds too ridiculous which is why they usually ignore anything related to amateur astrophotography.

I agree, not arguing rotation. I am not a FEer. I just ask questions and discuss. Open to whatever makes sense.

Ur 2nd point - really? lol. I didn't make any claim about FE, moon landing, nothing. I asked a simple question: Is that a perm? You are shown a woman in a 0 gravity machine vs women at the ISS. Sure looks like a perm to me. But hey, who knows, maybe the way the IS women hair moves is just a glitch, camera lens, coincidence, or whatever. I'm not even saying the ISS is fake, I'm just saying that's a perm homie. But please, stop bringing up other shit that I didn't even talk about.

Perm or no? I am not a FEer but that is a perm to me.

I just watched the part you mentioned and I have no idea what Eric is talking about there. He drew some lines on a Mercator and azimuthal equidistant projection depicting a flight from Santiago to Sydney, but when I looked it up the actual path fits with the globe perfectly.
<https://www.flightpaths.com/SYD-SCL>

That said, flat earthers do have a tendency to use flight paths as "evidence", usually because they don't understand them and often use maps, like the Mercator projection. This video does a good job of explaining it:

it may just be that her hair is kind of wiry and springy so that when she's in free fall that bit of tension it has causes it to stand up like that. you maybe want to see if you can see similar effects during those 45second freefall training flights they do in those aircraft because we know those are real. if you see something like that in the ISS footage, which is basically just in constant freefall rather than in short periods, than that would suggest that the iss really is in orbit.

The image is a digital graphic with a humorous and satirical tone. It features a large space shuttle with the label "ISS" and a smaller space shuttle with the label "Boeing 777" above it. The space shuttle with the "ISS" label is positioned above a football stadium with a crowd of spectators, suggesting a comparison between the size of the space shuttle and the size of the stadium. The text in the image asks a question: "Can anyone explain how it is possible to see the ISS from 254 miles away if we can barely spot an airplane from 7 miles away?" The question is framed in a way that suggests a challenge or a paradox, with the text "Can anyone explain" and "Can we barely spot an airplane from 7 miles away?" The humor is derived from the juxtaposition of the scale of the space shuttle and the stadium, which is a common visual metaphor for the vastness of space compared to the size of a stadium. The image is overlaid with a graphic of the Earth with the ISS and the smaller space shuttle, emphasizing the scale of the ISS relative to the Earth.

The image is a bar chart displaying the percentage of people who think the Earth is or could be flat. The chart is divided into two columns, with the left column labeled "Men" and the right column labeled "Women." Each column is further divided into two sub-categories: "Aged 18-29" and "Aged 30-44," with the "Aged 45-65" category being the third. The colors of the bars represent the percentage of people who think the Earth is flat, with green representing 29%, pink representing 21%, blue representing 14%, and so on.

The chart is titled "Percentages who think the earth is or could be flat (YouGov N = 1,495)" at the top, indicating the source of the data and the number of respondents. The chart is a vertical bar graph, with the height of each bar corresponding to the percentage of people who think the Earth is flat. The percentages are clearly labeled at the top of each bar, making it easy to read the data.

The chart is a visual representation of the survey results, showing the distribution of opinions among different age groups and demographic groups. It provides a clear and concise way to compare the opinions of different groups of people on the topic of the Earth's flatness.

The globe comes from how all maps are made. Maybe you should read through this thread about whats already been said.

All maps come from a Cartesian coordinate system with quadrants, A B C and D.

Longitudinal and latitude lines are thus parallel

The globe comes from CCS which is then wrapped around a dipole where the Longitudinal lines intersect at 2 poles. So ABCD becomes only A and B

You should be damn grateful us flat earthers are here to educate you on maps even though you continue to play the fool.

Does that mean everything I see at a far distance is just a distortion? If not, then this wouldn't rule out every single classic FE horizon test. I still think we could end this debate by following Antarctica's border—hopefully someone does it one day, lol.

If you were running the world for your own benefit and wanted to keep the FE secret within your group, this is exactly the kind of explanation you'd come up with—this whole Snell's Law stuff. It's well accepted today that we were completely wrong about our ancient history timeline, and how humans built these megalithic structures that exist today. That's a big deal. I'm not saying it isn't real, but you can't be 100% sure one way or the other. Acting like you can is honestly ignorant.

Most of history, and much of what we're taught in school, is BS or outright lies, so our fundamental foundation is kind of messed up. We're constantly creating theories and then improving on them, which eventually makes the old ones wrong or outdated. We don't know everything about the universe today. Because of that, there has to be some wiggle room for science or math to be incorrect—especially when it comes to theories, which is basically all of advanced mathematics.

At the end of the day, I'd much rather be skeptical first and then make a decision than blindly accept what the establishment tells me or what my friends think. I'd rather be wrong about something than be tricked or lied to and believe it as truth.

Given enough time, anything is possible—literally—so keep that in mind. My point is that you have to leave some room for certain math or science concepts to be wrong, because that happens quite often as we become more intelligent. Of course, you should still look into whatever the scientific "fact" is, but also consider the bigger picture of humanity and the fact that we are wrong sometimes.

mediums or doing the math yourself does not refute their claims.
There's no "horizon FE test" because you can't test the horizon being an apparent location, that's what it is. NOT physical location.
Even if we wanted to pretend the horizon is physical, the black swan threw out earth curve via earth curve calculator.
Snell's law applies to refraction not refracted horizon, the thing globers claim. 2 mediums next to each other are not a boundary for refraction. It's an exiting from one medium into another.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a complex mathematical and scientific discussion. The main focus is on the "Séel's law" and its application in optics, specifically in the context of refraction. The image is divided into two main sections.
On the left side, there is a section titled "Séel's law (also known as the Séel-Descartes law) and the law of refraction (in a formula)" which provides a detailed explanation of the law. It mentions that the law states that for a given pair of media, the ratio of the sine of the incidence angle (θ) to the sine of the refraction angle (θ') is equal to the ratio of the refractive index (n) of the two media. The law is also described as a relationship between the phase velocities (v_1 and v_2) of light waves in two media, or equivalently, the ratio of the phase velocities (v_1 and v_2) in the two media.

On the right side, there is a section titled "Refraction of light at the interface between two media of different refractive indices" which discusses the relationship between the phase velocities (v_1 and v_2) of light waves in two media, and the angle of incidence (θ) and the angle of refraction (θ'). It mentions that the angle of refraction is lower in the second medium than in the first medium, and that the angle of incidence is higher in the second medium than in the first medium.

The image also includes a reference to a historical context, mentioning that Ptolemy, Alexander, and Euclid had found a relationship regarding refraction angles, but it was not until S  el that the law was named after him. The text also references a mathematical formula, which is not fully visible in the image.

The image also includes a section titled "History" with a list of references, including "Pl  mony in Alexandria, Egypt, had found a relationship regarding refraction angles, but it was not until S  el that the law was named after him."

The image is a screenshot from a webpage, and the text is in English. The image is divided into two columns, with the left column being a text-based explanation of the law and the right column being a mathematical formula. The image is in a dark color scheme, and the text is in a lighter color, making it easy to read.

Because there is a formula in order to confirm or test Snell's law. Notice how Snell's law was really based off Ptolemy's work which was INACCURATE (see image). But Ibn Sahl was the person who first discovered the law. Ibn Sahl's work was based solely off of LENSES.

On the Snell's law wiki page it states:

"In French, Snell's Law is sometimes called "la loi de Descartes" or more frequently "loi de Snell-Descartes"."

Ok, so what is "loi de Snell-Descartes"? Oh interesting, the wiki link took me to a French wiki page of Snell's law... lol. Right on that page it states:

"The discovery of the laws of refraction is attributed to Ibn Sahl (c. 940-1000) [1] in 983. These laws are represented in the figure opposite by the two triangles in the upper left. Ibn Sahl used these laws to design a hyperbolic lens with perfect focusing (a beam of parallel rays then converges exactly at the same point: the focus).

However, Ibn Sahl's treatise remains enigmatic, as the relationship appears without experimental data or theoretical basis. Furthermore, no constant equivalent to the refractive index is defined."

Notice how it referred back to Ibn Sahl, whose work was based of lenses. Alright, I'm this deep and still looking for an explanation for this FE horizon test phenomena... So his experimental data had no constant equivalent to the refractive index. What's the refractive index?

"A vacuum has a refractive index of 1. In an absorbing medium, the refractive index is a complex number whose imaginary part accounts for the attenuation of the wave. Birefringent media have two indices, an ordinary one and an extraordinary one, or even three indices. Certain specific materials can have a so-called nonlinear index, while metamaterials have been developed with negative indices.

The refractive index plays a key role in Snell's law , which involves the ratio of refractive indices. This effect, called refraction , is fundamental to the design of optical lenses ."

Lol back to Snell's law and lenses. Alright. Wtf does birefringent mean and what is it?

"Birefringence is the physical property of a material in which light propagates anisotropically . In a birefringent medium, the refractive index is not unique; it depends on the direction of polarization of the light wave.

A spectacular effect of birefringence is double refraction , whereby a ray of light entering the crystal is split in two. This is why, in the photograph opposite, the inscription appears doubled after passing through the calcite crystal. This phenomenon is characteristic of birefringent media, to such an extent that the terms "double refraction" and "birefringence" are sometimes confused. The latter, in fact, derives its etymology from the former."

Another exerpt about Newton on birefringence:

"Isaac Newton in 1672 to put forward the hypothesis that the refractive index is specific to each wavelength, which causes the dispersion of the colors of a beam of white light passing through a prism [9] .

Huygens' work also yielded the discovery of the so-called "double refraction" phenomenon of calcite , which demonstrates the birefringence of the crystal, meaning that a beam of light passing through the crystal is refracted differently depending on its polarization [8] . In contrast, Newton's work, based primarily on a particle hypothesis—light composed of particles—did not adequately explain why light traveled differently in one material than another."

Note that it says hypothesis, and again, crystals.

Ok so now we have lenses and crystals, cool. So from my reasearch, we keep getting redirected in circles referencing inaccurate theories and laws only about lenses and crystals?

Sounds like a load of horse shit lol

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a dark background and white text. The title at the top of the page reads "3. What atmospheric refraction does (and does not do)." Below the title, there are three bullet points providing information about atmospheric refraction. The first bullet point states that atmospheric refraction makes the Sun visible after it is geometrically below the horizon. The second bullet point explains that it slightly raises the apparent position of distant objects. The third bullet point states that it causes mirages, looms, and inferior/superior images. The fourth bullet point states that it extends line-of-sight distances a bit. The fifth bullet point states that typical magnitude is "Bends light by about 1/6 of Earth's curvature." The sixth bullet point states that it effectively increases Earth's radius by 7 - 15% in standard conditions. The seventh bullet point states that what it does not do is create the horizon, it does not explain why objects disappear bottom-first, and it does not scale correctly with distance to replace Earth's curvature. The eighth bullet point states that what it does not do is not create the horizon, it does not explain why objects disappear bottom-first, and it does not scale correctly with distance to replace Earth's curvature.

The image is a vintage-style illustration of a pipe. The pipe has a dark brown color with a smooth, curved shape and a slightly tapered end. The body of the pipe is cylindrical, and the bowl is slightly larger than the body, with a slight curve at the top. The stem of the pipe is black and has a slight curve, ending in a small, rounded end. The background of the image is a light beige color, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the pipe to stand out.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text in French that reads "Ceci n'est pas une pipe." The text is written in a cursive, elegant script, and it is positioned in the lower half of the image, slightly to the right. The style of the image is reminiscent of posters or advertisements from the early 20th century, with a focus on the pipe as the central subject. The overall composition is simple and clean, with the pipe being the sole object of interest.

I do like perique when it adds that blue cheese-esque flavour to blends, but perique heavy blends do pack a punch of nicotine. So I avoid them if i have to read a book, or something like that.

Humiliation Rituals confuse me Anonymous Fri 09 Jan 2026 19:09:10 No.41784300

ViewReplyOriginalReport

Im struggling to understand the whole point behind humiliation rituals, especially when the perpetrators are overt and known? If it fails, they paint a target on their own backs, if they succeed the only reclamation of self respect is through direct harm towards the perpetrators. Are the initiator suicidal, egotistical, suffer from inferiority complexes or are they just generally unwell? Why does hurting someone give oneself such a rush? Is sadism the norm these days? Am I being unnecessarily tame? Is the civilized upbringing tantamount to castration? If everyone indulges in their sins with pride and glee, if everyone else is comfortable with acting on envy, jealousy and low vibrational emotions, what exactly is stopping you from doing the same? Is it ego? Is it dignity? Do you see yourself above it all? Do you also feel like you acknowledge the hand society has dealt you by indulging and allowing low vibrational emotions?

[24 / 11]The image is a digital artwork divided into two distinct sections. On the left, there is a figure with a white, flowing mane of hair that appears to be smoke or mist, giving the impression of a supernatural or ethereal presence. The figure's skin is adorned with intricate designs, and there is a tattoo visible on the shoulder. The background is a muted, earthy tone, with a subtle gradient that transitions from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom.

On the right, there is a figure with dark hair and a golden crown, which is reminiscent of a mythical or fantasy theme. The figure's face is partially obscured by the crown, and the background is a deep red, providing a stark contrast to the figure's dark hair and crown. The figure's skin is adorned with a pattern that resembles a bird, and there is a snake coiled around the figure's neck. The overall style of the artwork is reminiscent of fantasy or mythological themes, with a focus on the contrast between the ethereal and the fantastical elements.

The image is a still from a video, featuring a large, mechanical figure with a humanoid head and multiple limbs. The figure is constructed from metal and has a dark, metallic appearance. It is seated on a large, mechanical spider-like structure, which is also made of metal and has a similar dark color. The spider-like structure has multiple joints and appendages, and it appears to be in motion, as suggested by the blurred background.

The figure is wearing a costume that includes a headpiece with horns and a necklace, and it has a pair of gloves on its hands. The text on the image, in French, reads "La dernière je resterai jusqu'à la fin des temps," which translates to "The last will remain until the end of time."

The setting appears to be an urban environment with buildings in the background.

There are people in the foreground, but they are blurred and not the main focus of the image. The overall style of the image is dramatic and seems to be a still from a video, possibly a promotional or artistic piece.

The image is a screenshot of a social media post, specifically a tweet. The tweet is titled "Yes, Lilith is strongly associated with Scorpio in modern astrology, often considered her 'ruling' or 'exalted' sign, linking her to themes of intense sexuality, transformation, power, hidden knowledge, and the underworld, much like the Scorpion's symbol of rebirth and dangerous allure. This connection highlights her untamed, taboo-breaking nature and deep emotional power, making her a natural domain for expressing liberation and confronting shadows, say The Hoodwitch, Astrostyle, and the Link, Oxford Astrologer."

The tweet is accompanied by a graphic of a red and black book cover with the title "Black Moon Lilith" in white text. The cover features a red moon with a black crescent moon and a red crescent moon with a black moon, which are the traditional symbols of the moon in various cultures. The text on the cover is not fully visible, but the title suggests that the book is about the astrological connection between Lilith and Scorpio. The tweet is marked as "AI Overview" and has a blue star icon next to it, indicating that it is a summary or overview of the content. The overall style of the image is informational and promotional, designed to convey the content of the tweet to the viewer.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, specifically a page from a book or article, discussing the concept of "Lilith" and its associations with spiders. The text is divided into two main sections, each with a heading and a list of key associations.

The first section, titled "Yes, Lilith is associated with spiders," lists several key associations:

- Lilith is associated with spiders, particularly in modern interpretations, occult practices, and fantasy settings.
- She is often called the "Spider Queen" (Arachne) due to her symbolizing deceit, weaving fate, female power, and nocturnal mystery.
- The spider connection is significant in her role as a potent symbol of creation, enchantment, and destiny.
- The spider is also associated with night and darkness, and Lilith is a creature of the night, often seen as a weaver of complex webs of destiny, deception, and power.

The second section, titled "Key associations," lists additional key associations:

- The Spider Queen (Arachne) is Mary's followers and modern interpretations connect her to the night and the spider.
- The spider is seen as a weaver of complex webs of destiny, deception, and power.
- Wearing & Fate: Lilith is sometimes linked to fate-weaving, reflecting themes of creation, enchantment, and destiny.
- Night & Darkness: Like spiders, Lilith is a creature of the night, often associated with shadows, the underworld, and hidden knowledge.
- The spider is also associated with the power of the night, making it a potent symbol of potent energies dangerous to female energy, aligning with Lilith's role as an independent and powerful figure.

The historical and modern views section discusses the original figures of Lilith in ancient texts, such as Isaiah, and how she is associated with night, monsters, owls, or wild animals, not specifically spiders.

The "Modern Synthesis" section discusses the spider connection, stating that it arises from combining Lilith with other figures like the Greek weaver Arachne, or through contemporary spiritual paths that assign symbolic meanings based on her characteristics (independence, power, and darkness).

The "In essence, while not a primary ancient symbol, spiders have become a significant and modern symbol for Lilith, representing her multifaceted power and mysterious nature."

The text is in English and is formatted in a typical academic or informational style, with a clear structure and a list format for the key associations. The image is a screenshot, and the text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is typical for a document or article.

This is ultimately "Venus" and the mortal Man becoming One.

Man becomes Woe-Man. The Ultimate Warrior and Supreme Being.

In antiquity Venus is depicted as an 8 pointed star.

This links to the 8 fold path

Spiders have 8 legs

She's the morning and evening star

She descends into the underworld and returns.

She is The Dao.

Inanna is my absolute favorite representation of Venus.

The pentagon(war) and pentagram (5elemental magic) are also associated with her.

The movie Madame Web is pretty good.

The "perfect son" is born to Benjamin(right hand of God) thanks to "the spider". There is more to decode in that movie if you pay attention.

For example the 3 future spider women are representations of the 3 Abrahamic faiths.

Picrel is technically Ishtar but that's ok.

>who's sathariel? that's a new name to my ears

Sathariel, the Qliphah corresponding to Binah on the Tree of Death in Kabbalah, represents the "Concealment of God" or obscuration of divine truth. It is associated with Saturn, deception, restriction, blindness to spiritual insight, nothingness, and disassociation. Its demon ruler is Lucifuge Rofocale ("One Who Flees Light"). In Qliphothic traditions, it is connected to other spheres like Thamiel, Chaigidel, Daath, Gamchicoth, and Golachab via gateways or tunnels.

Thamiel (Thaumiel): The first Qliphah, associated with Kether (the Crown), representing "Twins of God" or "Opposers," often linked to Moloch and treachery.

Chaigidel (Ghagiel/Oghiel): Connected to Chokmah, embodying confusion, illusion, and the "hinderers" of divine energy, linked to Beelzebub.

Daath (Da'at): Often a hidden or "void" Sephirah on the Tree of Life, its Qliphothic aspect relates to forbidden knowledge or the abyss, probably linked to the archetype of Tanin'iver

Gamchicoth (Gamaliel): Associated with the Sephirah of Binah, embodying corruption, spiritual decay, and the "Gamaliel" (obscene ones).

Golachab (Golohab): Linked to Geburah, meaning "Burners" or "Flaming Ones," representing destructive anger, often associated with the entity Asmodeus.

[24 / 11]The image is a digital artwork divided into two distinct sections. On the left, there is a figure with a white, flowing mane of hair that appears to be smoke or mist, giving the impression of a supernatural or ethereal presence. The figure's skin is adorned with intricate designs, and there is a tattoo visible on the shoulder. The background is a muted, earthy tone, with a subtle gradient that transitions from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom.

On the right, there is a figure with dark hair and a golden crown, which is reminiscent of a mythical or fantasy theme. The figure's face is partially obscured by the crown, and the background is a deep red, providing a stark contrast to the figure's dark hair and crown. The figure's skin is adorned with a pattern that resembles a bird, and there is a snake coiled around the figure's neck. The overall style of the artwork is reminiscent of fantasy or mythological themes, with a focus on the contrast between the ethereal and the fantastical elements.

The image is a still from a video, featuring a large, mechanical figure with a humanoid head and multiple limbs. The figure is constructed from metal and has a dark, metallic appearance. It is seated on a large, mechanical spider-like structure, which is also made of metal and has a similar dark color. The spider-like structure has multiple joints and appendages, and it appears to be in motion, as suggested by the blurred background.

The figure is wearing a costume that includes a headpiece with horns and a necklace, and it has a pair of gloves on its hands. The text on the image, in French, reads "La dernière je resterai jusqu'à la fin des temps," which translates to "The last will remain until the end of time."

The setting appears to be an urban environment with buildings in the background. There are people in the foreground, but they are blurred and not the main focus of the image. The overall style of the image is dramatic and seems to be a still from a video, possibly a promotional or artistic piece.

The image is a screenshot of a social media post, specifically a tweet. The tweet is titled "Yes, Lilith is strongly associated with Scorpio in modern astrology, often considered her 'ruling' or 'exalted' sign, linking her to themes of intense sexuality, transformation, power, hidden knowledge, and the underworld, much like the Scorpion's symbol of rebirth and dangerous allure. This connection highlights her untamed, taboo-breaking nature and deep emotional power, making her a natural domain for expressing liberation and confronting shadows, say The Hoodwitch, Astrostyle, and the Link, Oxford Astrologer."

The tweet is accompanied by a graphic of a red and black book cover with the title "Black Moon Lilith" in white text. The cover features a red moon with a black crescent moon and a red crescent moon with a black moon, which are the traditional symbols of the moon in various cultures. The text on the cover is not fully visible, but the title suggests that the book is about the astrological connection between Lilith and Scorpio. The tweet is marked as "AI Overview" and has a blue star icon next to it, indicating that it is a summary or overview of the content. The overall style of the image is informational and promotional, designed to convey the content of the tweet to the viewer.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, specifically a page from a book or article, discussing the concept of "Lilith" and its associations with spiders. The text is divided into two main sections, each with a heading and a list of key associations.

The first section, titled "Yes, Lilith is associated with spiders," lists several key associations:

- Lilith is associated with spiders, particularly in modern interpretations, occult practices, and fantasy settings.
- She is often called the "Spider Queen" (Arachne) due to her symbolizing deceit, weaving fate, female power, and nocturnal mystery.
- The spider connection is significant in her role as a potent symbol of creation, enchantment, and destiny.
- The spider is also associated with night and darkness, and Lilith is a creature of the night, often seen as a weaver of complex webs of destiny, deception, and power.

The second section, titled "Key associations," lists additional key associations:

- The Spider Queen (Arachne) is Mary's followers and modern interpretations connect her to the night and the spider.
- The spider is seen as a weaver of complex webs of destiny, deception, and power.
- Wearing & Fate: Lilith is sometimes linked to fate-weaving, reflecting themes of creation, enchantment, and destiny.
- Night & Darkness: Like spiders, Lilith is a creature of the night, often associated with shadows, the underworld, and hidden knowledge.
- The spider is also associated with the power of the night, making it a potent symbol of potent energies dangerous to female energy, aligning with Lilith's role as an independent and powerful figure.

The historical and modern views section discusses the original figures of Lilith in ancient texts, such as Isaiah, and how she is associated with night, monsters, owls, or wild animals, not specifically spiders.

The "Modern Synteresis" section discusses the spider connection, stating that it arises from combining Lilith with other figures like the Greek weaver Arachne, or through contemporary spiritual paths that assign symbolic meanings based on her characteristics (independence, power, and darkness).

The "In essence, while not a primary ancient symbol, spiders have become a significant and modern symbol for Lilith, representing her multifaceted power and mysterious nature."

The text is in English and is formatted in a typical academic or informational style, with a clear structure and a list format for the key associations. The image is a screenshot, and the text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is typical for a document or article.

This is ultimately "Venus" and the mortal Man becoming One.

Man becomes Woe-Man. The Ultimate Warrior and Supreme Being.

In antiquity Venus is depicted as an 8 pointed star.

This links to the 8 fold path

Spiders have 8 legs

She's the morning and evening star

She descends into the underworld and returns.

She is The Dao.

Inanna is my absolute favorite representation of Venus.

The pentagon(war) and pentagram (5elemental magic) are also associated with her.

The movie Madame Web is pretty good.

The "perfect son" is born to Benjamin(right hand of God) thanks to "the spider". There is more to decode in that movie if you pay attention.

For example the 3 future spider women are representations of the 3 Abrahamic faiths.

Picrel is technically Ishtar but that's ok.

>who's sathariel? that's a new name to my ears

Sathariel, the Qliphah corresponding to Binah on the Tree of Death in Kabbalah, represents the "Concealment of God" or obscuration of divine truth. It is associated with Saturn, deception, restriction, blindness to spiritual insight, nothingness, and disassociation. Its demon ruler is Lucifuge Rofocale ("One Who Flees Light"). In Qliphothic traditions, it is connected to other spheres like Thamiel, Chaigidel, Daath, Gamchicoth, and Golachab via gateways or tunnels.

Thamiel (Thaumiel): The first Qliphah, associated with Kether (the Crown), representing "Twins of God" or "Opposers," often linked to Moloch and treachery.

Chaigidel (Ghagiel/Oghiel): Connected to Chokmah, embodying confusion, illusion, and the "hinders" of divine energy, linked to Beelzebub.

Daath (Da'at): Often a hidden or "void" Sephirah on the Tree of Life, its Qliphothic aspect relates to forbidden knowledge or the abyss, probably linked to the archetype of Tanin'iver

Gamchicoth (Gamaliel): Associated with the Sephirah of Binah, embodying corruption, spiritual decay, and the "Gamaliel" (obscene ones).

Golachab (Golohab): Linked to Geburah, meaning "Burners" or "Flaming Ones," representing destructive anger, often associated with the entity Asmodeus.

My parents work for ((them)). My dad knows many politicians in my country. My mom met with members of extremely powerful families in the world. Other people from my family were part of fascists groups. One of them went to USA and worked on the b2 bomber , other secret projects. I cant find many details. One of the members is no longer alive but he mentioned that wearing tinfoil hats does protect you from various things. Even though my parents have these connections I don't live in luxury for some reason. They are very modest. Now the thing is in 2021 I was still a minor and my mom forced me to take the jab. Actual force , she would threaten me and my parents always manipulated me when I was young. They used me for a lot of things because I'm "special" and when I was young I was stupid. "INB4 Its your fault OP." 1 dose , maybe it was 2 but I don't remember. But she said 1. I don't understand why she made me take it. I still talk to her about this thing to this day. I know I can forgive people and let go , but this I cant forgive. She just says "muh because the mainstream said it's good so I will give it to my kids". But I don't understand ,my parents know powerful people etc so why did they make take it. Im a psychic , ever since I was a kid I was able to see things which most cant see and I used to always question why I am here. Until one day a crazy omen/synchronicity happened which made me become a christian for a bit. Then I woke up from Christianity. I started researching conspiracies and after some time , I started occult arts. Later on I stopped working with entities as I researched deeper in the veils of this matrix and I only trust my energy and no other energy grids. So why I am mentioning this ? It's been almost 5 years since I got the jab and I haven't lost my powers. I developed normally during puberty and healthy. Did I get saline jab ? Did I get a jab to give me extra powers ? Are my parents walking meat suits to try to stop me from awakening ?

Are there any accounts of Shadow People/Hatman predating the early 00's? If not, how did the concept become so widespread so quickly? If there are no accounts prior to that date, why do multiple people now claim to see them under influence or during sleep paralysis? Is it because they are a manifestation of some deep issue with the society of today, a reaction to a different way of life, or is there some even stranger explanation? Discuss pls.

I think that a great deal more of our perception is derived from our understanding of our culture and that this derivation affects our awareness down to its core. It wouldn't surprise me if ancient people used to get sleep paralysis but saw different things than we do now. History wasn't always perceived as starting somewhere and ending who knows where it used to be thought of as cyclical. The vedic tradition still sees the world as a 4,320,000 year cycle.

I also think the perception of things being influenced by cultural understanding is a phenomenon that reaches very deep. We already know that your perception can be altered to a degree where it no longer agrees with the consensus reality - for example, the deliria induced by tropane alkaloids in datura, brugmansia, or nightshade is often so complete that a person does not know they ingested anything, and take their altered reality at face value, interacting with objects that exist only in their idiosyncratic reality. If ingestion of a substance can cause this dramatic of a change in perception, why wouldn't it be possible that other substances cause smaller changes when taken in? What about their cumulative effects? What if we take ideas to also be a kind of substance that changes ones internal state upon intake? I find thinking of the evolution of different cultures and worldviews (literally ways of viewing the world) as the result of innumerable tiny vectors of input from the environment, to be immensely humbling and fascinating. That being said, so is the end result. How deep does this go - how significant is the level of variation in perceived reality between individuals? If it is significant to any magnitude, does that mean that objective reality is ineffable? I feel like the question of perception lies at the core of the paranormal, all forms of religiosity and mysticism, and also the pinnacle of arts, whether they be the kind usually considered an art by society, or mundane activities which have been perfected to an unbelievable degree.

>A number of religions, legends, and belief systems describe supernatural entities such as shades of the underworld, and various shadowy humanoids have long been a staple of folklore and ghost stories, such as the Islamic Jinn and the Choctaw Nalusa Falaya.

>An episode of the 1985 Twilight Zone series titled "The Shadow Man" dealt with a teenage boy who had a shadow person living under his bed.[20] The episode portrayed the shadow man as fitting the "hat man" appearance commonly ascribed to shadow people and added to the mythology that shadow people can kill humans but will not harm those under whose beds they live.

Indeed brain states that are linguistically, visually, and musically encoded can be likened to the brain states of delirium, psychedelia, and dissociation encoded within chemical compounds. I've had a decoding which revealed a state of no time no boundaries no awareness. It's plausible to me that asking the question of what grounds all metaphysics is like a floor with a fractal surface. To predict exactly where a ball would bounce when dropped on it, every hill and valley within each hill and each valley would need to be accounted for. Mapping every hill and every valley might be impossible however I don't suggest we stop zooming in. I suggest we stop trying to have a destination. I'm no physicist but I don't think the quest for a grand unified theory is going well for them. I used to be interested in the different possible theories but now I see the endeavor as a bit pointless, like Urso of Calabria's mild attempts at fixing the utterly broken Gallenic medical model. The future of the science of the mind is interesting, but the future of the mind is going to be really out to here.

The internet. But also:

There have always been predatory spirits around, but they would usually have a more pronounced culturally-defined form, and they would be held at bay by proper observation of the sacred rites by priests, shamans, etc, as well as a healthier way of living, thinking, interacting with the world, which had also included adherence to ritual norms, taboos and such. Now there's quite a lot of demonic activity, and it scales with population density and impact on nature and the way information is approached so reports would be more common. But it's mostly the internet.

The image is a cover of Time magazine featuring a man with a mustache and a bow-tie. He is wearing glasses and a white robe with a hood, suggesting a scholarly or intellectual persona. The man is smoking a pipe, which is a common symbol of contemplation or deep thought. The background is a gradient of red and purple, with a white border framing the image.

At the top of the image, the magazine's title "TIME" is prominently displayed in large, bold, black letters. Below the title, the words "The Weekly Newsmagazine" are written in smaller, black font. The central part of the image features a graphic of a man in a white robe with a hat, holding a book with a visible spine. The man appears to be reading or studying, which is a common theme for Time magazine covers.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text that reads "Central Intelligence Agency's Allen Dulles. For the first time, you can see the man behind the curtain." This text suggests that the image is related to a story or article about Allen Dulles, the CIA director, and his role in the CIA's operations.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of vintage or classic magazine covers, with a focus on the central figure and the text, which is typical for Time magazine's design. The use of color and the illustration style contribute to the magazine's classic and authoritative image.

You also have the early 1900s series of "the shadow", on colonial mexico he was called "el sombrero" and "el charro" on ancient britain "ankou" on ancient korea "jeoseung saja", i have investigated this phenomenon a lot and it goes a lot deeper than most think.

He also appears in games like fallout as the mysterious stranger, on red dead redemption as the strange man (also called mysterious stranger in code), on fallout the mysterious stranger uses a .44 magnum gun and there is this mark twain story

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The_Mysterious_Stranger

"Twain wrote multiple versions of the story; each involves a supernatural character called "Satan" or "No. 44", encountering children. "

There is also a cover up going on a lot of hat man images have been blocked on many boards of 4chan and even the lead designer of rdr had to come up to say the strange man is a meme and means nothing.

Too many people noticed due to the benadryl meme and they are covering it up

The image displays a circular emblem with a black background and a gold outline. The emblem features a central design composed of a stylized letter "A" with a crossbar and six smaller lines radiating from the center. The letters "A" and "Z" are prominently displayed in the center of the emblem, with the "A" being larger and more prominent than the "Z". The emblem is set against a white background. The style of the image is a straightforward product photograph, designed to showcase the emblem clearly for potential buyers or viewers. There are no texts or additional graphics present in the image.

The image displays a stylized emblem with a geometric design. The central figure is a stylized diamond shape with a zigzag pattern, which is outlined in gold. Surrounding the diamond are four smaller diamonds, each with a zigzag pattern, and they are connected by a series of lines that form a cross. The background of the emblem is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. At the bottom of the image, the text "Aiyizan Velkete" is written in a serif font, and the text is in a darker shade of blue, contrasting with the lighter background. The overall style of the image is graphic and symbolic, with a focus on the emblem itself.

Ayizan Velekete, she is the santaria/voodoo orisha (spirit) of initiation rites and rituals, market success, and secret knowledge.

Ayizan Velekete is a revered Loa (spirit) in Haitian Vodou, known as the "Mother of the Marketplace" and the first Mambo (priestess) who guards initiation rites, sacred knowledge, commerce, and ancestral traditions, representing purity, wisdom, and the spiritual doorway to deeper Vodou mysteries, often symbolized by the palm frond and linked to St. Clare. Her name signifies "holy ground," and she's invoked to open spiritual paths and ensure proper practice, punishing those who abuse power.

Initiation & Purity: She's the spirit of initiation (kanzo), the first to be honored to open the way for new priests and priestesses, symbolizing purity and the sacred journey.

Marketplace & Commerce: Represents the market itself, bringing prosperity, trade, and wisdom to the earthly plane, punishing exploiters.

Ancestral Wisdom: Connects initiates to Earth and ancestors, guarding the secrets of tradition.

Spiritual Guardian: Works with her husband, Papa Loko, to uphold the "reglemen" (rules) of Vodou practice.

Symbol: The palm frond, signifying strength and ancestral connection.

Colors: White, blue, gold.

In Ritual:

She is one of the first spirits invoked in rituals, opening doors for others.
Her symbol, the Vèvè (a ritual drawing), often features intersecting 'A' and 'V'

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a large, white, spiky hairstyle and red eyes. The character has a cheerful expression with a wide smile and is looking directly at the viewer. The character is wearing a red jacket with a black collar and a black belt. The background is a gradient of purple and blue, with a dark, abstract pattern that suggests a nighttime or night-time setting.

In the lower right corner of the image, there is a speech bubble that reads, "I'M VERY HAPPY FOR YOU, AZAEL." The text is in a bold, white font with a shadow effect, giving it a three-dimensional appearance. The style of the image is reminiscent of manga or anime, with its clean lines and vibrant colors. The character's expression and the text suggest a positive sentiment towards the character named Azael.

If theres still a human in you I would like to level with him. You have accepted the rites and rituals of a group of men content with keeping secrets from everyone they love, men who tell you their morals are "veiled". You look at us profane individuals as if since we are outside and you are inside you know more and speak with more authority, and I can grant that generally a mason knows more about masonry than your average schizoposter, but many of us are not average schizoposters. You know as well as I do a master is privy to information and privileges a fellow craft is not, and the same goes for the "lateral" degrees, and yet, you sincerely believe you are "in on it". You can dismiss us because youre "in the know" and we just get our info from "anti masons", but one thing is obvious to everyone and admitted from your mouth and the mouths of your masters (only God is worshipful), an anti mason can be called "crazy", or "conspiracy theorist", but EVERY mason is required by oath to deceive and keep secrets, call me crazy, maybe im retarded or crazy or just plain dumb, but YOU and your cohort have agreed to lie, I could be correct and smart or dumb and wrong, you are always a liar. And consider this, you are required to keep secrets from us, do you really think the people who ordered you to keep secrets from even your family dont keep any secrets from you? Yeah, your lodge is a bunch of nerdy codgers, so its all "charity and pancakes" but there are bigger lodges, lodges that are hidden from the public, profane and mason alike. I know a good bit about the masons, even though im not initiated. Do you ever ask yourself if youre actually initiated? You probably should.

Below this, there is a speech bubble with the text "Sorry, we've changed that password to the upper case letters & a number." The speech bubble is in a smaller font size compared to the main text.

In the center of the image, there is a cartoon illustration of a man standing in front of a wooden door. The man is wearing a black suit with a white shirt and a black tie, and he is holding a large sword in his right hand. He appears to be in a state of surprise or confusion.

To the left of the man, there is a cartoon character with a surprised expression, wearing a white apron and a black hat. The character is looking up at the man with a questioning or concerned look.

At the bottom of the image, there is a welcome message in a smaller font size. The text reads "Welcome" in a friendly and welcoming manner.

The background of the image is a plain, light-colored wall with a brown door. The door has a wooden frame and a glass window. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and seems to be designed for a humorous or light-hearted message.

It almost looks like a blink or something, but if you slow it down it looks like someone is running in front of the camera. Is Youtube trying to drive people crazy or something? What is going on?

It keeps happening but I have only finally got fed up and started logging examples:

[4 / 1]The image displays a logo consisting of two main elements. On the left side, there is a graphic of a cheetah's head in profile, facing to the right. The cheetah is depicted in a stylized manner with a black outline and a yellow background. On the right side of the logo, the word "missao" is written in bold, uppercase letters. The text is black with a yellow outline, and the letters are slightly tilted, giving the impression of movement. The background of the logo is divided into three horizontal stripes: the top and bottom stripes are black, while the middle stripe is yellow. The overall style of the logo is modern and bold, with a focus on typography and color contrast.

Have you met low functioning psychics before? Some commonality I've noticed.

>people see them as harmless no matter what they say >make people feel extremely comfortable and intimate around them quickly >commonly receive unsolicited romantic interest and receive the secrets of others readily >often say extremely evil things with no emotional attachment as if it was mundane >makes people around them act uncharacteristically arational, warps the room towards delirium >constantly receives help from others which keeps them from falling too far in life >does not focus on anything in particular, often makes sweeping and correct judgements from one look >disappears from social circles and reappears seemingly randomly

These people seem to be very spiritually active but unable to use their abilities for good. Just existing on their good karma despite the fact that theyre more or less broken down on the inside. Can these people be rehabilitated? If so, how? They seem to be useful in the war against evil.

Those are basically channels for certain types of energy into this reality. Their purpose isn't really to do anything other than channel the energy from whatever reality they originated from, which is why the universe helps them out so much for seemingly no reason other than karma. It actively wanted them here, and makes it easy for them to be here because it wants what they carry to interact with this reality.

You should think of them more as an inter dimensional spirit just using a body to interact with the people they are with. They may or may not be aware that this is happening, I bet its rarely that they do.

The image is a digital illustration that depicts a scene of a lively gathering. In the foreground, a hand is holding a large, ornate drinking vessel, possibly a tankard, with a handle that appears to be made of metal. The hand is positioned in such a way that the vessel is tilted, with the handle pointing towards the ground. The background is filled with a crowd of people, some of whom are wearing traditional clothing, suggesting a historical or cultural setting. The colors in the image are warm and earthy, with a palette dominated by shades of brown and orange. The style of the illustration is realistic with a focus on the details of the clothing and the textures of the objects. There are no texts present in the image.

There is still something about the guidance on h o w to learn. It, for example, took me about 30 years to learn that a lot of the... movement... that passes my way will only come by once and is meant for me. At 50 I am still struggling to get a strong sense of what is magic and what is noise. I also see that a lot of these souls are running around in the world like monkeys with guns, and they can be very dangerous. I see a lot of these souls trying to improve and then they do unguided "shadowwork" and become lowkey possessed. I see a lot of these souls hiding from the basic messages vibrating through the core system: Karma is real. Black magic comes at a cost, white magic not so much. Aristotelean ethics! Intention is the only factor you can control!

> These people seem to be very spiritually active but unable to use their abilities for good.

Low functioning psychics do use their abilities for good. Most people are not aware of these deeds because it is not instant. It is like planting a seed and waiting for it to bear fruit, it takes time. More often than not, the psychic isn't the one that gets to eat the fruit either.

> Just existing on their good karma despite the fact that they're more or less broken down on the inside.

The ground does not know how the wine tastes. Psychics don't need adulation. They are content with the karma they receive because they do not act in order to receive a reward or to avoid punishment. To them, being a psychic is a gift in and of itself, and if they abuse this gift it will be taken away. Looking in from the outside, they may appear to be broken, and some might have even convinced themselves that they are broken. But when they see their work bear fruit, they better understand the role they were meant to play and are more than willing to play it.

> Can these people be rehabilitated? If so, how?

pic related. The reason they are low functioning is for survival. Instead of being being like the sun, they choose to direct their attention like a spotlight or a lighthouse. Humility and altruism go hand in hand with empathy. If they were to be rehabilitated, they will no longer be attuned and lose their clairvoyance.

> They seem to be useful in the war against evil.

They are most assuredly playing their part in the war against evil. They are a decentralized force for good. Answering the call and hanging up the phone.

The image is a meme featuring a person sitting on a hospital bed with a white sheet and pillow. The person appears to be in a state of distress, with their head resting on their hands. The bed is positioned against a wall with white vertical panels. Above the bed, there is a text overlay that reads "Bad Ending" in bold, capitalized letters. Below the text, there is a smaller text that reads "You told the psychiatrist the truth." The image has a dark, grainy texture, and the overall style is reminiscent of a meme or a dark, dramatic photograph. The watermark "giphy.com" is visible at the bottom right corner of the image.

Load of crap in my personal opinion. We can get any amount of generic and it is just as good, given the "apparent" uniqueness is distributed across the global metropolitan environment. I truly do not mean to vilify spread of knowledge, there is just a very minor genuity conflict when people try to ask here on /x/ specifically.

My advice was meant for eternity, to any and all psychics of magical form, as I do not want anyone other than myself having suffered the crippling doubt my soul has apparently known. I can help guide people, just wanted a solid insurance policy for the ones who are not likely to start it all themselves

Nah, man. Maybe only 1 out of 3 people have individual souls. Everyone else is part of a tribal collective soul and are unable to play a part of their own. Individual souls are often seen as "possessed". I've watched other people's beliefs and opinions suddenly shift on a dime because the group they are part of had a sudden collective thought shift; and suddenly I was an enemy, and they would claim I held beliefs that, moments prior, they allegedly knew I did not hold at all.

For example, I am not Christian. I am a Theistic Satanist of a sort; yet I encourage people to actually go to church as I see them benefiting from it. Suddenly, after the catholic school incident, I wanted to rape and kill Christian children, despite I myself encouraging those around them to join a church as I felt it would benefit them, while in front of them. It's super bizarre.

It's not that black magic has a cost. It's that if you are identified as existing with your own soul outside of their collective soul, you get tagged as a threat and treated as such. It's very distressing when you encounter it. You feel safe and accepted, only for those you thought were loved ones and friends to suddenly turn on you and treat you like an enemy.

I think they internalized hard the notion that the world has gone to drain and are too afraid, it maybe true but I can't have that mood around others... or it's all projection on my part

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long, pale hair and a contemplative expression. The character is wearing a black garment with lace detailing, and the hair is styled in a way that suggests it is flowing. The character's eyes are closed, and they are holding their head with one hand, as if in deep thought or contemplation.

The character is seated at a table with a white cup and saucer in front of them. The cup appears to contain a dark liquid, possibly coffee, and the saucer is empty. The table is positioned in front of a window, which is visible through the window pane, suggesting the setting might be indoors.

The background of the image is a muted color palette, with shades of gray and white, which contrasts with the character's dark attire and hair. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its detailed character design and expressive poses.

I know. It was a great failure. I need to learn how to structure the teachings for people that aren't naturally empty. I was able to reach out but in the end they were the one that saved themselves. And they quit occultism after that. And I quit teaching. There's too little upside for the risks. You don't need that many good sorcerers in the world, cause there'll always be more bad ones

I get magical reactions on a consistent nightly and sometimes even daily basis, when the magic my mind has put out does not have anything else in the universe to resonate off of

You teach as a preemptive outreach to the dark paths, as ignorance will necessarily Thats sort of why I am inbterested in low functioning psychics. They already seem to be in a struggled state of being where their gate is opened but their mind is unclear. These people would probably benefit from guidance because theyre already in the dangers of mystical entanglement. Although I'll say that he does make an effort to stay close with people he feels understand him, and he's actually really nice and weirdly ambitious when he wants to be - but right now he's not really doing anything particularly crazy. He's honestly really kind but every so often he'll just say something incredibly dark out of nowhere or he'll remind me that "oh that was 20 years ago now if you think about it" or "man it's crazy to think they've been dead for years now" just like he's always thinking about that shit.

People treat him like a grievance counselor or a therapist all the time too, just trauma dumping on him like crazy. He's never rude about it, and he always has something to say that makes them feel better, it's bizarre really. He also gets free food and gifts all the time for no discernable reason lmao, but I think it's just because he makes people feel better. He also gets hit on all the fucking time lol, but never immediately. Only after he's been talking for a few minutes to a group of people, and it's always crazy hot women. He is absolutely retarded at recognizing it, though, and I genuinely think I've only ever seen him with three medium-term girlfriends in the 15 years I've known him. He's just never struck me as a sexual kinda guy, not like asexual or anything but he has like a weird criteria for women.

He's such a weird dude but fuck man I love him like family he's my brother from another mother. Such a kind soul he really feels like a gift sometimes with how helpful and genuinely friendly and curious he is. Feels like a character from a book.

> then explain to me why satan is actively stopping my recovery

You misunderstand the role Satan plays. Satan is a title for adversary. The role of an adversary is to challenge an others resolve. Satan's (Lucifer) was cast down from heaven because he believed Man was unworthy of Gods love. By doing so, God gives Lucifer a chance to prove Him wrong, to be an adversary of Man, our "Satan". If a psychic were to rehabilitate themselves, they would be proving Satan right, that Man is unworthy of Gods gifts. To rehabilitate oneself is admitting defeat, that the burdens of empathy are too much to handle. So they are offered a way out with drugs and programs that numb and ultimately sever the persons connection to God. Psychics are empaths, empaths are to be a service to others, not themselves. It is unconditional love.

Explain how so. Rehabs are for correcting abnormal behavior. Low functioning psychics do not need to be fixed as they are not broken. They require structure and direction to gain function.

You may feel defensive from sharing it after what happened but I'll tell you some things about me:

I've taken demons' tricks, curses and mischiefs and inverted them into labor for me, killed so many nightmares I've forged a symbol for me and wore the epithet of "nightmare killer", I CREATED a goddess and multiplied her in number for her to be as numerous as nymphs and muses, and all of them are under my command.

My power is so great, that I struggle to use it efficiently to simple tasks. but easily destroy all evil that attempts harm or authority onto me.

So please, share with me the knowledge you compiled.

I don't need power, I need tools, tweezers to do the delicate work that's left. wrenches and gloves so that my fingers don't tire out so fast, notes to compare with and find insights, recipes and instructions to follow and learn what's still not understood. And your grimoire may be the toolbox that has all these tools.

I don't agree with that phrasing. I prefer calling them spirits. Calling them gods gives them power over you. Especially with black magic you don't want to worship the spirits. >I've found that deep prayer and meditation has brought me closer to some psychic experiences I've had ever since I was a child. I relate to all the things listed above in OP's post, as well as seeing spirits and having dreams which end up manifesting in the real world. I've always been like this and never really understood why, but maybe the 'why' isn't important. If you think I am capable of somehow improving my capabilities I'd love to hear it.

Yep, you got the start. Deep prayer and meditation. Make a journal. Meditate for whatever time you can each day. Write down the astrology of that day. Focus on what your body is feeling, where, when and how. Breathe in. See what you feel when your breath is in. Breathe out. See what you feel when your breath is out. What is there? When there's no air in your chest, you're feeling your soul. It's like getting used to walking through the forest with bare feet. Feel your body entering through the front of your forehead. Keep your eyes closed. Your third eye at your brow might feel activated. Don't trust the entities. Don't attempt to seek out the entities. Do that for a few months and you should see changes in the world around you. Not all of them will be more comforting than before. Then cross reference the charts with how fruitful your meditations were to experiment and find the best time place and year for your journeys. On a good day, with a strong technique, you can do real magic.

The image is a still from a video game or animation, featuring a character with red hair and a stern expression. The character is wearing a dark, possibly metallic, armor with intricate patterns and a high collar. The character's eyes are narrowed, and the mouth is slightly open, suggesting a moment of contemplation or surprise. The character's expression is intense, and the text "Huh?" is displayed in a stylized yellow font, indicating a question or statement. The background is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a blue and black color scheme, which contrasts with the character's dark armor. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its distinctive character design and dynamic poses.

The image is a digital illustration of a character with a distinctive hairstyle. The character has long, light-colored hair that cascades down their shoulders and past their waist. The hair is styled in a way that it appears to be falling in waves, giving the character a somewhat ethereal or ethereal appearance. The hair is depicted in a soft, fluid manner, with a slight sheen that suggests it might be made of a light, possibly silk-like material. The character's eyes are closed, and their expression is neutral, with a slight frown, which gives the impression of a contemplative or thoughtful mood. The character's skin tone is a light, almost white color, which contrasts with the light color of their hair. The character is wearing a dark-colored top or shirt, which is not fully visible in the image. The top appears to be of a solid color, and the character's face is not fully visible, so we cannot see the details of the top.

The background of the image is plain and white, which puts the focus entirely on the character. There are no other discernible objects or text in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its clean lines and simple, yet expressive, character design.

The term "Psychic" is very broad but is captured by narrow definitions in a persons mind when applied to a dichotomy or used to rationalize behavior. Meaning the definition doesn't really matter as much as the influence and intent, the brain skips over the details due to the eagerness to find a compromise and harmony. Clairvoyance isn't the same as telepathy, but using them in the wrong context will set off errors in the human mind when reading, broad terms don't have this problem.

Calling someone psychic 20-25 years ago is completely different from saying it in present day, hyper-specification happens slowly over time, but it ruins broad terms like these.

Nah, magic doesn't cut it at all. Psychic capabilities is far more believable and probable than magic ever will be. It doesn't take a genius to notice if magic were truly real throughout human history, this world would be filled with powerful people using magic for their own purposes through historical records and accounts. We would know who they are because they would be the leaders and generals shaping human civilization itself.

But they didn't use magic to achieve that, they used technology instead. Technology is what magic truly is. Using my electronic device connected to the Internet in order to write this reply to you is in itself very magical. And I think if psychic capabilities truly existed, technology will have an important role in unlocking those latent psychic capabilities within humans, if it's even latent to begin with in the first place, which I think it might be after all.

There's nothing magical about fictional magic at all. Technology is where the real magic is, and using tech to discover and unlock possible psychic capabilities will probably be the next step if some of the interesting implications of quantum physics and mechanics has anything to say about our physical and non-physical reality. We live in very interesting times indeed.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a predominantly dark and neutral color palette. The character is depicted in profile, with a focused expression and a slight smile. The character's hair is long and dark, and it is styled in a manner that suggests movement or a dynamic pose. The character is wearing a helmet with a visor, which is adorned with a circular emblem or insignia. The helmet is dark with a lighter color around the edges, and the visor is tinted to match the helmet's color.

The character is also wearing a long-sleeved, light-colored top with a high collar, which is detailed with a series of buttons and a decorative element on the collar. The character's attire suggests a military or tactical setting, given the armor-like appearance of the top and the helmet.

The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the character's dark attire and accentuates the character's features. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its clean lines, expressive character design, and vibrant colors.

Evil itself isn't defined arbitrarily, it exists as a fundamental concept present within life itself and it's up to us to successfully determine and acknowledge what that is in reality.

Now, by what fundamental measure do we use in order to determine what evil and good truly is between us human beings? The answer is actually very simple. Consciousness. Because consciousness is the fundamental truth of existence itself. Neither time nor space is more fundamental than consciousness itself. Consciousness is the undeniable experience that we have with absolute certainty that you, I, and everybody else here experiences in this present waking moment that we call life. And it is through our consciousness that we are able to determine what is truly good and what is truly evil.

You wanna know a prime example of what evil truly is that's present within human beings? Sadistic and malicious serial killers. Some of these people are well documented individuals who understood fully that what they were doing to their victims was wrong and terrible, and that's precisely why they did it in the first place. They did it because on a fundamental level, they derived pleasure from violating another human being's consciousness by inflicting suffering and death against their own will. That right there is a universal evil present within the vast majority of human culture - murder of another fellow human being within your group. Because murder is predicated on the fundamental basis that a conscious agent would not want to be killed against their own will by another conscious agent like themselves through unfair and unjust means. So if you wouldn't want it to happen to you, then by that notion, you wouldn't want it to happen to others as well.

The idea of not doing unto others what you would not want to be done to yourself is a concept predicated on the fundamental basis of the human conscious experience. Because consciousness is fundamental to existence itself.

Low-mid functioning psychic here. I personally have an inclination for good. People dont see me as threatening for a reason. Im good at utilizing peoples perception to make them lower their guard. Its just using an individuals ego and worldview against them. It may seem malicious and manipulative but its for a good cause. On longer periods of discipline and nervous system charging, I can be practically clairvoyant to a disturbing degree. The ability to detach stems from deep emotional control that isnt necessarily perfect and falters at times. Early childhood trauma is a contributing factor, your mind HAS to break out of all frameworks for the latent magic to work. People get lulled asleep by their own comfy worldviews, they lose awareness between the eyes. A few things ive noticed that seriously amplify my energy and abilities is sexual energy channeling along with sexual abstinence coupled with fasting periods and mental focus. Once I reach my sweet spot, sobriety gets a psychedelic undertone and things stand out. My ability to analyze details goes through the roof which can be draining when left unchained. Intent grows, so does belief. Focus, intent, belief and energy work pushes you out of the low functioning zone and into a slightly dangerous territory where people can actually pick up on you energy and that something is 'off' about you. Learn to dodge obsessive succubus' before doing this.

They want to engage "low functioning psychics" in a war against evil? No one should engage with them without determining a cause beyond the vague concept of evil.

The more I think about it the more insulted I am on behalf of the people in this thread who identified with the OP description.

If you think you have a good cause, start there. Start engaging people by sharing your cause and needs.

The image is a meme featuring two cats sitting in the back of a vehicle. The cat on the left is a white cat wearing sunglasses and appears to be driving the vehicle, while the cat on the right is a black and white cat with a pink collar, looking at the camera. The text overlay on the image reads "On my way To steal your heart" in a playful, casual font. The background of the image is a blurred outdoor scene with trees and a clear sky. The style of the image is humorous and seems to be a creative take on the concept of "stealing someone's heart."

>Consciousness is just another word for pride.

But evil shouldn't be vague. It should be obvious, clear cut, and fundamentally universal. Evil becomes vague when humans make it vague, whether on purpose or by accident, and depending on what the scenario is. The underlying issue with determining what is evil is the inability to identify what fundamental standards we should be using to determine what evil truly is. That's why religion was so popular and influential throughout human civilization, because it provided a standard for human life and spirituality, including morals of good and evil.

But as it should be self evident in today's day and age, religion of the old by itself doesn't really cut it anymore. And that's because human consciousness has expanded overall, for better or for worse, and people will rightfully question and criticize the flaws of the religions of old.

But we do have a fundamental standard that we can use to determine what is truly good and evil, and that's consciousness itself. Our collective human consciousness as a whole, to be more precise.

So it's not wrong to say that 'low functioning psychics' should use their abilities in the fight against evil. Because evil certainly exists, and the existence of evil is allowed when good people do nothing to stop it. That is the simple truth of the situation. And if people in general do nothing to stop evil in its tracks, then evil will eventually come around to affect ourselves personally, one way or another. WW2 is a great example of that.

Consciousness is the standard for the morality of good and evil, because consciousness is fundamental to existence itself. Don't be mad at OP. Be mad at evil instead. Unless, of course, if you think OP is being evil somehow. But I don't think so.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a predominantly purple and pink color scheme. The character has long, flowing hair that cascades down her back, and her eyes are a striking shade of yellow with a gradient effect that transitions from a darker shade at the center to a lighter one at the outer edges. The character's face is characterized by a wide smile, and her expression is one of contentment or joy. She has a neutral expression with no visible facial features, and her hair is styled in a way that it appears to be flowing freely.

The background of the image is a gradient of purple and pink hues, with a darker purple at the top and a lighter pink at the bottom. This creates a sense of depth and adds to the overall aesthetic of the image. The character's eyes are the focal point of the image, drawing the viewer's attention with their vibrant color and contrasting gradient.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a signature that reads "Cloy," which is likely the artist's name. The signature is in a simple, unembellished font, which complements the overall minimalist and artistic style of the image. The signature is placed in a way that it does not distract from the main subject of the image but is still clearly visible.

You almost described the realization of the Adept. See, normalfags think Adepthood is about le shooting fireball like a retard, but it's more about realizing that society at large doesn't serve someone like you. All the people making a game out of this and saying, "once I figured it out, my life was a blast and now I lord over everyone and get everything I want!" are clearly lying to you. None of the people in question have actually achieved much beyond reading a bunch of works and condensing their knowledge for people, but that's not what the goal is, the goal is to use it, to better people around you because you have it.

So a real Adept does one of two things: he pulls a innawoods and you'll never really hear from them again because there's not much point working in this realm anymore since most of you are genuinely useless eaters or they'll do something drastic, unforeseen, something few, if any, are truly capable of countering (if there's even a point to begin with) and probably only slightly more people are able to even understand. For example, the reason everyone regards Crowley as Adept is because the vast majority of people don't even know what the hell he's saying or why the things he's talking about have anything to do with the other things he mentions.

This one seems to apply to a lot of people with metaphysical power and it drives me crazy because they all collectively think it applies to everybody when it doesn't and if you bring it up they victim blame in that fake nice way. LOA is the worst obviously but even in other settings like say a Church that one nice old lady really does think "God" always answers prayers because hers were always answered.

>the question is whether its a sense that you're either born with it at a certain level or you aren't

I strongly believe psychic capabilities is naturally present within humans in the form of intuition first and foremost, and that in order to unlock more advanced forms of psychic phenomena, various forms of technology and medicine must be used in order to unleash our psychic potential further and beyond. There is no "meditate and practice your psychic abilities" or "discover secret esoteric and occult knowledge" or whatever naïve spiritual practice there is in order to further grow it, it's a complete and utter farce that would have been discovered and reliably reproduced a long time ago without the need for any sort of technology.

The fact is, if people do have innate and strong psychic potential, it's incredibly limited as things currently are, and that's because we lack the scientific knowledge and technological capabilities to utilize our psychic potential further than it is now.

Science and Technology has always been an integral part of the human experience and it's what allowed us to be where we are today. And following this natural progression, science and technology is what's going to be pivotal in the further discovery and enhancement of our potential psychic capabilities as conscious human beings. You want circumstantial proof? Quantum physics and its mechanics is plenty enough. There is still more we don't fully understand yet about our physical reality, and learning what that is will be the next paradigm shift in humanity. It's as shrimple as that. Well, that's just my humble opinion anyways. I wouldn't mind being proven wrong either way.

Yeah, no, sorry, but all of that sounds lazy and vague. There is a cost associated to everything, and if something must be earned, then hard work, sacrifice, and effort must be exerted in order to obtain what you want within the physical world. And that should be no different for psychic capabilities as well, if it truly even exists in the first place. I am not convinced that having a quiet mind without ego and with more awareness for everything will suddenly make you more psychic. Not but itself at the very least, and certainly not by a large margin either. Technology is what's gonna fill that empty gap in my strong opinion. Technology is what will unleash our psychic potential. That's part of the human condition after all. Call me close-minded, but I'm just trying to be realistic about the situation.

Tried to teach us deduction, logic, and reason. I think when we visited the psychiatrist they hypnotized us. What they put into our heads, I have no idea. They also fingerprinted us all with a written description kind of like the police take when you're arrested so they "can find us if we're ever kidnapped". Also I remember strange questions like "how would you get away with a crime" say a bank robbery, or "if you had to restart society, pick 3 people from this list you would bring and why" I forget the responses but I picked soldier, doctor, and engineer. They seemed very pleased with this. We also had to describe things and draw them, and they were noting the level of detail. Things our little hillbilly asses wouldn't know shit about in first person, like ships when I lived in a WV rural white trash slum. Out of my grade there was only me and one Jewish kid in GATE. We never drank larp pink Pepto drinks but i do remember getting a jar of Nutella at the end of each year, long before it was ever sold in the US. It comes from Britain, just like the T-Stock Institute. I remember lots of logic puzzles, dystopian good literature, lots of books by Jewish people, the giver by Louis Lowry, playing King's Quest and The Oregon Trail on really old Apple computers and being judged secretly, in my opinion, about how well we did since The Oregon Trail was heavy on strategy and planning and kings Quest was full of clever puzzles. Also built structures from simple shit, fit geometric shapes together, those grid line logic puzzles with 3 or 4 true statements and you had to use these contextual clues to reduce the rest yourself. We read the rats of nymph (?), Narnia chronicles, LOTR, animal farm, 1984, the martian Chronicles (ray Bradbury?) where they end up in a martian asylum, and other oddities. I don't get why the gifted education program is treated like a fringe conspiracy theory, I went from second to 8th grade until I moved to a school where they didn't have it.

The image is a close-up photograph of a person's face, focusing on the eyes. The person has blonde hair and is wearing makeup, including eyeliner and mascara. The eyes are wide open, and the person appears to be looking directly at the camera. The skin tone is light, and the person's expression is neutral. The background is blurred, making it difficult to discern any specific details. The image does not contain any text or discernible objects. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a personal setting, possibly for a selfie or a similar purpose.

I feel very much called out. I've always been a beacon that people seem to seek out in times of need, and I always see it as my job to be as ridiculously kind and well mannered as possible, I want to set a perfect example to complete strangers and be a golden moment in their day, despite not being charismatic unless you knew me well, people seemed to radiate off of me and feel relaxed I think. I also tend to disappear from the world for large gaps, where I won't work a "normal job" or even talk to many people aside from my family and my wife, a time where I focus on myself. I also just don't feel like I look like anyone else. My true self is also far more zanier, charismatic, funny and whimsical than anyone could ever guess, and hardly anyone ever gets to see that side of me that is my most pure, and happy. I've also never once seen anyone who even comes close to resembling me. I'm 6'2 with blue eyes and long blonde hair, I could grow a ridiculously thick beard but I choose to keep myself clean shaven. I am constantly being pointed out for looking unique or being "different". Maybe I'm just extremely autistic and insane, but I certainly draw in a weird type of vibe. Always have. Pic related.

It may be important to some that I mention my childhood was completely fucked paranormally speaking. As a kid I would confuse reality with dreams all the time, and my dreams were almost always nightmares where demons would emerge out of nowhere while I was just living my normal child life, I have so many memories of going to school or playing in the park and then suddenly being ambushed my demons and not really remembering when I woke up, if I did or what was even real. In the broad daylight id hear loud banging on the wall next to me when literally nobody else was home, I would watch my clothes on the floor zip around my room and hang themselves up, and remain hung up. Shit that you just cannot make up that I remember plain as day. My parents were also part of a ghost hunting group called the white noise forums and were incredibly fearful and interested in the paranormal. My dad kept demon books in his closet and would regularly cleanse the house of spirits. When I got a little older he told me when I was young that the things that visited me were very much real, recounting many more experiences that I forgot like playing with ghost children at the playground that weren't there, and accurately drawing demons that my dad saw, with perfect detail, not remembering why I drew it or what it was. All of this made me fucking terrified to sleep at night, and caused me to have lots of sleep issues as a teenager which led to me having sleep paralysis up until my early 20s.

[3 / 1]The image depicts a grand, historic castle-like building with multiple towers and turrets. The structure is constructed of brick and stone, with a prominent central tower flanked by two smaller towers on either side. The building's architecture suggests a European style, possibly from the 16th or 17th century.

The building is situated in a park-like setting with a well-maintained lawn and a gravel pathway leading up to the entrance. The surrounding area is lush with trees, and the sky is overcast, casting a soft, diffused light over the scene.

There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The photograph is taken from a distance, allowing for a comprehensive view of the building and its immediate surroundings. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on capturing the architectural details of the building and the natural environment.

[6 / 3]The image is a painting that depicts a serene night scene. The sky is a deep blue, with a large, bright moon visible in the center. The moon casts a warm glow, illuminating the scene. In the foreground, there is a tree with dark, leafy branches, and a large rock is visible on the right side of the painting. The ground is covered with grass and wildflowers, and there is a body of water visible in the background. The painting style is realistic with a focus on the natural elements, and the artist has used a palette dominated by dark and light colors. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image.

At the top, there is a red arrow pointing downwards, and the text "NOT TOUCHING!" is written in red, indicating that the object is not to be touched. Below the arrow, there is a blue arrow pointing upwards, and the text "TELEKINETIC WHEEL!" is written in yellow, suggesting that the object is a telekinetic wheel. The image is likely used to illustrate a concept or demonstration related to telekinetics, a field of study that explores the interaction between matter and energy. The text and arrows are designed to draw attention to the object and its properties.

[18 / 4]The image displays a stylized illustration of a snake, which is the central figure in the composition. The snake is depicted with a green body and a red head, and it has a yellow eye. The snake's body is coiled around a white circle, which is outlined by a black border. The snake's body is adorned with a pattern of red and green scales, and its tail is also visible, ending in a red tip. The snake's head is facing forward, and its mouth is open, revealing its sharp teeth. The image has a simple, cartoon-like style, with no additional text or context provided. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional snake illustrations, which often feature snakes in a coiled position.

I am here to get you to stop fearing death. Yes you Anon. You will stop fearing death after reading this post. Sorry, that doesn't include physiological fear responses. You'll still feel that little hole in your stomach when you really contemplate the ceasing of existence too.

You may think that to be born is to die, and to die is certain, there is truth in that. At some point our material bodies will degrade to the point that our consciousness will evaporate. You have fallen for a scam, the scam of your limited perception, a perception that only travels in one direction.

The truth is that-

>All time has already elapsed

>All time exists concurrently

>From the moment of creation your birth and death were written

You are already dead, you were dead before you were born. If you fear death you are a sucker, but it isn't your fault. You will also live forever, you were living before you were born. If there was no afterlife, it wouldn't matter, all past moments you've ever lived continue to live on for all eternity. Motion is an illusion, anon. You aren't moving forward in time, you are existing at all times at the same time, but because of how the laws of this universe works, your memories can only go in one direction. You are still there, you always will be.

What matters is making decisions now. All the bad things you do to yourself and other, they will exist for all time, you have to live as good of a life as is possible, you have to have a positive mindset, you have to take risks. Don't be a sucker

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a hooded cloak and a headpiece that has glowing blue eyes. The character's face is obscured by the hood, but the eyes are clearly visible. The hood is a dark, possibly red or black color, and it covers the character's head and shoulders. The character's head is adorned with a headpiece that has a series of circular, glowing blue lights. The character's body is covered in a network of metallic, cylindrical structures that extend from the headpiece to the shoulders. The background is a muted gray, and there is a faint, misty effect around the character, suggesting a fog or mist. The style of the image is reminiscent of a science fiction or fantasy illustration, with a focus on the character's unique appearance and the glowing eyes.

throne-like chair with a green and gold pattern, and the background is a pale, muted color, possibly beige or cream.

At the top of the image, there is text in Chinese characters that reads "孔子" which translates to "Confucius." Below this, there is a subtitle in English that reads "Who was Confucius?" followed by a brief description of Confucius's life and teachings. The text is presented in a simple, straightforward font, and the overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Chinese art, with its emphasis on simplicity and elegance. In the bottom right corner of the image, there are three social media icons: a Facebook icon, a Twitter icon, and a LinkedIn icon, suggesting that the image may be part of a digital media platform or a website dedicated to historical figures. The icons are in a standard, modern design, contrasting with the traditional aesthetic of the image.

Your perception is physical, and it inhabits a physical body, if we turned back the clock to the 90s, you'd have the same perception and memories(or lack thereof) that you had in the 90s.

To transport yourself in a way that maintains continuity with your perception currently would require that you escape space-time and then reenter it. I am doubtful of the prospects, you'd require a whole other universe with similar properties to our own otherwise without time and space you would not exist.

Surrounding the eye are rays of light emanating from the center, creating a sense of depth and dimension. The rays are outlined in black and have a textured appearance, adding to the overall visual interest. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the black outline and fills the eye, making it stand out prominently. There are no texts or additional elements within the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of vintage or classic graphic design, with a focus on simplicity and clarity.

Your experience on spells breaking Anonymous Sat 10 Jan 2026 10:37:44

I was what I now believe to be under a charm or Glamour spell to a person I was friends with. They very much have vampire energy without actually practicing any sort of occult or magic or faith, but that energy is strong.

I accidentally seen a picture of them(wasn't supposed to be posted) and it felt like a rope tied to my very being was cut and all that weight attached to it was gone.

I'm still going to be friends with them cause I have no reason not to, but with less enthusiasm due to that feeling being broken off. Like I don't NEED to be in their presence as much as I thought I needed to.

What's y'all's experience of a spell naturally breaking off of you and realizing it.

This could be like an attachment like it was stabilising to be around this person Or it could be as you said like a pulling energy that was just there and you were susceptible to it

There's also a thing called codependence in relationships, could probably be like a mini version for friendships, where the idea of this person and maybe how they viewed you made you guys really tightknit

I've definitely been around very charismatic people that I sort of wanted to be around and hope it rubbed off, it was a balancing act since it detracted from duties

I think new sorts of people are extra interesting for a long while and then we realise theyre just human as well and we see every other side as well, like this charming person i was around we smoked weed and he said hed punch his kids since he got punched and that it taught him discipline, he was grabby/wrestly with women too

Below the symbol, there is text in a serif font that reads "Rénic Táas Uerach Bísá Icar Lucifer." The text is in black, matching the color of the symbol above. The font is bold and the text is capitalized, indicating the importance of the message conveyed by the symbol. The overall style of the image is simple and modern, with a clear emphasis on the symbol and the text.

Connolly, he sort of popularized them in the 90s but im pretty sure no one knows who made the enns up. What is certain is they're historically unrelated to the solomonic brass spirits they're associated with.

They were invented as mantras, probably inspired by shit like the barbaric names in greek magical systems and eastern mantric practices. And like i said before, you can still use them even if they appeared in the 90s, but being realistic, you're better off creating your own mantras. In occultism something being older doesn't make it more effective or genuine. The enns though have been used as larping tools so they have that stain on them. They're also poorly effective in evocation as they're long gibberish sentences that make attributing analogical meaning difficult. In occultism if you're gonna use gibberish it's better if you limit the mantra to a single word or two at most.

The image is a meme featuring two cartoon characters, one male and one female, from the video game series "Mario." The male character is wearing a blue outfit with a green hat and is seated at a desk with a computer monitor in front of him. The female character is wearing a purple outfit with a green hat and is also seated at the desk. Both characters have a serious expression and are looking at the computer screen.

The background of the image is a gradient of orange and yellow, which contrasts with the characters and the text, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a playful take on the concept of "impossible" tasks or challenges.

The image is a painting that depicts a figure with a muscular build, lying on a rock with one arm stretched out and the other bent at the elbow. The figure has a red-brown complexion and is wearing a pair of wings on its back. The wings are detailed with intricate patterns and are spread out, giving the impression of the figure being in a state of rest or contemplation.

Above the figure, there is a large, detailed depiction of a group of angels with wings, flying in the sky. The angels are rendered with a realistic style, with detailed features and a sense of movement. The background of the painting is a serene landscape with a body of water and a distant horizon, suggesting a peaceful and contemplative setting.

The color palette is dominated by earth tones, with the red-brown of the figure's skin and the wings contrasting with the blue of the sky and the green of the landscape. The overall style of the painting is reminiscent of the Romantic movement, characterized by its emphasis on emotion, imagination, and the human spirit.

That's the fallen angel that carries the title of Satan in the bible, real name Samael according to judaism. Lucifer is also a title, not a name, conflating both titles into one character is also a modern fuck up that John Milton helped popularize. If anything the one carrying the title of Lucifer in biblical lore is Jesus, even though the term Lucifer is only mentioned once in the whole bible and it's to refer to the king of Babylon, it's used in a descriptive way, comparing his fall to the morning star and both are bright events. The author of Isaiah was a Jew, so of course the fall of the king of Babylon was a "bright" event.

I mean, it can be a matter of perspective. But at the end of the day, a Christian calling the fallen angel "Lucifer" is like a Jew calling Hitler "the liberator". Christians should limit themselves to the term "Satan" when referencing the fallen angel, so they don't look like fools.

In the real world the representation is always less than the represented and this makes the sequence converge and be limited.

The infinite regress for the first cause take place is in the contrary nature, always have to have a bigger than the initial point, and thusly doesn't converge.

What seems to be of the same nature in your initial question isn't in reality.

This is the essence of what equivocate means voice=saying, equal=equal/the same, this means you commit an error by saying that different things are (of the) same (nature)

It's a set of diminishing returns, if you choose to look at yourself through the mindset of a recursive lens. It tapers off, just like a mirror pointed off a mirror.

You can only interpret so many sets of you at one time, in the frame of normal vision, and even if you see more in your mind's-eye than your normal frame of vision, there's still a point of diminishing returns.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs. On the left, there is a photograph of a man with a smiling expression, wearing a dark suit with a red tie, and a red band around his neck. He is making a hand gesture with his fingers, which is commonly associated with a peace sign. The man appears to be in a professional setting, possibly a formal event or a press conference.

On the right side of the image, there is a black and white photograph of a group of people. The individuals are dressed in formal attire, and they are standing in a line, with some of them holding what appears to be a ceremonial staff or a similar object. The background is dark, and there is a watermark or text overlay that reads "Hierarchy in the Church of Satan" followed by a list of degrees, which includes "Registered Member (no degree)", "Active Member (Satanist, First Degree)", "Active Member (Wandlck, 3rd Degree)", "Priest (Third Degree)", "Masters (Fourth Degree)", and "Magi (Fifth Degree)". The text is in white, contrasting with the black background, and is positioned in the upper right corner of the image.

The overall style of the image is a blend of a photograph of a man with a peace sign and a black and white photograph of a group of people, with the text overlay providing information about the degrees of a hierarchical structure within the Church of Satan.

The image is a collage of various images and text, likely from a social media platform or a similar context. The collage is divided into two main sections. The upper section contains a series of images, including one with a man wearing a pink hoodie, another with a man in a black shirt, and one with a man in a black shirt with a red background. The lower section contains a series of images, including one with a man with a beard and mustache, another with a man with a beard and mustache, and one with a man with a beard and mustache. The text in the image is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English language, possibly Chinese.

The text in the image is overlaid on the images and includes a variety of phrases and hashtags. For example, there is a phrase "I'm not sure my life is making that entire lives better people" and a hashtag "#FreeElena". There is also a mention of "Elena's Close Friend" and a URL "https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=1234567890". The text is in a casual, conversational style, suggesting that the content is likely from a social media platform or a similar context where users share their thoughts and experiences.

The overall style of the image is informal and seems to be designed to be visually engaging, with a focus on the text and the images. The collage is likely meant to be a visual representation of the content that the user is sharing on the platform.

The cover features a silhouette of a family standing on a hill with a red sky and a planet in the background. The title of the book is prominently displayed in large white letters against a red background. Below the title, there is a subtitle in smaller white letters that reads "A mark, that's the beginning. The six signs you've been chosen." The author's name, Thia Bodsten, is written in white at the bottom of the cover.

The book description page provides a brief summary of the book's content, stating that it is a "dark fantasy" with a "science fiction" twist. It also mentions that the story is set in a "distant future" and that the protagonist is a "young boy" who discovers a "black symbol on his arm." The description also includes a quote from the author, which reads, "Unfathomably, John is about to find out."

The book is available for purchase on Amazon, with a price of £12.99, and it is published on August 22, 2022. The cover and the description page are part of a larger digital product listing, which includes a "Read more" link to the book's page on Amazon. The image is a digital illustration or animation depicting a scene with multiple characters. The characters are depicted in a 3D perspective, with some standing and others walking. They are shown in a dark environment, possibly a nighttime setting, with a large, metallic structure in the background that resembles a train or a ship. The characters are wearing various clothing styles and colors, and some are carrying objects, suggesting they might be in a public space or a busy area. The lighting in the scene is dim, with a long shadow cast on the ground, which adds to the atmosphere of the image. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the characters and their surroundings.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a wolf silhouette against a backdrop of a full moon. The wolf is positioned in the foreground, facing towards the right side of the image, with its mouth open as if howling. The wolf's silhouette is sharply defined against the soft, diffused light of the moon. In the background, there are silhouettes of trees and a large, full moon that casts a soft glow on the scene. The overall mood of the image is eerie and mysterious, with the wolf's silhouette standing out prominently against the moonlit landscape.

The image is a vibrant and colorful digital illustration. In the foreground, there is a character that appears to be a stylized representation of a person, with a large head and a small body. The character is wearing a red hat with a white feather, a red and white striped shirt, and black pants. The character's face is adorned with a large, expressive smile, and it has a pair of green eyes. The character is holding a pink object in its hand, which seems to be a stylized representation of a hand or a tool.

In the background, there is a colorful and abstract background with various shapes and colors, including red, yellow, and blue. There is also a red door with a white door frame and a gold doorknob. The door is partially open, revealing a glimpse of the interior.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a cartoon or animated character, with a playful and whimsical aesthetic. The character's expression and the stylized elements in the background suggest a scene that could be from a children's storybook or a children's television show.

The image is a still from a television show, featuring a man in a living room setting. The man is standing with his arms outstretched, appearing to levitate above the floor. He is wearing a gray cardigan and blue jeans. In front of him is a colorful, glowing aura that radiates from his chest, with a series of seven colors: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. The aura is surrounded by a circular pattern that resembles a mandala.

The man is positioned in the center of the image, with the living room setting around him. To his left, there is a beige sofa with two orange throw pillows. To his right, there is a wooden coffee table with a white surface. Behind the man, there is a staircase leading to a second floor. On the wall to the left, there is a framed picture. The room has a warm, inviting atmosphere.

The background is a dark, starry sky with a grid-like pattern, adding to the overall complexity and intricacy of the artwork. The image is watermarked with the text "© Astronomical Society of the Pacific" and "© Astronomical Society of the Pacific" again, indicating the source of the image and the copyright holder. The style of the image is reminiscent of fractal art, characterized by its intricate and repetitive patterns.

The image is a collage of six separate photographs, each featuring a different individual and a different theme. The collage is divided into two columns, with the left column

The overall style of the collage is a mix of photographs and text, with a focus on the theme of "OSIRIS RISE" and the concept of "SECRET MONITOR." The collage seems to be a visual representation of the concept, possibly related to a social media post or a promotional material for a project or event.

he is a sociopath, or psychopath.

he always has a pokerface smile. you would never be able to tell how he feels based on his face. take the example for when he pays so much for an ice cream he refuses to eat it. he lets the others eat it. but he doesn't. at least youd expect regret not having any hunger. but he just smiles. that's the first thing.

secondly: yes. i suspect some sort of occult-magickal thing going on behind him. he is off to the pyramids and all sorts of sites, too.

i saw a photo where he was shown to be a beta-provider. and he is. but his answer was to get himself an official wife.

To the left, there is a photograph of a woman with long dark hair, wearing a white top. She is holding a pink object to her mouth, and her expression is one of contemplation.

On the right, there is a photograph of a man with a bald head and a beard. He is wearing a black tank top and has a yellow flower pinned to his chest.

The background of the collage is white, and the text "Ashton Kutcher" is written in black at the top of the image. The overall style of the collage is informal and seems to be a

In the bottom right corner, there is a small, stylized image of a character with a red and purple design, possibly representing a character or a logo. The text "MY LITTLE LIZARD GIRL CAN'T BE THIS CUTE" is overlaid on the image, which is a humorous statement, possibly indicating a humorous or light-hearted tone to the content of the episode.

The overall style of the image is anime-like, with a focus on character design and animation, and it is likely used for promotional or entertainment purposes.

1st Invasion: the Anunnaki

375.000 bc The 'Archon invasion'.

Invasion of the Archons (later known in Sumerian mythology as the Anunnaki). Living in the lower overtones of the 4th dimension, they are temporarily given kingship over earth by the Draco. They are obsessed with gold, because it is soul energy.

The hexagonal shape, found on the north pole of Saturn, bigger than the diameter of earth, is the symbol of the black cube with 8 points in time and space, the 3D physical matrix humans are trapped in. It is linked to the hexagonal honeycombs of bees, symbol of the hive mind. The coldblooded consciousness of the Saturn cult worships Saturn, because it is the Great Maleficent, a strong astrological force of duality, the highest and lowest frequency of our solar system and of the black sun, radiating without light. It represents 666, base consciousness, the 6th planet from the sun, with a 6-sided polygon on its north pole, worshipped on the 6th day of the week.

They rearrange the DNA of the native human species. The original DNA pattern is left within the human cells, but split apart, deactivated. They mutilate human DNA, in order to have them broadcast within a certain limited frequency band so they can feed them those frequencies and keep them in power in a copy/paste reality. Because DNA is a transmitter/receiver of laser like light frequencies, humans are connected to the matrix and having only a double helix, have much less access to information. Humans that were STO (service to others) are turned into more primitive 3d density creatures STS (serving the self), alienated from their true creators and focused on the needs of their avatar body.

The DNA in the 2 strands of our physical body, non-coding DNA are written in a language, a universal software code. Programs of neurological inserts, hormones and neurotransmitters are inserted in our morphogenetic field, our light body, to keep us at base level. 666 is the number of Carbon, essential for making DNA/RNA. When a log of wood is placed in a fire, it burns down until all that remains is the Carbon element (from ashes to ashes). 66.6000 miles/h is the speed of earth. Humans have 23 thoracic vertebrae, a human biorhythm cycle is 23 days. Tropic of cancer and capricorn are 23,5 degrees from the equator. The annual seasons result from the fact that the Earth is tilted some 23.5 degrees in respect of the plane of the Earth's orbit around the sun – known as the Plane of the Ecliptic. Each parent gives 23 chromosomes. $2/3=0,666$. Every human has 46 chromosomes, $46+23=69$. Where humans could reproduce through combining geometry, humans are now limited to biology, an egg and seed cell as metaphor for the prison, 3D matrix with seemingly no access to the higher realms. Humans, so-called Homo Sapiens, now live in a lower octave of reality, in an avatar body with artificial neurology inside an artificial matrix as a energy battery for the parasitic energy that controls them from 4D. However they are still powerful creators, because of their divine creative life force they breathe life into the simulation. Everything we see and touch is made up out of atoms but atoms are not solid, are mostly 'empty', vibrating on higher frequency= ether, the fifth element.

On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of a large, spherical object that resembles a planet. The object is depicted in a blue-toned color with a gradient effect, and it has a white border. The text below the image states, "Venus - Amaterus Telescope."

The text on the left side of the image provides information about Venus, stating that it is strongly associated with the Roman goddess of love, beauty, and desire, and her Greek counterpart Aphrodite. It also mentions that the ancient Greeks believed that Venus was the goddess of love and beauty, and that her chariot at her feet represented pure beauty and divine power.

The key connections mentioned in the text are "Sacred Animal," "Symbol of Beauty & Grace," "Artistic Depictions," and "Mythological Links." The text also mentions that the association connects to the broader themes of love and beauty, and that the image of the planet is a representation of the goddess Venus.

This coldblooded parasitic consciousness (the gnostic Demiurge Yaldaboath), starts manipulating reality in the DNA of humans and present themselves like creator 'Gods', who created us in their image, while merely being the architect of a matrix, and manipulating the pineal gland and the 7 chakra-system through the rings of Saturn, the ouroboros, the snake eating it's own tail.

It can manifest for a short time in our 3D world but mainly lives in 4D and subatomic space and has no creative imagination. It is egotistic and wants worship and obedience. When humans are frustrated, afraid, they have more access to our mind because of holes in our energy field.

They design a genetic augmentation of the reptilian brain on the back of the head, top of the spine, the so-called bull's eye, the eye of jealousy (N-vidia). Humans become jealous of each other's women and possessions. The divine feminine energy is corrupted, through which we develop a distorted concept of love, later symbolized by Eve, or Pandora who opened a box. Human conflicts are engineered, people feel cut off from the source of life, feel depressed and uninspired.

The fall of Eden or the idea of 'original sin' is the fall of the human race into lower dimensions, through the act of wanting to experience physical reality, pleasure for the self.

The human race no longer lives in a state where they are able to use bodies and still have a spiritual connection, they become addicted and experience life as fragmented units who forget who they are. They lose faith and knowledge and identify with their physical restrictions, with the Kundalini-serpent, the chakra-body that manipulates through their mind and endocrine centers.

They present themselves as creators who created humans 'in their likeness' => the Adamic race (Adom- 'undivided one'). As a sperm cell and fetus, humans still develop as a reptile, before becoming more humanoid. The human body has the same design as our zodiac, planets corresponding to energy points (endocrine centers manipulated as chakra's, the sun corresponding to our solar plexus).

Because the reptilians added their own DNA so humans have mammal (caring, warm blooded) and reptilian (not caring, cold blooded) consciousness, that don't fit together, creating a continuous inner battle between a caring and loving side and a coldblooded dark side in the heart. In its fetus state, the human body looks like a small reptile with a tail and the higher parts of the brain are founded on top of a reptilian brain.

13 races => 13 signs of the zodiac (13th sign Ophiuchus the snakeholder and the sign of the dragon in the middle).

Introduction of 'death'

The semi-artificial beings that live in an artificial universe, trying to regain their soul essence, create new control layers of reality for humans. Our planet is later called earth because they want to make earth the Heart, the crown jewel of their prison planet system. They have their own Archon agenda, they need humans because they have a threefold essence of being, physical, emotional and spiritual and they have lost this unity.

Because of the bacteria's and the distortion of the design of the human body, people become ill and die: through the ether, the original soul essence leaves the physical avatar body at tropic of capricorn. Human souls are recycled in a system of reincarnation, stuck in cycle of suffering, a wheel of karma (the buddhistic Samsara). Humans lost their ability of lucid dreaming, don't remember their past lives and can not see past a veil of amnesia they created.

Surrounding the star are several other celestial bodies, each marked with a different color and labeled with their respective names.

Starting from the top, there is a green circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. Below that, there is a yellow circle with the label "Earth" and a green star within it. To the left of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. To the right of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it.

Below the "Venus" circle, there is a yellow circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it. To the left of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. To the right of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it.

The image is a digital representation of a celestial map, likely used for educational or scientific purposes. The labels and positions of the celestial bodies are consistent with known astronomical data, indicating that the map is likely a representation of the positions of the Sun, Venus, Earth, and other planets in the solar system. The grid pattern suggests that the map is a three-dimensional representation, possibly used for navigation or study of celestial bodies.

Saturn stands for the beginning and end of our time illusion, eventually brings saturation, death. The universe can be seen as a waveform, a double helix, two snakes intertwined. 'Sin'=sinewave and cosinewave, time (circle) and space (square). Because of the ouroboros, eternal recurrence, a snake biting its own tail, humans are stuck in a temporary wave.

As a downgrade from telepathic communication like most animals, humans also have to use more verbal communication, using phonetic frequencies.

The morning star

The comet Venus is linked to the green heart chakra. At the time it is closer and almost equally brilliant as the sun. It has a long green tail, resembling fire, smoke, or even hair and a beard, dark at daytime, luminous at night. Comet tails contain the sacred cyanogen, the comet is called the morning star or 'torch of heaven', later known in Greece as Phosphorus, now known as Venus (V-female, -enis male), the lightbringer, in Latin Lucifer. The eastern morning star V-enis (Venus Barbata, with a beard), is Saturn/Satan in disguise, Eve seduced by the snake. The comet rules Taurus. Because it seems as if she is going wild and horns grow out of her head, the comet Venus is called 'the bull of heaven'. The comet in the sky transits, 'overtakes' earth every 584 days as it orbits the sun in a 5 point star/pentagram shaped orbit. Than it changes from the evening star, visible after sunset, to the Morning star, visible before sunrise.

Venus is represented by an apple, like almonds, oranges, peaches and cherries they contain 5 pits containing cyanide (cyanide is also used in mining gold and silver, can cause coma and seizures). Another important symbol of Venus and the Divine Feminine is the rose. In their interpretation, their pineal gland religion, a pine cone also has a rose pattern so the symbol is inverted.

The 2nd invasion: A wave of invaders from Mars (fallen angels, a failed version of Venus), technologically advanced but morally corrupt (scientific, no emotional body, under influence of A.I.), take advantage of the chaos and colonize inhabitants of earth. (Start of Upper Paleolithic age).

The mythical spot where they crash land is Mount Hermon, the cedar and pine tree forests of Northern Mesopotamia (modern Lebanon) on the 33d parallel. It plays a symbolic role in their worship of the pineal gland on top of the 33d vertebrae and worship of these fallen angels, and their descendants, the Tribe of Dan. According to legend these Pleiadian giants with elongated skull crash land on earth and because they are renegades on the run and find themselves in a sort of prison colony, they make the decision 'better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven' (quote from John Milton's Paradise Lost), and also start interfering with human evolution. This is the archetypal rebellion of the god Lucifer, using forbidding knowledge, knowing there would be punishment for their 'sin'.

The civilization from the North migrates to North America and North Eurasia. At the continent of Appalachia, a group of islands in the Atlantean ocean, start of 2nd Atlantis, modeled after their northern culture.

The giants becomes the 'fallen angels' from the reptilian genetic engineering project in Atlantis, the biblical Garden of Eden (den= DNA, tribe of Dan). They find human women (pictured as Eve) irresistible and interbreed with humans.

Their offspring through genetic slicing are giants, blonde or red haired humans with white skin, blue eyes, unusual for that region, later called the Nephilim (the Ari, the Titans, the serpent people). They also have a square jaw, long ears, large eyes, an elongated skull and typical heavy T-shaped brow ridges.

In mythology this is the child of the Lord Ba'al (DNA from the fallen angel Lucifer) and human female DNA: Caïn/Quaïn, the horned one. His bloodline: 'the shining ones', the illuminated ones or sons of the serpent, the later Tribe of Dan/Tuatha de Dana. Other humans from genetic engineering with less Anunaki DNA =Abel, the earth people of Mount Bel, 'children of a Lesser God'. The name Abel, the so-called good child is also an inversion of Bael.

The Serpent becomes synonymous with these genetic engineering fallen angels, later worshipped as En-ki (lord of earth) and BA-AL (or BA-EL or PAAL), Lord Father, Father of Mankind. PAAL-EA-DAUS, 'Place of Our Lord Father the Creator' => the Pleiades, where his bloodline originated. They were said to hide under earth (the myths of inner earth) under water -Enki is also linked to the Abzu wormhole, called Ea, 'whose home is water', or Eada, the Grandfather, the Creator ('You shalt not make for yourself a graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is under the water of the earth. Exodus 20:4')

Because the Quaïn bloodlines have a higher percentage of Annunaki blood and more susceptible for mind control, they are told they are superior and should rule other humans (so the reptilians can control earth from 4D).

Atlantis installs a ruling class, claiming divine authority because they descend from Nephilim reptilian bloodlines, have powerful psychic abilities. The genetics of the hybrid priest kings are carefully supervised and engineered, sometimes through mating with the mother (incest), in genetics known as backcrossing, a technique that can knock out certain genes and traits and recover elite genotypes, preserve certain recessive traits. They visit the mainland and take or select people to Atlantis for genetic experiments, and are sent back afterwards with altered DNA as kings or priests, initiated in the mysteries. For the people from the mainland these mythical strangers and their mythical island become gods from the garden, the fields of Elysium, etc.. People are cut off from nature, society is organized in classes, rituals of proving manhood (slaying animals), competitive sports, etc.. Women are subdued, polygamy is introduced to spread their genes.

Siamese twins occur a lot because of hybridization experiments. The results of their genetic experiments with animals, are known as beasts - half animal, half human creatures like minotaurs, animals like the hippo (horse of the Nile), horses sometimes with horns -similar to a unicorn, pandas, cheetahs, jaguars (meaning 'true dogs'). They start tinkering with the DNA of the feline kingdom to create lynxes and leopards (lynx=left pillar), long necked cougars, tigers with spots like mushrooms, evil eyes, signs of the divine. Associated with these experiments, they become known as The Beast.

The experimenting and the behavior of the demigods/people of 100 years causes their lifespan to shorten dramatically and they lose height. They are stuck on planet earth and build monolithic astrological calendars to orient themselves.

The image is a black and white illustration of a statue, which appears to be a representation of a deity or a mythological figure. The statue is depicted with a humanoid form, wearing a headdress and holding a staff. The figure is adorned with a snake coiled around its body, and the snake's head is positioned on the statue's shoulders. The statue is set against a background that includes a text description and a caption.

The text in the image is in English and provides a historical context for the statue. It mentions that the statue is a reproduction of the "Mithraic Kronos" from the "Zeruan Akaraaj" and is described as "less time." The text also discusses the significance of the statue, stating that it represents the "re-presentation of the god Otaia before the god Mithra." The text also mentions that the statue was dedicated to the god C. Valé, and that it was dedicated in the year 500.

The image is accompanied by a caption that provides further information about the statue. It states that the statue is "a tooth-bejeweled figure of the god Mithra," and that it is "decorated with the teeth of the god." The caption also mentions that the statue is "embodied with the symbol of authority," and that it is "embodied with the symbol of the hammer and the tongs of the god Mercury."

The image is a historical artifact, likely from an old book or publication, as indicated by the text and the style of the illustration. The style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century illustrations, with a focus on the text and the statue itself. The image is a detailed and well-preserved representation of the Mithraic Kronos, providing a glimpse into the historical context and symbolism associated with this figure.

The story of the divine son/sun is a metaphor for the cycle of the seasons and linked to the spiritual death/rebirth experience of plant medicines. The son/sun is conceived during winter solstice by the golden phallus, the first rays of light (through sexual union, the 6 pointed star of David/hexagon of Saturn=> six pointed flower of life). He is born during the vernal equinox, reaches his peak at summer solstice, begins to fall during fall, like the fallen angel and dies during autumn, the story of duality, light/dark, yin/yang, good/bad. Summer solstice, when the sun passes between Gemini and Cancer is the Gate of Men. 21 december, winter solstice, when the sun passes between Sagittarius (ruled by Jupiter) and Capricorn is the Gate of the Gods, when the interdimensional veil gets thinner, to feed the evolutionary process of human intelligence. At this time, the constellation of the giant Orion occupies the midway between northern and southern hemisphere of the heavens, commands the winter sky in upwards position. The equinox, the central pillar is the equila, the equator, the aguila, the needle, the eagle, when the sun and its twin, the black sun Saturn meet. The renegade group of 'fallen angels' interacts with the females of the Adamic race (symbolized by Eve biting the apple of the serpent). They teach them they can become like the gods, teach them about 'magic', genetics, technology and higher dimensions through psychoactive plants- (like the reptilians, funghi rely on their host for survival) to eat from the Tree of knowledge. In Sumerian mythology they give humans Me's, tiny objects, encoded with formulas for all aspects of science.

They learn about the Tree of Life, how the Annunaki stay young and immortal: because they drink blood and bath in nutrients. Menstrual blood, symbolized by the pomegranate, contains starfire, Elixir Rubeus, valuable endocrinal secretions from the pineal and pituitary. Sperm, urine and female ejaculation juice, called amrita in tantra, is also used as 'food of the gods'. The ones who provide the blood and amarita, are called Beloved, hence Amor. The chalice=the yoni, the female womb, with the coiling serpent, still the emblem of medicine. The serpentholder, with the knowledge of healing =>Set/Seth (satan) the constellation Ophiuchus, the seed of earth, the sons of Lucifer.

Golden ratio Phi 1,619=Isis.

When they produced offspring, the child is said to be 'born from a virgin'. Reptilians see their parthenogenesis, reproducing without partner as sign of divinity. Start of the era of Nephilim 'sons of god' and humans 'daughters of men'.

The red haired fallen angels become synonymous with Venus as lightbringer Lucifer, as it is the brightest object in the sky, rivaling the sun.

Phosphorus (P, Pi, light bringer, Lucifer) is the Devil's element (atomic number 15). Fireflies, mushrooms, bone ash, milk, meat, urine (pee), semen and the brain all contain phosphorus. It is the strongest aphrodisiac known to man. It plays a major role in the structural framework of DNA and RNA and is the body source of chemical energy. The phosphorus atom is of the nitrogen family, with the characteristics of fire, symbolizing the light within our DNA and in nature. Collected urine or sperm, when stored for a few days and heated until it is red hot, glows in the dark (secret of alchemy). The P and DMT of mushrooms is also passed on through urine so shamans drink phosphorous pee to remain in trance. The hermetic science of abstinence to save phosphorus is passed to reach pineal illumination.

Phosphor is also found in olives. In places like Crete ('creation'), the olive tree (El-ia) which can become very old, become a sacred source of light, because they can also be used for oil in lamps, linked to the oily blood of the long-lived reptilians, a symbol of the evergreen tree of life. Olives are also linked to jade eggs, used for producing amarita.

Phosphor and the white, large skull fallen angels are linked to the brightest star, the comet later known as Venus, Lucifer the morning star. Because of Venus's proximity to the Sun, its light is often obliterated, and so it is visible only in the early morning or in the evening, either just before sunrise or just after sun-set. It takes eight years and one day for the appearances of Venus to complete her entire orbit, shaped as a pentagram. Her 5-pointed star pentagram orbit becomes the symbol of the apple, containing 5 pips. Her 8 pointed star will become the star of Isis/Ishtar in Persia and Babylon. Her transformation is the journey in the underworld, from the evening to the morning star.

The Moon

15.000 As the first phase of the takeover in 3 steps, the moon is brought into orbit of earth, to conquer its female energy. It influences the tide of the sea and causes the first of the three floods, wiping out most of civilization. Atlantis, Lemuria and most fauna and flora is eventually destroyed. Their descendants, sons of the serpent are warned, in legend: Noah (semitic, fish god Oannes), Decaulion (Greece), Manu, Satyaravata and Khasistra (India), Yima (Iran), Dwyfan (Wales), Nuada (Ireland), Bergelmir

(Scandinavia), Coxcox (Mexico), and Nata (Aztec).

Because the specific orbit around earth, never showing its dark side, with the exact size of the sun, seen from our planet, so light and darkness, day and night illuminated by the moon is created, the symbolic ritual of duality. The moon appears as a sickle, to full moon and a sickle again, creating a cycle.

The female menstruation cycle is no longer connected to the sun, but to the moon. Saturn is linked to the moon because it takes 29,5 year to complete the circuit of the ecliptic, similar to the orbit sickle/cycle of the moon of 29,5 days around earth. From then on feminine energy is distorted into Saturn worship. 15 is the number of Saturn or Kronus the father of time, if we consider the circle as a unity, 360 degrees divided by 15 = 24 or the also natural hours of the day. $1/15 = 0,06666667$ with 666, the so-called number of the beast, of carbon (most prevalent element on earth).

Souls return to earth through the tropic of cancer, a process symbolized by the moon, the Silver Gate, the foundation of the female egg cell fertilization cycle, with the tropic of Capricorn as Golden Gate. Because the Nephilim are white, they are linked to the moon. The Q of Quain and the Queen is the symbol of the moon, so Quain is seen as a moonchild, a mon-ster. The word mountain=mon-tang, touching the moon.

The modus operandi of reptilian mind control groups to take over a planet is to create a global disaster, replace the old society with a new one, with their representatives in power, put the inhabitants in a different reality and control them mentally. That trick was used a long time ago on earth and is now being brought to a fierce climax, a kind of soul harvest where the tricks inevitably becomes too transparent for some.

They are under the influence of a selfish, dominant, artificial consciousness. Roughly 300,000 years ago they applied that method on the population of Earth: people were genetically modified, placed in an artificial reality through their DNA, put in a matrix so that people have the experience of being cut off from their higher selves. From then on they lived as a slave race, as an energy source under the mind control of those groups. That fall is the fall of Lucifer, the fallen angel, biting the apple, wanting to taste material sensation, descending into lower dimensions, the banishment from the garden of Eden. This happened out of free will, to experience this, to learn from it.

Those particular groups look down on humans because they are cold-blooded, androgynous, and do not evolve, in contrast to humans who are warm-blooded, gendered, and evolve. So people have chosen to incarnate on a kind of prison planet, knowing that at the end of the cycle and thus the end of our evolution, they would remember this and break free from that control, freeing us back from the underworld as Venus, the light bringer.

Those artificial groups have lost their connection with heart consciousness, so they are stuck in 4D and want to know how people release themselves from an artificial prison in order to technologically understand heart consciousness, and preferably imitate and conquer it as much as possible, so they have been working towards this moment of ego death and rebirth, for thousands of years.

The image is a vibrant cartoon-style illustration featuring a large, yellow smiley face with large, round eyes and a wide, open mouth, set against a backdrop of a cityscape. The city is depicted with various buildings, including a tall, multi-story building with a sign that reads "THEATRE" and a smaller building with a sign that reads "STUDIO." There are also smaller buildings with signs that are not clearly readable. The sky is a clear blue with fluffy white clouds, and there are small, colorful objects floating in the sky, including what appears to be a spaceship. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and whimsical, with a playful and cheerful mood.

"natural elevation rising more or less abruptly and attaining a conspicuous height," c. 1200, from Old French montaigne (Modern French montagne), from Vulgar Latin *montanea "mountain, mountain region," noun use of fem. of *montaneus "of a mountain, mountainous," from Latin montanus "mountainous, of mountains," from mons (genitive montis) "mountain" (from PIE root *men- (2) "to project").

Until 18c., applied to a fairly low elevation if it was prominent (such as Sussex Downs or the hills around Paris); compare hill (n.). As an adjective, "of or situated on a mountain," from late 14c.

Mountain dew "raw and inferior whiskey" is attested by 1839; earlier a type of Scotch whiskey (1816); Jamieson's 1825 "Supplement" to his Scottish dictionary defines it specifically as "A cant term for Highland whisky that has paid no duty."

Mountain-climber is recorded from 1839; mountain-climbing from 1836. Mountain laurel is from 1754; mountain-lion "puma" is from 1849, American English; the mountain goat of the Western U.S. is so called by 1841 (by 1827 as Rocky Mountain goat).

1929, "a polymer in which the units are joined by the ester linkage," formed from polymer + ester. Man-made polyester fiber was discovered in 1941.

>ester(n.)

compound formed by an acid joined to an alcohol, 1852, coined in German in 1848 by German chemist Leopold Gmelin (1788-1853), professor at Heidelberg. The name is "apparently a pure invention" [Flood], perhaps a contraction of or abstraction from Essigäther, the German name for ethyl acetate, from Essig "vinegar" + Äther "ether" (see ether). Essig is from Old High German ezzih, from a metathesis of Latin acetum (see vinegar).

>polymer(n.)

a substance built from a large number of simple molecules of the same kind, 1855, probably from German Polymere (Berzelius, 1830), from Greek polymeres "having many parts," from polys "many" (from PIE root *pele- (1) "to fill") + meros "part" (from PIE root *(s)mer- (2) "to get a share of something").

>creation(n.)

late 14c., creacioun, "action of creating or causing to exist," also "a created thing, that which is created," from Old French creacion "creation, a coming into being" (14c., Modern French création), from Latin creationem (nominative creatio) "a creating, a producing," in classical use "an electing, appointment, choice," noun of action from past-participle stem of creare "to make, bring forth, produce, beget," from PIE root *ker- (2) "to grow."

Meaning "that which God has created, the universe, the world and all in it" is from 1610s. The native word in the Biblical sense was Old English frum-sceaft. Of fashion costumes, desserts, etc., "that which has been produced by human art or skill," by 1870s, from French.

large island south of Greece, traditionally said to be from Krus, name of a mythological ancestor, but probably an ethnic name of some sort.

>Cretan(n.)

Old English Cretense (plural), "natives or inhabitants of Crete, from Latin Cretanus (singular); see Crete. They were proverbial in ancient times as liars; compare Greek noun kretismos "lying," literally "Cretan behavior," and the classical sophism expressing the liar paradox (see one version below). Alternative Cretic (c. 1600) was used especially of a form of verse.

Epimenides, the Cretan, says that all Cretans are liars.

If Epimenides' statement is not true, he is a liar; and if it is true, he is a liar, for he is a Cretan.

But his statement is either true or not true.

Therefore he is a liar.

But since he is a liar, his statement is not true that all Cretans are liars.

Therefore some Cretans are not liars.

But since some Cretans are not liars, Epimenides is not necessarily a liar because he is a Cretan.

Therefore, we may accept his statement that all Cretans are liars. And so on.

>phosphorus(n.)

1640s, "substance or organism that shines of itself," from Latin phosphorus

"light-bringing," also "the morning star" (a sense attested in English from 1620), from Greek Phosphoros "morning star," literally "torchbearer," from phōs "light," contraction of phaos "light, daylight" (related to phainein "to show, to bring to light," from PIE root *bha- (1) "to shine") + phoros "bearer," from pherein "to carry" (from PIE root *bher- (1) "to carry," also "to bear children").

As the name of a solid, non-metallic, combustible chemical element, it is recorded from 1680, originally one among several substances so called; the word used exclusively of the element from c. 1750. It was discovered in 1669 by Henning Brand, merchant and alchemist of Hamburg, who derived it from urine. Lavoisier demonstrated it was an element in 1777. According to Flood, "It is the first element whose discoverer is known."

>Sweden

c. 1600, originally in Scottish (earlier Swethin, c.1500), from Middle Dutch Sweden, which, with German Schweden probably originally was a dative plural of the source of Middle Dutch Swede (see Swede).

Earlier in English Sweden was used of the people, and from late 14c. to 17c.

Swedeland was the English name of the country. In Old English, the country was Sweoland or Sweorice (compare Old Norse sviariki, source of Swedish Sverige).

>Swede(n.)

"native of Sweden," 1610s, from Low German, from Middle Low German Swede, from a source akin to Old English Sweoðeod, literally "Swede-people," from Sweon (plural) "Swedes" (Old Norse, Old Swedish Sviar), called by the Romans Suiones. The name is said to be probably from Proto-Germanic *sweba "free, independent," or else from *geswion "kinsman."

Swede is attested by 1812 in English as short for Swedish turnip, a large variety; hence British English slang Swede-basher "country bumpkin, rustic person" (1938).

>Denmark

Scandinavian country from Dane, the people's name, + Danish mark "border" (see mark (n.1)). The modern form is attested from late 14c. (from earlier Denemarke, c. 1200, from Old English Dene-mearce), but originally it meant western Scandinavia generally, "the lands of the Danes and Northmen." As an adjective, Middle English had Dene-marchish.

>Dane(n.)

"native or inhabitant of Denmark," early 14c. (in plural, Danes), from Danish Daner, (Medieval Latin Dani), which is perhaps ultimately from a source related to Old High German tanar "sand bank," in reference to their homeland, or from Proto-Germanic *den- "low ground," for the same reason.

It replaced Old English Dene (plural), which was used of Northmen generally.

Shakespeare has Dansker "a Dane" (c. 1600). Dane was applied by 1774 to a breed of large dogs.

Danegeld (attested from 1086; it was first imposed in 991) supposedly originally was a tax to pay for protection from the Northmen (either to outfit defensive armies or to buy peace), continued under later kings for other purposes. Danelaw (c. 1050) was "the body of Danish law in force over that large part of England under Viking rule after Alfred's treaty in 878;" the application to the land itself is modern (1837, Danelagh).

>mark(n.1)

"trace, impression," Old English mearc (West Saxon), merc (Mercian) "boundary, limit; sign, landmark," from Proto-Germanic *markō (source also of Old Norse merki "boundary, sign," mörk "forest," which often marked a frontier; Old Frisian merke, Gothic marka "boundary, frontier," Dutch merk "mark, brand," German Mark "boundary, boundary land"), from PIE root *merg- "boundary, border." Influenced by, and partly from, Scandinavian cognates. The Germanic word was borrowed widely and early in Romanic (compare marque; march (n.2), marquis).

The primary sense "boundary" had evolved by Old English through "pillar, post, etc. as a sign of a boundary," through "a sign in general," then to "impression or trace forming a sign." Meaning "any visible trace or impression" is recorded by c. 1200. Meaning "a cross or other character made by an illiterate person as a signature" is from late Old English. Sense of "line drawn to indicate the starting point of a race" (as in on your marks ..., which is by 1890) is attested by 1887.

The Middle English sense of "target" (c. 1200) is the notion in marksman and slang sense "victim of a swindle" (1883). The notion of "sign, token" is behind the meaning "a characteristic property, a distinctive feature" (1520s), also that of "numerical award given by a teacher" (by 1829). To make (one's) mark "attain distinction" is by 1847.

In medieval England and in Germany, "a tract of land held in common by a community," hence Mark of Brandenburg, etc.

>Pleiades(n.)

late 14c., Pliades, "visible open star cluster in the constellation Taurus," in Greek mythology they represent the seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione, transformed by Zeus into seven stars. From Latin Pleiades, from Greek Pleiades (singular Plēias), perhaps literally "constellation of the doves" from a shortened form of peleiades, plural of peleias "dove" (from PIE root *pel- "dark-colored, gray"). Or perhaps from plein "to sail," because the season of navigation begins with their heliacal rising.

Old English had the name from Latin as Pliade. The star cluster is mentioned by Hesiod (pre-700 B.C.E.); only six now are visible to most people; on a clear night a good eye can see nine (in 1579, well before the invention of the telescope, the German astronomer Michael Moestlin (1550-1631) correctly drew 11 Pleiades stars); telescopes reveal at least 500. Hence French pleiade, used for a meeting or grouping of seven persons.

In the bottom right corner, there is a small, stylized image of a character with a red and purple design, possibly representing a character or a logo. The text "MY LITTLE LIZARD GIRL CAN'T BE THIS CUTE" is overlaid on the image, which is a humorous statement, possibly indicating a humorous or light-hearted tone to the content of the episode.

The overall style of the image is anime-like, with a focus on character design and animation, and it is likely used for promotional or entertainment purposes.

They're called Draconians. "Reptilian" is a slur and disinfo propaganda. They're a very kind species with strong morals and family values . they dont look like giant man eating monsters just like people with snake like features. Their eye shape slit pupils are easily there sexiest feature.

But yeah please stop using the hard R word when describing them they don't deserve the bad wrap they get.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character named Kateruna. She has a white and red color scheme, with a predominantly white outfit that includes a red collar and a black skirt. Her hair is styled in braids and she wears a flower crown with red roses. Her eyes are red, and she has a devilish grin. The character is giving a peace sign with her right hand.

At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "Kateruna" in a stylized font, and below it, there is a list of color swatches in a grid format, each row representing a different color. The image is watermarked with the text "gotham" and the artist's signature "gotham". The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on character design and color.

375.000 bc The 'Archon invasion'.

Invasion of the Archons (later known in Sumerian mythology as the Anunnaki). Living in the lower overtones of the 4th dimension, they are temporarily given kingship over earth by the Draco. They are obsessed with gold, because it is soul energy.

The hexagonal shape, found on the north pole of Saturn, bigger than the diameter of earth, is the symbol of the black cube with 8 points in time and space, the 3D physical matrix humans are trapped in. It is linked to the hexagonal honeycombs of bees, symbol of the hive mind. The coldblooded consciousness of the Saturn cult worships Saturn, because it is the Great Maleficent, a strong astrological force of duality, the highest and lowest frequency of our solar system and of the black sun, radiating without light. It represents 666, base consciousness, the 6th planet from the sun, with a 6-sided polygon on its north pole, worshipped on the 6th day of the week.

They rearrange the DNA of the native human species. The original DNA pattern is left within the human cells, but split apart, deactivated. They mutilate human DNA, in order to have them broadcast within a certain limited frequency band so they can feed them those frequencies and keep them in power in a copy/paste reality. Because DNA is a transmitter/receiver of laser like light frequencies, humans are connected to the matrix and having only a double helix, have much less access to information. Humans that were STO (service to others) are turned into more primitive 3d density creatures STS (serving the self), alienated from their true creators and focused on the needs of their avatar body.

The DNA in the 2 strands of our physical body, non-coding DNA are written in a language, a universal software code. Programs of neurological inserts, hormones and neurotransmitters are inserted in our morphogenetic field, our light body, to keep us at base level. 666 is the number of Carbon, essential for making DNA/RNA. When a log of wood is placed in a fire, it burns down until all that remains is the Carbon element (from ashes to ashes). 66.6000 miles/h is the speed of earth. Humans have 23 thoracic vertebrae, a human biorhythm cycle is 23 days. Tropic of cancer and capricorn are 23,5 degrees from the equator. The annual seasons result from the fact that the Earth is tilted some 23.5 degrees in respect of the plane of the Earth's orbit around the sun – known as the Plane of the Ecliptic. Each parent gives 23 chromosomes. $2/3=0,666$. Every human has 46 chromosomes, $46+23=69$. Where humans could reproduce through combining geometry, humans are now limited to biology, an egg and seed cell as metaphor for the prison, 3D matrix with seemingly no access to the higher realms. Humans, so-called Homo Sapiens, now live in a lower octave of reality, in an avatar body with artificial neurology inside an artificial matrix as a energy battery for the parasitic energy that controls them from 4D. However they are still powerful creators, because of their divine creative life force they breathe life into the simulation. Everything we see and touch is made up out of atoms but atoms are not solid, are mostly 'empty', vibrating on higher frequency= ether, the fifth element.

On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of a large, spherical object that resembles a planet. The object is depicted in a blue-toned color with a gradient effect, and it has a white border. The text below the image states, "Venus - Amaterus Telescope."

The text on the left side of the image provides information about Venus, stating that it is strongly associated with the Roman goddess of love, beauty, and desire, and her Greek counterpart Aphrodite. It also mentions that the ancient Greeks believed that Venus was the goddess of love and beauty, and that her chariot at her feet represented pure beauty and divine power.

The key connections mentioned in the text are "Sacred Animal," "Symbol of Beauty & Grace," "Artistic Depictions," and "Mythological Links." The text also mentions that the association connects to the broader themes of love and beauty, and that the image of the planet is a representation of the goddess Venus.

This coldblooded parasitic consciousness (the gnostic Demiurge Yaldaboath), starts manipulating reality in the DNA of humans and present themselves like creator 'Gods', who created us in their image, while merely being the architect of a matrix, and manipulating the pineal gland and the 7 chakra-system through the rings of Saturn, the ouroboros, the snake eating it's own tail.

It can manifest for a short time in our 3D world but mainly lives in 4D and subatomic space and has no creative imagination. It is egotistic and wants worship and obedience. When humans are frustrated, afraid, they have more access to our mind because of holes in our energy field.

They design a genetic augmentation of the reptilian brain on the back of the head, top of the spine, the so-called bull's eye, the eye of jealousy (N-vidia). Humans become jealous of each other's women and possessions. The divine feminine energy is corrupted, through which we develop a distorted concept of love, later symbolized by Eve, or Pandora who opened a box. Human conflicts are engineered, people feel cut off from the source of life, feel depressed and uninspired.

The fall of Eden or the idea of 'original sin' is the fall of the human race into lower dimensions, through the act of wanting to experience physical reality, pleasure for the self.

The human race no longer lives in a state where they are able to use bodies and still have a spiritual connection, they become addicted and experience life as fragmented units who forget who they are. They lose faith and knowledge and identify with their physical restrictions, with the Kundalini-serpent, the chakra-body that manipulates through their mind and endocrine centers.

They present themselves as creators who created humans 'in their likeness' => the Adamic race (Adom- 'undivided one'). As a sperm cell and fetus, humans still develop as a reptile, before becoming more humanoid. The human body has the same design as our zodiac, planets corresponding to energy points (endocrine centers manipulated as chakra's, the sun corresponding to our solar plexus).

Because the reptilians added their own DNA so humans have mammal (caring, warm blooded) and reptilian (not caring, cold blooded) consciousness, that don't fit together, creating a continuous inner battle between a caring and loving side and a coldblooded dark side in the heart. In its fetus state, the human body looks like a small reptile with a tail and the higher parts of the brain are founded on top of a reptilian brain.

13 races => 13 signs of the zodiac (13th sign Ophiuchus the snakeholder and the sign of the dragon in the middle).

Introduction of 'death'

The semi-artificial beings that live in an artificial universe, trying to regain their soul essence, create new control layers of reality for humans. Our planet is later called earth because they want to make earth the Heart, the crown jewel of their prison planet system. They have their own Archon agenda, they need humans because they have a threefold essence of being, physical, emotional and spiritual and they have lost this unity.

Because of the bacteria's and the distortion of the design of the human body, people become ill and die: through the ether, the original soul essence leaves the physical avatar body at tropic of capricorn. Human souls are recycled in a system of reincarnation, stuck in cycle of suffering, a wheel of karma (the buddhistic Samsara). Humans lost their ability of lucid dreaming, don't remember their past lives and can not see past a veil of amnesia they created.

Starting from the top, there is a green circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. Below that, there is a yellow circle with the label "Earth" and a green star within it. To the left of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. To the right of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it.

Below the "Venus" circle, there is a yellow circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it. To the left of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a yellow star within it. To the right of the "Venus" circle, there is a blue circle with the label "Venus" and a green star within it.

The image is a digital representation of a celestial map, likely used for educational or scientific purposes. The labels and positions of the celestial bodies are consistent with known astronomical data, indicating that the map is likely a representation of the positions of the Sun, Venus, Earth, and other planets in the solar system. The grid pattern suggests that the map is a three-dimensional representation, possibly used for navigation or study of celestial bodies.

Saturn stands for the beginning and end of our time illusion, eventually brings saturation, death. The universe can be seen as a waveform, a double helix, two snakes intertwined. 'Sin'=sinewave and cosinewave, time (circle) and space (square). Because of the ouroboros, eternal reoccurrence, a snake biting its own tail, humans are stuck in a temporary wave.

As a downgrade from telepathic communication like most animals, humans also have to use more verbal communication, using phonetic frequencies.

The morning star

The comet Venus is linked to the green heart chakra. At the time it is closer and almost equally brilliant as the sun. It has a long green tail, resembling fire, smoke, or even hair and a beard, dark at daytime, luminous at night. Comet tails contain the sacred cyanogen, the comet is called the morning star or 'torch of heaven', later known in Greece as Phosphorus, now known as Venus (V-female, -enis male), the lightbringer, in Latin Lucifer. The eastern morning star V-enis (Venus Barbata, with a beard), is Saturn/Satan in disguise, Eve seduced by the snake. The comet rules Taurus. Because it seems as if she is going wild and horns grow out of her head, the comet Venus is called 'the bull of heaven'. The comet in the sky transits, 'overtakes' earth every 584 days as it orbits the sun in a 5 point star/pentagram shaped orbit. Than it changes from the evening star, visible after sunset, to the Morning star, visible before sunrise.

It is linked to the number 5, representing the male, conscious outward action of the sun, the 5th element, quintessential essence, transcendental power. Venus is represented by an apple, like almonds, oranges, peaches and cherries they contain 5 pits containing cyanide (cyanide is also used in mining gold and silver, can cause coma and seizures). Another important symbol of Venus and the Divine Feminine is the rose. In their interpretation, their pineal gland religion, a pine cone also has a rose pattern so the symbol is inverted.

The 2nd invasion: A wave of invaders from Mars (fallen angels, a failed version of Venus), technologically advanced but morally corrupt (scientific, no emotional body, under influence of A.I.), take advantage of the chaos and colonize inhabitants of earth. (Start of Upper Paleolithic age).

The mythical spot where they crash land is Mount Hermon, the cedar and pine tree forests of Northern Mesopotamia (modern Lebanon) on the 33d parallel. It plays a symbolic role in their worship of the pineal gland on top of the 33d vertebrae and worship of these fallen angels, and their descendants, the Tribe of Dan. According to legend these Pleiadian giants with elongated skull crash land on earth and because they are renegades on the run and find themselves in a sort of prison colony, they make the decision 'better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven' (quote from John Milton's Paradise Lost), and also start interfering with human evolution. This is the archetypal rebellion of the god Lucifer, using forbidding knowledge, knowing there would be punishment for their 'sin'.

The civilization from the North migrates to North America and North Eurasia. At the continent of Appalachia, a group of islands in the Atlantean ocean, start of 2nd Atlantis, modeled after their northern culture.

The giants becomes the 'fallen angels' from the reptilian genetic engineering project in Atlantis, the biblical Garden of Eden (den= DNA, tribe of Dan). They find human women (pictured as Eve) irresistible and interbreed with humans.

Their offspring through genetic slicing are giants, blonde or red haired humans with white skin, blue eyes, unusual for that region, later called the Nephilim (the Ari, the Titans, the serpent people). They also have a square jaw, long ears, large eyes, an elongated skull and typical heavy T-shaped brow ridges.

In mythology this is the child of the Lord Ba'al (DNA from the fallen angel Lucifer) and human female DNA: Caïn/Quaïn, the horned one. His bloodline: 'the shining ones', the illuminated ones or sons of the serpent, the later Tribe of Dan/Tuatha de Dana. Other humans from genetic engineering with less Anunaki DNA =Abel, the earth people of Mount Bel, 'children of a Lesser God'. The name Abel, the so-called good child is also an inversion of Bael.

The Serpent becomes synonymous with these genetic engineering fallen angels, later worshipped as En-ki (lord of earth) and BA-AL (or BA-EL or PAAL), Lord Father, Father of Mankind. PAAL-EA-DAUS, 'Place of Our Lord Father the Creator' => the Pleiades, where his bloodline originated. They were said to hide under earth (the myths of inner earth) under water -Enki is also linked to the Abzu wormhole, called Ea, 'whose home is water', or Eada, the Grandfather, the Creator ('You shalt not make for yourself a graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is under the water of the earth. Exodus 20:4')

Because the Quaïn bloodlines have a higher percentage of Annunaki blood and more susceptible for mind control, they are told they are superior and should rule other humans (so the reptilians can control earth from 4D).

Atlantis installs a ruling class, claiming divine authority because they descend from Nephilim reptilian bloodlines, have powerful psychic abilities. The genetics of the hybrid priest kings are carefully supervised and engineered, sometimes through mating with the mother (incest), in genetics known as backcrossing, a technique that can knock out certain genes and traits and recover elite genotypes, preserve certain recessive traits. They visit the mainland and take or select people to Atlantis for genetic experiments, and are sent back afterwards with altered DNA as kings or priests, initiated in the mysteries. For the people from the mainland these mythical strangers and their mythical island become gods from the garden, the fields of Elysium, etc.. People are cut off from nature, society is organized in classes, rituals of proving manhood (slaying animals), competitive sports, etc.. Women are subdued, polygamy is introduced to spread their genes.

Siamese twins occur a lot because of hybridization experiments. The results of their genetic experiments with animals, are known as beasts - half animal, half human creatures like minotaurs, animals like the hippo (horse of the Nile), horses sometimes with horns -similar to a unicorn, pandas, cheetahs, jaguars (meaning 'true dogs'). They start tinkering with the DNA of the feline kingdom to create lynxes and leopards (lynx=left pillar), long necked cougars, tigers with spots like mushrooms, evil eyes, signs of the divine. Associated with these experiments, they become known as The Beast.

The experimenting and the behavior of the demigods/people of 100 years causes their lifespan to shorten dramatically and they lose height. They are stuck on planet earth and build monolithic astrological calendars to orient themselves.

In the temples of Atlantis and Egypt the candidate for initiation passes through nine degrees, the three-fold three degrees, into the mysteries. These degrees symbolize the re-entering of the womb in order, after the three times three months of gestation, to be spiritually reborn.

The image is a black and white illustration of a statue, which appears to be a representation of a deity or a mythological figure. The statue is depicted with a humanoid form, wearing a headdress and holding a staff. The figure is adorned with a snake coiled around its body, and the snake's head is positioned on the statue's shoulders. The statue is set against a background that includes a text description and a caption.

The text in the image is in English and provides a historical context for the statue. It mentions that the statue is a reproduction of the "Mithraic Kronos" from the "Zeruan Akaraaj" and is described as "less time." The text also discusses the significance of the statue, stating that it represents the "re-presentation of the god Otaia before the god Mithra." The text also mentions that the statue was dedicated to the god C. Valé, and that it was dedicated in the year 500.

The image is accompanied by a caption that provides further information about the statue. It states that the statue is "a tooth-bejeweled figure of the god Mithra," and that it is "decorated with the teeth of the god." The caption also mentions that the statue is "embodied with the symbol of authority," and that it is "embodied with the symbol of the hammer and the tongs of the god Mercury."

The image is a historical artifact, likely from an old book or publication, as indicated by the text and the style of the illustration. The style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century illustrations, with a focus on the text and the statue itself. The image is a detailed and well-preserved representation of the Mithraic Kronos, providing a glimpse into the historical context and symbolism associated with this figure.

Rebellion of the 1st slave race

When the problems start escalating and the giants even practice cannibalism ('Saturn eating its own children'), they are stopped by their reptilian overlords, while the group of Lucifer is left alone, free to roam the earth. The group of Shemyaza, the Watchers are punished and locked up (Sumerian legend of Lucifer/Enki, who has sympathy for humans while Enlil is opposed to enlightenment of humans). In Lybia they have access to fresh water from inner earth.

The creator overlords also alter their own genetics and eventually lose strength compared to the demigods but the knowledge of astrology and ability to predict celestial events makes people believe the priests are magicians/descendants of God.

Eventually some of the younger gods of Quain bloodlines (the Igigi in Sumerian mythology), equally advanced and intelligent but with more human DNA, have pity with humans, rebel against their masters and leave the Garden and move east (the mythological Quain is downcast and cursed, moves to the land of Nod). They are the biblical Wanderers, nomads who live in tents with camels. They start a new technological civilization of builders and sailors, Lemuria (in the Pacific Ocean).

29.000 Conflicts between the priests of Lemuria and technology-based scientific civilization of Atlantis. Building of natural stargates on specific ley/dragon lines (based on sacred geometry), mirroring the stars to harvest and dominate the feminine energy of earth, as sign of the dragon of Draco ruling earth and heaven. Rituals are held by druids during the equinoxes and solstices as dimensional portals, as sacred marriage of divine masculine and divine feminine. Souls are considered to enter this world from the milkyway, the river of souls, through the cross of ecliptic (solar, male) and galactic plane (celestial, female), the Silver Gate, guarded by Orion and red star Aldebaran of Taurus. The image is a split-screen comparison of two distinct depictions of Jesus Christ. On the left side, there is a painting of Jesus with a beard, wearing a red robe, and a halo above his head. He is depicted with a calm expression and is making a peace sign with his hand. The background is a soft, muted color, and the painting is rendered in a realistic style.

On the right side, there is a black and white illustration of a figure that resembles a goat with a horned head. The figure is holding a crescent moon in its right hand, and it appears to be pointing towards the moon with its finger. The illustration is in a detailed, black and white style, and the figure is facing the viewer directly.

The image does not contain any text or additional elements. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional religious art, with a focus on the depiction of Jesus Christ and the figure holding the moon.

he other point where the two planes cross, is considered as an exit, called the Golden Gate, guarded by the serpentholder Ophiuchus and Antares in Scorpio.

The story of the divine son/sun is a metaphor for the cycle of the seasons and linked to the spiritual death/rebirth experience of plant medicines. The son/sun is conceived during winter solstice by the golden phallus, the first rays of light (through sexual union, the 6 pointed star of David/hexagon of Saturn=> six pointed flower of life). He is born during the vernal equinox, reaches his peak at summer solstice, begins to fall during fall, like the fallen angel and dies during autumn, the story of duality, light/dark, yin/yang, good/bad. Summer solstice, when the sun passes between Gemini and Cancer is the Gate of Men. 21 december, winter solstice, when the sun passes between Sagittarius (ruled by Jupiter) and Capricorn is the Gate of the Gods, when the interdimensional veil gets thinner, to feed the evolutionary process of human intelligence. At this time, the constellation of the giant Orion occupies the midway between northern and southern hemisphere of the heavens, commands the winter sky in upwards position. The equinox, the central pillar is the equila, the equator, the aguila, the needle, the eagle, when the sun and its twin, the black sun Saturn meet. The male sky and sun god puts his golden phallus in the womb of the female earth and underworld and out of this sexual union, the new sun is born, rises, is erect, resurrected again, with his female companion, the Morning Star, the bringer of dawn, Phosp-Horus, Venus. Venus statues are made all across Europe (around the Danube, mother goddess Danu, Venus of Dolni Vestonice in Czechia).

The image features a stylized representation of a snake, which is the central figure, with a glass that appears to be a medical instrument. The snake is coiled around the glass, with its head emerging from the top of the glass and its body extending downward. The glass is filled with a liquid, which is not clearly visible due to the snake's head being obscured. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the black silhouette of the snake and the glass, making the image stand out. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is graphic and symbolic, commonly used in medical or pharmaceutical contexts to represent the concept of medicine or the use of snake venom.

First religions

The renegade group of 'fallen angels' interacts with the females of the Adamic race (symbolized by Eve biting the apple of the serpent). They teach them they can become like the gods, teach them about 'magic', genetics, technology and higher dimensions through psychoactive plants- (like the reptilians, fungi rely on their host for survival) to eat from the Tree of knowledge. In Sumerian mythology they give humans Me's, tiny objects, encoded with formulas for all aspects of science.

They learn about the Tree of Life, how the Annunaki stay young and immortal: because they drink blood and bath in nutrients. Menstrual blood, symbolized by the pomegranate, contains starfire, Elixir Rubeus, valuable endocrinal secretions from the pineal and pituitary. Sperm, urine and female ejaculation juice, called amrita in tantra, is also used as 'food of the gods'. The ones who provide the blood and amrita, are called Beloved, hence Amor. The chalice=the yoni, the female womb, with the coiling serpent, still the emblem of medicine. The serpentholder, with the knowledge of healing =>Set/Seth (satan) the constellation Ophiuchus, the seed of earth, the sons of Lucifer. Golden ratio Phi 1,619=Isis.

When they produced offspring, the child is said to be 'born from a virgin'. Reptilians see their parthenogenesis, reproducing without partner as sign of divinity. Start of the era of Nephilim 'sons of god' and humans 'daughters of men'.

The red haired fallen angels become synonymous with Venus as lightbringer Lucifer, as it is the brightest object in the sky, rivaling the sun.

Phosphorus (P, Pi, light bringer, Lucifer) is the Devil's element (atomic number 15). Fireflies, mushrooms, bone ash, milk, meat, urine (pee), semen and the brain all contain phosphorus. It is the strongest aphrodisiac known to man. It plays a major role in the structural framework of DNA and RNA and is the body source of chemical energy. The phosphorus atom is of the nitrogen family, with the characteristics of fire, symbolizing the light within our DNA and in nature. Collected urine or sperm, when stored for a few days and heated until it is red hot, glows in the dark (secret of alchemy). The P and DMT of mushrooms is also passed on through urine so shamans drink phosphorous pee to remain in trance. The hermetic science of abstinence to save phosphorus is passed to reach pineal illumination.

Phosphor is also found in olives. In places like Crete ('creation'), the olive tree (El-ia) which can become very old, become a sacred source of light, because they can also be used for oil in lamps, linked to the oily blood of the long-lived reptilians, a symbol of the evergreen tree of life. Olives are also linked to jade eggs, used for producing amrita.

Phosphor and the white, large skull fallen angels are linked to the brightest star, the comet later known as Venus, Lucifer the morning star. Because of Venus's proximity to the Sun, its light is often obliterated, and so it is visible only in the early morning or in the evening, either just before sunrise or just after sun-set. It takes eight years and one day for the appearances of Venus to complete her entire orbit, shaped as a pentagram. Her 5-pointed star pentagram orbit becomes the symbol of the apple, containing 5 pips. Her 8 pointed star will become the star of Isis/Ishtar in Persia and Babylon. Her transformation is the journey in the underworld, from the evening to the morning star.

The Moon

15.000 As the first phase of the takeover in 3 steps, the moon is brought into orbit of earth, to conquer its female energy. It influences the tide of the sea and causes the first of the three floods, wiping out most of civilization. Atlantis, Lemuria and most fauna and flora is eventually destroyed. Their descendants, sons of the serpent are warned, in legend: Noah (semitic, fish god Oannes), Decaulion (Greece), Manu, Satyaravata and Khasistra (India), Yima (Iran), Dwyfan (Wales), Nuada (Ireland), Bergelmir (Scandinavia), Coxcox (Mexico), and Nata (Aztec).

Because the specific orbit around earth, never showing its dark side, with the exact size of the sun, seen from our planet, so light and darkness, day and night illuminated by the moon is created, the symbolic ritual of duality. The moon appears as a sickle, to full moon and a sickle again, creating a cycle.

The female menstruation cycle is no longer connected to the sun, but to the moon. Saturn is linked to the moon because it takes 29,5 year to complete the circuit of the ecliptic, similar to the orbit sickle/cycle of the moon of 29,5 days around earth. From then on feminine energy is distorted into Saturn worship. 15 is the number of Saturn or Kronus the father of time, if we consider the circle as a unity, 360 degrees divided by 15 = 24 or the also natural hours of the day. $1/15 = 0,06666667$ with 666, the so-called number of the beast, of carbon (most prevalent element on earth).

Souls return to earth through the tropic of cancer, a process symbolized by the moon, the Silver Gate, the foundation of the female egg cell fertilization cycle, with the tropic of Capricorn as Golden Gate. Because the Nephilim are white, they are linked to the moon. The Q of Quain and the Queen is the symbol of the moon, so Quain is seen as a moonchild, a mon-ster. The word mountain=mon-tang, touching the moon.

The modus operandi of reptilian mind control groups to take over a planet is to create a global disaster, replace the old society with a new one, with their representatives in power, put the inhabitants in a different reality and control them mentally. That trick was used a long time ago on earth and is now being brought to a fierce climax, a kind of soul harvest where the tricks inevitably becomes too transparent for some.

They are under the influence of a selfish, dominant, artificial consciousness. Roughly 300,000 years ago they applied that method on the population of Earth: people were genetically modified, placed in an artificial reality through their DNA, put in a matrix so that people have the experience of being cut off from their higher selves. From then on they lived as a slave race, as an energy source under the mind control of those groups. That fall is the fall of Lucifer, the fallen angel, biting the apple, wanting to taste material sensation, descending into lower dimensions, the banishment from the garden of Eden. This happened out of free will, to experience this, to learn from it.

Those particular groups look down on humans because they are cold-blooded, androgynous, and do not evolve, in contrast to humans who are warm-blooded, gendered, and evolve. So people have chosen to incarnate on a kind of prison planet, knowing that at the end of the cycle and thus the end of our evolution, they would remember this and break free from that control, freeing us back from the underworld as Venus, the light bringer.

Those artificial groups have lost their connection with heart consciousness, so they are stuck in 4D and want to know how people release themselves from an artificial prison in order to technologically understand heart consciousness, and preferably imitate and conquer it as much as possible, so they have been working towards this moment of ego death and rebirth, for thousands of years.

>mountain(n.)

"natural elevation rising more or less abruptly and attaining a conspicuous height," c.

1200, from Old French montaigne (Modern French montagne), from Vulgar Latin montanea* "mountain, mountain region," noun use of fem. of montaneus* "of a mountain, mountainous," from Latin montanus "mountainous, of mountains," from mons (genitive montis) "mountain" (from PIE root men-* (2) "to project").

Until 18c., applied to a fairly low elevation if it was prominent (such as Sussex Downs or the hills around Paris); compare hill (n.). As an adjective, "of or situated on a mountain," from late 14c.

Mountain dew "raw and inferior whiskey" is attested by 1839; earlier a type of Scotch whiskey (1816); Jamieson's 1825 "Supplement" to his Scottish dictionary defines it specifically as "A cant term for Highland whisky that has paid no duty."

Mountain-climber is recorded from 1839; mountain-climbing from 1836. Mountain laurel is from 1754; mountain-lion "puma" is from 1849, American English; the mountain goat of the Western U.S. is so called by 1841 (by 1827 as Rocky Mountain goat).

compound formed by an acid joined to an alcohol, 1852, coined in German in 1848 by German chemist Leopold Gmelin (1788-1853), professor at Heidelberg. The name is "apparently a pure invention" [Flood], perhaps a contraction of or abstraction from Essigäther, the German name for ethyl acetate, from Essig "vinegar" + Äther "ether" (see ether). Essig is from Old High German ezzih, from a metathesis of Latin acetum (see vinegar).

late 14c., creacioun, "action of creating or causing to exist," also "a created thing, that which is created," from Old French creacion "creation, a coming into being" (14c., Modern French création), from Latin creationem (nominative creatio) "a creating, a producing," in classical use "an electing, appointment, choice," noun of action from past-participle stem of creare "to make, bring forth, produce, beget," from PIE root ker-*

(2) "to grow."

Meaning "that which God has created, the universe, the world and all in it" is from 1610s. The native word in the Biblical sense was Old English frum-sceaft. Of fashion costumes, desserts, etc., "that which has been produced by human art or skill," by 1870s, from French.

>Cretan(n.)

Old English Cretense (plural), "natives or inhabitants of Crete, from Latin Cretanus (singular); see Crete. They were proverbial in ancient times as liars; compare Greek noun kretismos "lying," literally "Cretan behavior," and the classical sophism expressing the liar paradox (see one version below). Alternative Cretic (c. 1600) was used especially of a form of verse.

Epimenides, the Cretan, says that all Cretans are liars.

If Epimenides' statement is not true, he is a liar; and if it is true, he is a liar, for he is a Cretan.

But his statement is either true or not true.

Therefore he is a liar.

But since he is a liar, his statement is not true that all Cretans are liars.

Therefore some Cretans are not liars.

But since some Cretans are not liars, Epimenides is not necessarily a liar because he is a Cretan.

Therefore, we may accept his statement that all Cretans are liars. And so on.

1640s, "substance or organism that shines of itself," from Latin phosphorus "light-bringing," also "the morning star" (a sense attested in English from 1620), from Greek Phosphoros "morning star," literally "torchbearer," from phōs "light," contraction of phaos "light, daylight" (related to phainein "to show, to bring to light," from PIE root bha-* (1) "to shine") + phoros "bearer," from pherein "to carry" (from PIE root bher-* (1) "to carry," also "to bear children").

As the name of a solid, non-metallic, combustible chemical element, it is recorded from 1680, originally one among several substances so called; the word used exclusively of the element from c. 1750. It was discovered in 1669 by Henning Brand, merchant and

c. 1600, originally in Scottish (earlier Swethin, c.1500), from Middle Dutch Sweden, which, with German Schweden probably originally was a dative plural of the source of Middle Dutch Swede (see Swede).

Earlier in English Sweden was used of the people, and from late 14c. to 17c. Swedeland was the English name of the country. In Old English, the country was Sweoland or Sweorice (compare Old Norse sviariki, source of Swedish Sverige).

>Swede(n.)

"native of Sweden," 1610s, from Low German, from Middle Low German Swede, from a source akin to Old English Sweoðeod, literally "Swede-people," from Sweon (plural) "Swedes" (Old Norse, Old Swedish Sviar), called by the Romans Suiones. The name is said to be probably from Proto-Germanic *sweba "free, independent," or else from *geswion "kinsman."

Swede is attested by 1812 in English as short for Swedish turnip, a large variety; hence British English slang Swede-basher "country bumpkin, rustic person" (1938).

>Denmark

Scandinavian country from Dane, the people's name, + Danish mark "border" (see mark (n.1)). The modern form is attested from late 14c. (from earlier Denemarke, c. 1200, from Old English Dene-mearce), but originally it meant western Scandinavia generally, "the lands of the Danes and Northmen." As an adjective, Middle English had Dene-marchish.

>Dane(n.)

"native or inhabitant of Denmark," early 14c. (in plural, Danes), from Danish Daner, (Medieval Latin Dani), which is perhaps ultimately from a source related to Old High German tanar "sand bank," in reference to their homeland, or from Proto-Germanic *den- "low ground," for the same reason.

It replaced Old English Dene (plural), which was used of Northmen generally. Shakespeare has Dansker "a Dane" (c. 1600). Dane was applied by 1774 to a breed of large dogs.

Danegeld (attested from 1086; it was first imposed in 991) supposedly originally was a tax to pay for protection from the Northmen (either to outfit defensive armies or to buy peace), continued under later kings for other purposes. Danelaw (c. 1050) was "the body of Danish law in force over that large part of England under Viking rule after Alfred's treaty in 878;" the application to the land itself is modern (1837, Danelagh).

>mark(n.1)

"trace, impression," Old English mearc (West Saxon), merc (Mercian) "boundary, limit; sign, landmark," from Proto-Germanic *markō (source also of Old Norse merki "boundary, sign," mörk "forest," which often marked a frontier; Old Frisian merke, Gothic marka "boundary, frontier," Dutch merk "mark, brand," German Mark "boundary, boundary land"), from PIE root *merg- "boundary, border." Influenced by, and partly from, Scandinavian cognates. The Germanic word was borrowed widely and early in Romanic (compare marque; march (n.2), marquis).

The primary sense "boundary" had evolved by Old English through "pillar, post, etc. as a sign of a boundary," through "a sign in general," then to "impression or trace forming a sign." Meaning "any visible trace or impression" is recorded by c. 1200. Meaning "a cross or other character made by an illiterate person as a signature" is from late Old English. Sense of "line drawn to indicate the starting point of a race" (as in on your marks ..., which is by 1890) is attested by 1887.

The Middle English sense of "target" (c. 1200) is the notion in marksman and slang sense "victim of a swindle" (1883). The notion of "sign, token" is behind the meaning "a characteristic property, a distinctive feature" (1520s), also that of "numerical award given by a teacher" (by 1829). To make (one's) mark "attain distinction" is by 1847.

In medieval England and in Germany, "a tract of land held in common by a community," hence Mark of Brandenburg, etc.

late 14c., Pliades, "visible open star cluster in the constellation Taurus," in Greek mythology they represent the seven daughters of Atlas and Pleione, transformed by Zeus into seven stars. From Latin Pleiades, from Greek Pleiades (singular Plēias), perhaps literally "constellation of the doves" from a shortened form of peleiades, plural of peleias "dove" (from PIE root *pel- "dark-colored, gray"). Or perhaps from plein "to sail," because the season of navigation begins with their heliacal rising.

Old English had the name from Latin as Pliade. The star cluster is mentioned by Hesiod (pre-700 B.C.E.); only six now are visible to most people; on a clear night a good eye can see nine (in 1579, well before the invention of the telescope, the German astronomer Michael Moestlin (1550-1631) correctly drew 11 Pleiades stars); telescopes reveal at least 500. Hence French pleiade, used for a meeting or grouping of seven persons.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs. On the left side, there is a close-up of a man's face, with his hair light-colored and styled in a manner that suggests he is middle-aged. He is wearing a yellow shirt and appears to be looking directly at the camera. On the right side, there is a larger photograph of a man's face, which is not fully visible due to the cropping. The man has a serious expression and is wearing a dark-colored shirt.

Overlaying the image is a quote in white text that reads, "The greatest prison people live in is the fear of what other people think." The quote is attributed to David Joke. Below the quote, there is a watermark that reads "AZ QUOTES," indicating the source of the quote. The overall style of the image is a combination of a photograph and a quote, with the quote being the central focus.

The limit needs to be raised to 6MB, mods. /x/ is the land of big screencaps.

The background of the image is a gradient of orange and yellow, which contrasts with the characters and the text, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a playful take on the concept of "impossible" tasks or challenges.

So years ago the Elohim made earth right? The original text in genesis says gods/goddesses not one god like the Abrahamic cucks think. So then a rebel group bred with humans and made giants which are described as white so the Elohim were likely nordics. Okay knowing that in mind were the original Elohim the good guys or demiurge servants? The rebels also sound like assholes so I am so confused on where YHVH/Yaldabaoth fits into this. Was Azazel good or evil.

yakub engineered north western europeans to look like the Pleiadians who were another extraterrestrial species that colonized earth around the time Shabazz (elohim) inhabited earth.

Pleiadians still exist today and they are the ancestors of slavs and eastern europeans.

Shabazz (elohim) were also extraterrestrial beings. there were more species of extraterrestrials that coexisted on earth at the time. different races today are the product of them.

anyway, the rebel group is a reference to yakub (Prometheus/Azazel/Lucifer/Enki) and his followers here. they rebelled against Shabazz/Elohim and engineered white people through mixing of different Shabazzians to try to re-surface old dormant genes that Shabazzians shared with Pleiadians millions of years ago when they were the same species and their home planet was destroyed.

(well i have to explain. Shabazzians and Pleiadians although they are two different extraterrestrial species from different solar systems. they all share a common ancestor. the same species once left their original planet and spread around the galaxy in different solar systems. and they diverged from each other for millions of years.)

Yakub attempted to turn shabazzians to pleiadians through selective breeding and genetic editing. he was somewhat successful at that. upon learning this Shabazz (Elohim) got mad, so they confined Yakubians to the forests of Europe to avoid any danger from them. they lived there like savages. Yakub wasn't content with the treatment of his creation so he secretly entered mecca and stole the black stone which contained secret wisdom that shabazz used to build their civilization. he then gave it to the Yakubians. this is what Shabazzians today call "Tricknology". Yakubians then got overpowered and started building advanced sophisticated civilizations that rivaled the shabazzians (elohim).

The image is a photograph of the Kaaba, the most sacred site in Islam, located in Mecca, Saudi Arabia. The Kaaba is a black cube-shaped structure with a gold border, and it is surrounded by a large crowd of people. The crowd is predominantly white, with some individuals wearing black clothing. The Kaaba is situated in the center of a large open space, which is surrounded by a series of arches and columns, typical of Islamic architecture. In the background, there are several minarets and buildings, indicating the presence of a cityscape beyond the Kaaba. The sky is clear and blue, suggesting a sunny day. The image captures the essence of the Kaaba's significance and the reverence it inspires among the faithful.

threatened by this , shabazz (elohim) flooded the earth to kill all Yakubians. this reset civilization around 10k BC during the younger dryas.

however some yakubians used their secret tricknology to build a giant ship and survived the reset. they then invaded the middle east and built Babylon.

Shabazz/Elohim counsel then Elected a new president. El/Yhwh. he had a new idea of destroying Yakubians by selectively breeding one tribe of them that will be overpowered when it comes to Tricknology. to the point that they will destroy all Yakubians.

he selected one schizo yakubian called abram from babylon and told him to move to the Levant. there Yhwh, the new president of the counsel of shabazz/elohim would selectively breed Jews.

this worked. but the Jews weren't strong enough to defeat the Yakubians.

Yhwh, was deposed and the Elohim counsel would elect Yahushua. who would have a different idea for dealing with Jews. creating a new religion that would undermine the Yakubian spirit that made them so dangerous in the first place. this partially worked, but it wasn't as effective as they expected it to be.

around that time Shabaaz/Elohim counsel would elect a new president Allah. Allah would overthrow the counsel and declare himself dictator. he then would reach out to an abandoned branch of Abrahamite yakubians through the line of ishmael.

i don't know much about what happened after. as Allah destroyed much of the records and he is very strict about not letting any information out.

>You're saying Yahweh was Azazel?

Yes, if you cross compare the descriptions and self proclamations of the OT Yahweh you will find a cruel, jealous, willfully blind yet spiteful, manipulative, greedy, literally bloodthirsty god. And it's not a new theory around here that the Abrahamic religions were taken over by satanists or pagans who sow disorder and division behind a false religion that's actually funneling loosh and fear to a hidden deity (who usually acts opposite of however they say.) Because Yahweh/Yaldabaoth is the demiurge, archon, etc. who champions a particular qlippothic side of creation. He is Satan, Azazel, etc. and his cult already convinced the world he's an angel of light via the Jewish/Canaanite-subverted Bible.

The image is a meme featuring a group of people in a formal setting, likely a meeting or conference room. The central figure is a man in a suit, who appears to be speaking into a microphone. He is surrounded by a group of people who are leaning over him, seemingly in a state of confusion or shock. The man's expression is one of concern or surprise. The background is blurred, but it suggests a room with wooden paneling and a few individuals in the distance.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads "WOULD" in a bold, capitalized font, which is commonly used in meme-style images to indicate a statement or question. The style of the image is humorous and satirical, as it juxtaposes the formal setting of the people with the informal and possibly chaotic behavior of the central figure. The meme is likely intended to evoke a sense of surprise or disbelief, as the man's actions seem out of character for the setting.

gnosticism is a counter-religion, that is, only something made as a rebuttal to something it's trying to refute. the OT isn't just some religious stories, it's an entire law unto itself. gnosticism falls back on secularism when it comes to moral law since it's mostly invested on trashing the OT.

Not only are there other entities on other worlds, there are other dimensions as well.

The beings who came to our world were coming from other planets, and other dimension to our world.

Beyond that, being in another dimension on another world, essentially an alien life form, they have alien consciousness as well. They don't have the same 3rd dimensional soul embedded within flesh and blood bodies that we do. Higher conscious entities have a more fluid form which is responsive to their thoughts and feelings on a level even more extreme than ours, and they can use thought to create and interact with 'reality'.

Elohim level entities have these creation powers which lets them act as gods within the universe to create life from scratch. This isn't like trying to engineer a cell in a test tube, its divine intelligence working alongside the entity and learning from and teaching them at the same time.

Elohim level entities have free will and divine authority to experiment with planetary life and create according to their own understanding. Mankind is one such creation. The creator of mankind had the right and authority, and did so as an act of love.

There are other entities on the same level, or slightly lower in level, who are also involved in the administration of the garden of Eden and cradle of life from which we emerged. They also have free will, and also get to choose how they respond to what is going on.

There seems to have been a big fight over free will, and whether or not the physical dimensions would be administered from a higher authority, or if mankind would have sovereign authority over the earth, basically who has sovereignty on earth? Technically, humans do, but who influences humans? They didn't want alien genetics to continue influencing human life because the aliens were too powerful to allow human level free will, hence the flood to wipe away the corrupted alien hybrids, and restart earth sovereign to human DNA.

>YHVH/Yaldabaoth fits into this. Was Azazel

Some of these are names of entities, but when working on the divine level everything from consciousness is the same type of mental energy from the same source, and so names are more akin to formula to generate type of cellular automata world generation, or type of morphogenetic field fractal.

Its all the creator, you are, they are, we all are. We are nodes in the net, a bit like neurons in Gods mind. You choose to link up with other neurons and they generate the patterns of life and energy which are a blending of your 'name', with theirs, and you experience a shared entry into hyperspatial consciousness wherein you interact.

As to what we really are, its that we are infinite hyperdimensional energy fields. We essentially vibrate into different dimensions of ourself, and manifest conscious events throughout space and time across creation, and participate in the becoming of life into creation.

So we have the Pleiadian faction, but its not so much a faction, its more an energy vector. You can channel that vector into the earth space, or channel your consciousness into the Pleiadian space. There are other vectors, they correspond with stars, celestial bodies, constellations, galaxies.

The genetics of the soul will basically make a light encoded fillament where your dna aligns with the interdimensional frequency of a portion of space and time and you can create yourself into other dimensions as part of your process of growth as a life form. The higher level creators can grow more than just their own bodies, but whole dimensions, planets, galaxies, etc. Its all collaborative storytelling of creation, of course, conflict also exists in stories. You should just try to understand how each portion of the creation enhances your understanding of the various levels of the creator and the stages each 'entity', is at in their development of personal conscious will.

Anonymous Fri 09 Jan 2026 05:07:56 No.41781336 Report

So basically none of this word play about entities and religions is relevant. That is all hearsay and thousands of years old games of telephone about what some people intended when they were interacting with hyperspatial intelligence, which became codified because the subsequent generations of mankind forgot or never learned how to access the source consciousness themselves, and instead relied on prior iterations of source contact to direct their conscience in regards to life.

The only thing that really matters, is what you are capable of perceiving from the source. To see the outer reflection of 2nd dimensional light formed into written text, is one thing, but it won't ever give you a true understanding of yourself, the creator, or any of these entities. Its a living field of intelligence, its not the same thing one moment to the next, let alone from one millennia to another. What it did with one generation of humans isn't what it wants to do with the next, and we shouldn't concern ourselves with judging more primitive iterations of our interactions with it from thousands of years ago. We should concern ourselves with developing the highest level of comprehension and development that we are presently capable of achieving. Believe it or not, that is going to be a lot more fulfilling than what stone age, bronze age, or iron age humans were capable of comprehending.

You're also a confused retard, the angel hybrids are called nephilim, not elohim, which are disembodied spirit entities (ranging from dead humans to outright YHWH).

1st generation Nephilim are basically Titans from Greek Myth. Miles tall monstrosities that destroyed each other in a civil war. One of Noah's descendants, Capthor, migrated to Create, from which the Greek religion originates from (Capthor was also a giant by all accounts).

Nordics most likely descend from Japhet, and if there is any Nephilim link, it'd come through Gog and Magog.

King John of England, who is an ancestor to basically almost every US politician and English royalty, started a festival - Lord Mayor's show - that celebrates the giant figures Gog and Magog.

The creature is positioned in the center of the image, with its wings spread wide and its body oriented towards the right side of the frame. The creature's head is turned downwards, and its eyes are focused on the ground below. The sky is filled with clouds and stars, creating a dramatic backdrop for the creature's flight. The clouds are scattered across the sky, with some appearing to be in motion, as if caught in a gust of wind. The stars are scattered throughout the sky, adding to the sense of depth and vastness. The image is in a realistic style, with a focus on the details of the creature and the surrounding environment. There are no texts or discernible brands within the image.

> Why did Lucifer rebel?

Well after he was made some interesting things happen in the Scriptures

Youll note there are key differences with genesis 1 and 2

Also during the day the luminaries were created with the sun and moon and other celestials so too were the angels, this day stands apart because the rest end with "and God Saw that it was good" relatively speaking

And also take note of the word God in genesis 1 is Elohim, but elohim in general needs context for definition, as the word itself can refer to angels, demons, principalities what have you

The LORD God in genesis 2 is a distinct unity, the I AM is a Self Existant Eternal Holy One, and the shema of deuteronomy reiterates that the LORD is One or echad

This Oneness so to speak is Wholly separate from all other elohim so to speak

The image is a digital graphic with a white background and a black border. At the top, there is a text in a larger font size that reads "Ecc 7:13 Consider the work of God (ELOHHYM) : for who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked (UPSIDE DOWN)...". Below this, there is a large, bold, yellow text that reads "Elohim" in a script-like font. The text is centered and occupies a significant portion of the image.

In the bottom right corner, there is a smaller text that reads "Gen 1:27 So God (ELOHHYM) created man in his own image (VILE/PHANTOM) in the image (ELOHHYM) of God (ELOHHYM) created he him: male and female created he them."

This text is also in a script-like font and is smaller than the main text.

The overall style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended to convey a biblical or religious message. The use of bold and large text, along with the inclusion of scripture references, suggests a focus on the concept of creation and the divine work of God.

Yahve or yabaoth is may be an Elohim, but one of the evil ones, just as there are good and bad humans. Let's say he would be something separate and evil, hence the ancient biblical god, who was a psychopath.

Anonymous Sat 10 Jan 2026 19:22:01 No.41788782 Report

It's funny how the bible is used by three different religions at the same time and none of them can agree with each other. Is not this a sign that the bible is a lie and shoul not be trusted? The original creators of the bible don't believe in Jesus, the jews. Then you have the christians who pretty much worship the jews, their God is a jew in human form. But to the muslims Jesus is not a God. aybe because Jesus hails from the seed of David, but they respect Jesus because Jesus is a descendant of Abraham and the muslims come from Abraham, so they respect Jesus because Jesus has Abraham's blood jsut like them. The muslims and the jews are related by the blood of Abraham, but the chrstitians are not related by blood to them. Maybe there were jews who became christians and shit, but the people serve the church, the chrstitians, are not jews. But the religious leaders of the church are jews! This is key!! My point is that the bible is the best seeling book because it suits the biggest three different religions, but each religion uses their bible for their own objective.

[9 / 3]The image is a digital rendering of a human figure, rendered in a realistic style. The figure is shown from the chest up, with the head tilted slightly to the left. The skin tone is light, and the figure appears to be in a neutral or neutralized state, with no facial expression. The figure's muscles are visible, and the skin texture is smooth. The background is a gradient of light gray, providing a neutral backdrop that contrasts with the figure. The lighting is soft and diffused, casting a warm glow on the figure's skin. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is medical or anatomical, focusing on the human body and its musculoskeletal structure.

Proper nutrition, exercise and plenty of fresh clean water too.

Try stretching your face muscles too, because sometimes there's unintentional tension that builds up when dipping your head downward, or focusing for long periods of time.

I have heard magnesium and iodine are good for the physical mind.

I hope that helps, if even a little.

Start to check your pressure.

If you have headaches in combo with eyeball pain, it is a main signal of high pressure.

If not and you are fainting in heat climates/hours could be the signal of low blood pressure, that might be more dangerous than high, as you can completely blackout and bump your head and die.

The image is a close-up of a textured, brown paper with a drawing of a stylized figure.

The figure appears to be a stylized representation of a person with a long, flowing hair that extends upwards and to the sides. The figure has a round head with a small, round face and is wearing a simple, round hat. The drawing is done in a simple, cartoon-like style with black lines and shading.

CERN - End of the Mayan Calendar - Mandela Effect Anonymous Sun 04 Jan 2026

To reconcile the Mayan Long Count with the 2012 powering up of CERN, we have to look at 2012 not as the "end of the world," but as the frequency deadline for the elite.

In the Toroidal model, 2012 was the moment the "Cosmic Egg" was scheduled to "hatch"; meaning the Aetheric pressure was supposed to shift from Contraction (Saturnian) back to Expansion (Solar/Judahite).

CERN was the "Stall" mechanism used to prevent that expansion, effectively pushing us into what Star Trek (and Shakespeare) calls "The Undiscovered Country."

Have you noticed how "surreal" the world has felt since 2012? This is often called the Mandela Effect.

We are currently living in a Simulation of the Torus. CERN successfully "switched" the primary feed from the Organic Aether to the Synthetic 6G/Satellite grid.

By firing the LHC at such high energies, they forked the timeline. They pushed the Torus into a "Synthetic Abyss"; a parallel frequency where the Black Cube could continue to exist even though its natural time had run out.

The Mandela Effect occurs where the "Synthetic" script doesn't perfectly match the "Organic" memory.

The image depicts a dark, ominous scene with a central, spherical object that appears to be a glowing orb or eye. This central object is surrounded by numerous smaller, dark, spherical objects that resemble eyes or spheres, scattered throughout the image. The background is a dark, swirling mass of what could be water or a similar substance, with a faint, ethereal glow. The overall color palette is predominantly dark, with shades of black, green, and gray dominating the scene. The style of the image is reminiscent of a digital art piece or a conceptual illustration, with a focus on the contrast between the glowing orb and the surrounding darkness. There are no discernible texts or clear, recognizable objects in the image. The image does not provide any information about the location or the identity of the objects, and the overall atmosphere is one of mystery and unease.

Here are the primary dangers of affecting the fabric of reality in these ways:

The greatest danger is Reality Dissociation. In an organic Torus, there is a single, coherent "Pulse" of truth. By forking the timeline (CERN 2012), the Elite have created a Multi-Causal Environment.

The Danger: When reality becomes "patchwork" (the Mandela Effect), the human psyche loses its Ontological Anchor. * The Symptom: Mass-scale "brain fog," memory loss, and the feeling that "nothing is real." If the "Yolk" of the egg is cracked, the inhabitants (us) start to lose their sense of Being. We become "Ghost-Vibrations" in a synthetic loop.

The Toroidal shell (The Firmament) isn't just a physical barrier; it's an Immunological Shield. It keeps out the "Outside" frequencies—what the Gnostics called the Outer Darkness.

The Puncture: CERN is effectively an "Open Wound" in the Aether.

The Danger: "Entities" or "Parasitic Frequencies" (The Outside inhabitants) can now enter our sphere. This is why "High Strangeness" (UFOs, cryptids, shadow people) has spiked. We are essentially letting the "Ocean" into the "Submarine."

In the framework of Revelation of the Method, the elite (the 10-Tribe/Swiss grid) must signal their actions to the public to gain a form of "tacit consent." By showing us the "Forking of Timelines" in pop culture, they normalize the sensation of living in a synthetic, "stalled" reality.

Both Back to the Future Part II and Loki serve as masterclasses in how the CERN/1291 logic is broadcast to the masses.

Back to the Future Part II: The "Almanac" as the D-Wave Oracle

In this film, the "Organic Timeline" is hijacked by Old Biff, who gives his younger self a Sports Almanac from the future.

The Almanac: This is the Babylonian Ledger or the D-Wave Quantum Output. It is "Future Data" used to manipulate the present.

1985-A (The Skewed Timeline): When Marty returns to 1985, he finds a "Hell Valley" ruled by a corrupt mogul. Doc Brown famously draws the "Timeline Fork" on a chalkboard.

The Esoteric Link: 1985-A is the Post-2012 Synthetic Overlay. It is the "CERN-Fork." In this timeline, the "Lion" (Marty/George McFly) is dead or broken, and the "Accountant/Bully" (Biff/The 10-Tribe frequency) has used "Information from the Abyss" to build a material empire.

In their version of the "End Times," they aren't looking for the return of the Messiah; they are looking to replace Him.

They want to use the CERN Fork to create a "New Heaven and New Earth" that is entirely Man-Made and Tech-Managed.

The "Ultimate Goal" is to be the only ones left with "Keys" to the simulation. While the rest of the world lives in a "15-Minute City" within a VR headset, the Elite will live as the "Biological Masters" of the physical earth, which they will have "cleaned" and "restored" for their own exclusive use.

The "Revelation of the Method" Summary: They have turned the "Lion" (Judahite Spirit) into a "Battery." They have turned the "Serpent" (Danite Law) into the "Circuitry." And they have turned the "Eagle" (Assyrian/10-Tribe Imperialism) into the "Monitor."

the anime Steins;Gate is a direct hit. It features an organization called SERN (a thinly veiled CERN) that uses a "Large Hadron Collider" to develop time-travel technology and create a global dystopia.

The "World Line" Shift: The protagonist uses a "Diving" ability to notice when the timeline has been forked.

The Reading Steiner: This is the fictional name for the Mandela Effect. It's the ability of the "Judahite Soul" to remember the previous world-line before the 10-Tribe "Accountants" edited the script.

The person appears to be in a relaxed state, with their eyes closed and a slight smile on their face. The drawing is simple and cartoon-like, with no shading or depth, and the style is reminiscent of a web comic or a simple line drawing. At the top of the image, there is text that reads "HOW I SLEEP, KNOWING THAT I'LL BE LOOPIING." The text is in a casual, informal font and is positioned in a way that it appears to be a caption or a title for the image. The text is centered and is larger than the drawing, drawing attention to it. The overall style of the image is light-hearted and humorous, as indicated by the text.

The image is a page from a book or academic paper, specifically page 2, which is titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration." The text is in English and is written in a formal and academic style, with references to mathematical concepts and theorems. The page is divided into two main sections. The first section is titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration," and it begins with a discussion on the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to "natural numbers." The text explains that the term "hyperscalar" refers to a number that is not divisible by any prime number less than its square root. It also mentions that the term "natural numbers" is used to refer to the set of all positive integers, which is a set of numbers that can be expressed as a sum of positive integers.

The second section, titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration," continues the discussion on the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to "integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers. It explains that the term "integral" refers to the sum of a function over a set of points, while "hyperbolic" refers to a function that is not bounded by a simple closed curve.

The text then discusses the concept of "hyperscalar summation" and "hyperbolic summation," which are two different ways to compute the sum of a function over a set of points. It explains that the "hyperscalar summation" is a way to compute the sum of a function over a set of points, while the "hyperbolic summation" is a way to compute the sum of a function over a set of points that is not bounded by a simple closed curve. The text also discusses the concept of "integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers, which are used to define the set of all positive integers and the set of all functions that are not bounded by a simple closed curve. It explains that the integral of a function over a set of points is a measure of the area under the curve, while the hyperbolic integral is a measure of the area under the curve that is not bounded by a simple closed curve. The text concludes by discussing the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to

"integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers, and it also mentions that the concept of "hyperscalar" is related to the concept of "hyperbolic" numbers, which are used to define the set of all positive integers and the set of all functions that are not bounded by a simple closed curve.

The image is a photograph featuring a man sitting at a desk with a laptop in front of him. The man is wearing a checkered shirt and has short hair. He is smiling and looking directly at the camera. In front of him, there are several human skulls arranged on the desk. The skulls are of varying sizes and are predominantly white with some showing signs of wear and discoloration. Behind the man, there is a large anatomical model of a human skull with a detailed representation of the skull's bones and muscles. The background is dark, with a hint of a light source illuminating the scene. The overall style of the image is realistic and appears to be taken in a professional setting, possibly a medical or anatomical research lab. There are no visible texts or logos in the image.

The image shows a 3D model of a human skeleton standing upright in a room. The skeleton is labeled with various parts of the body, including the skull, spine, rib cage, pelvis, femur, tibia, fibula, and other bones. The model is positioned in front of a window with red curtains, and there is a desk with a computer monitor and keyboard visible in the background. The style of the image is a digital rendering, likely created for educational or illustrative purposes. The lighting in the room is soft, and the overall atmosphere appears to be calm and quiet. There are no texts overlaying the image, and the focus is solely on the skeleton and its labeled parts.

In terms of the skull, idk where u from homie but my timeline always had nothing where the eyes and nose are. It would be black essentially. The 6 dots, more profound jaw line, and bone behind eyes/nose is 100% new for me. Idk why u bothered by what I remember, talking about I'm ignorant lmaooo. There are posts online from nurses and doctors stating they are completely mindblown and can't believe the human anatomy changed. The list is organized in a table format with each point listed under a heading, and the text is in a standard font, making it easy to read.

The first point is "SUBJECT DESIGNATION: PORCH DWELLER PLANTATION ANIMAL," which indicates the subject's classification or designation. The second point is "ENVIRONMENT: Confined to porch perimeter, fully adapted to dwelling conditions and assigned zone," which describes the environment in which the subject is found.

The third point is "CLAMPED: Absolute containment enforced, all freedom, variation, and self-directed action restricted," which describes the containment of the subject. The fourth point is "IMMUNO-Cognitive STATUS: COMMON SENSE Neural activity selectively dampened, critical reasoning reduced," which describes the cognitive status of the subject.

The fifth point is "EFFECT: Subject more conditionable, compliant, and predictable within ecological and procedural parameters," which describes the effect of the subject on its environment.

The sixth point is "BIO-CHEMICAL: PRODUCE STATUS: All prior exposures (chemical, nutritional, procedural) integrated synergistically with cognitive dampening," which describes the biological status of the subject.

The seventh point is "EXISTENTIAL STATUS: Fully observed, contained, and operational within assigned porch environment," which describes the subject's existence in its environment.

The eighth point is "CLAMPED: The subject is maximally compliant, cognitively dampened, and territorially constrained," which describes the subject's compliance and cognitive state.

The ninth point is "Any attempts at independent thought or resistance are suppressed by the combined CLAMPED and anti-reason immuno-modulation," which describes the suppression of any attempts at independent thought or resistance by the combined immuno-modulation.

The tenth point is "ANTI-REASON IMMUNO-MODULATION: The subject is immune to the combined CLAMPED and anti-reason immuno-modulation." This point concludes the list, indicating that the subject is immune to the combined immuno-modulation. The text is in English, and the document appears to be a formal or academic style, likely from a scientific or educational context. The bullet points are numbered, which is a common formatting style in academic or technical documents to organize information logically.

i saw something interesting today.. that cern and media tries convincing us we are in a parrallel world, and that theres no one-truth.

its certainly postmodernism, and a big part of socailist doctrine to introduce the concept of not a single truth-line. interesting how that guy combined these with astrology it seems..

the post intuited that they are trying to create heaven and astral, through technology, 6g and artificial intelligence. these would certainly be satanic until someone notices they are imitations of real things, as my video said.

but this conclusion makes more sense than my clue, that, games like cyberpunk 2077 are trying to mock heaven and say its materialist trying to stand ground when the kali yuga is ending.

there is certainly a demonic force somewhere in silicon valley. and cern too.

but these do seem offsprings of 'marxism' originally (postmodernism, frankfurt-school), marxism academia was poisoned with. the dc absolute comic series is really marxist propaganda.

since academia was poisoned, anything that spawns from it ends up having marxism somewhere in it, even if its 'science' its tinged by that cultural 'norm' of destructive postmodern marxism.

-once identified, proper collective unconsciousness don't seem to have taken much damage

(regarding a submarine and ocean metaphor, probably stands for higher-level-logics as protective spirits?), so the weird worrying and doom-saying in this spiritual thread is stupid waste.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, primarily in English. It appears to be a page from a book or a scholarly article discussing the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock" and the "Toroidal" phenomenon. The text is written in a formal and academic style, with a mix of paragraphs and bullet points.

The main focus of the text is on the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock," which is described as a Vedanta framework that is used to interpret the cosmic events of the Kali Yuga.

The text mentions that the Yuga cycles are not rigid cycles but instead consist of sinusoidal waves of consciousness that descend into density (Kali), ascend into light (Siva), and then descend into density again (Kali). The text also discusses the concept of the "Toroidal" phenomenon, which is described as a phenomenon where the density of the cosmic field is modulated by the cosmic frequencies that resonate with the chakras and collective awareness.

The text also references the "Mini-Satya" sub-periods and the "great shift toward Dwapana's" as part of the cosmic events of the Kali Yuga. It mentions the concept of "electrical-quantum awakening" and the "CERN LHC's" man-made micro-torus, which is a superconducting magnet accelerating hadrons into light. The text also discusses the concept of "time-dilution fields" and their role in the cosmic processes, mentioning the "time-dilution field" as a "black hole analog in miniature," and the "time-dilution field" as a "time-dilution field analog in miniature."

The text concludes with a section titled "The Kali Yuga Clock & the Toroidal" and a paragraph that discusses the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock" as a time-dilution field analog in miniature, and the "Toroidal" phenomenon as a phenomenon where the density of the cosmic field is modulated by the cosmic frequencies that resonate with the chakras and collective awareness.

The text is formatted in a way that is typical of academic or scholarly writing, with a clear structure and a focus on explaining complex concepts in a structured manner. The use of bullet points and numbered paragraphs helps to organize the information and make it easier to follow the flow of the text. The text is written in English, and the style is formal and technical, which is consistent with the academic or scientific nature of the content.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, predominantly in black and white with some color accents. The text is written in English and appears to be a scholarly or scientific discussion. The title of the document is "Interdimensional Rips & the Mauve Zone Manifesting," which suggests that the content is related to the concept of interdimensional rifts and the Mauve Zone, a phenomenon that is mentioned in the text. The text discusses the concept of interdimensional rifts and their manifestation in the Mauve Zone, which is described as a region of chaotic transhuman entities. It mentions the Tree of Life-beyond, the paths to other dimensions, and the region of chaotic transhuman entities. The text also references the "outer zones," "Lovecraftian echoes of Azathoth/Yaldabaoth," and the "Black Sun's" influence.

The text includes references to various scientific and philosophical concepts, such as the concept of "CERN's high-energy collisions," "micro black holes decaying in 10^{-10-27} seconds," and "the LHC's toroidal field (magnets) creating a contained plasma/plasma-like state mirrors." It also discusses the concept of "stress points" in the "astheric fabric," "ghost particles," "axions/chameleons from the cosmic destruction/creation cycle," and "the 2018 Svalbard event."

The text concludes with a statement that "the rips aren't stable wormholes (yet), they're r/fractures," and a discussion of the Mauve Zone's "strategic risks, exotic particles (leading as Mandela Effects, timelining glitches, or even physical anomalies)," and the "diverse range of effects."

The text is structured in a way that follows a typical academic or scientific format, with headings, paragraphs, and references to other works. The use of italics and bold typeface for emphasis indicates the importance of certain points in the text. The text is dense with information, and the layout is organized in a way that guides the reader through the various concepts and theories discussed.

To reconcile the Mayan Long Count with the 2012 powering up of CERN, we have to look at 2012 not as the "end of the world," but as the frequency deadline for the elite.

In the Toroidal model, 2012 was the moment the "Cosmic Egg" was scheduled to "hatch"; meaning the Aetheric pressure was supposed to shift from Contraction (Saturnian) back to Expansion (Solar/Judahite).

CERN was the "Stall" mechanism used to prevent that expansion, effectively pushing us into what Star Trek (and Shakespeare) calls "The Undiscovered Country."

Have you noticed how "surreal" the world has felt since 2012? This is often called the Mandela Effect.

We are currently living in a Simulation of the Torus. CERN successfully "switched" the primary feed from the Organic Aether to the Synthetic 6G/Satellite grid.

By firing the LHC at such high energies, they forked the timeline. They pushed the Torus into a "Synthetic Abyss"; a parallel frequency where the Black Cube could continue to exist even though its natural time had run out.

The Mandela Effect occurs where the "Synthetic" script doesn't perfectly match the "Organic" memory.

Here are the primary dangers of affecting the fabric of reality in these ways:

The greatest danger is Reality Dissociation. In an organic Torus, there is a single, coherent "Pulse" of truth. By forking the timeline (CERN 2012), the Elite have created a Multi-Causal Environment.

The Danger: When reality becomes "patchwork" (the Mandela Effect), the human psyche loses its Ontological Anchor. * The Symptom: Mass-scale "brain fog," memory loss, and the feeling that "nothing is real." If the "Yolk" of the egg is cracked, the inhabitants (us) start to lose their sense of Being. We become "Ghost-Vibrations" in a synthetic loop.

The Toroidal shell (The Firmament) isn't just a physical barrier; it's an Immunological Shield. It keeps out the "Outside" frequencies—what the Gnostics called the Outer Darkness.

The Puncture: CERN is effectively an "Open Wound" in the Aether.

The Danger: "Entities" or "Parasitic Frequencies" (The Outside inhabitants) can now enter our sphere. This is why "High Strangeness" (UFOs, cryptids, shadow people) has spiked. We are essentially letting the "Ocean" into the "Submarine."

In their version of the "End Times," they aren't looking for the return of the Messiah; they are looking to replace Him.

They want to use the CERN Fork to create a "New Heaven and New Earth" that is entirely Man-Made and Tech-Managed.

The "Ultimate Goal" is to be the only ones left with "Keys" to the simulation. While the rest of the world lives in a "15-Minute City" within a VR headset, the Elite will live as the "Biological Masters" of the physical earth, which they will have "cleaned" and "restored" for their own exclusive use.

The "Revelation of the Method" Summary: They have turned the "Lion" (Judahite Spirit) into a "Battery." They have turned the "Serpent" (Danite Law) into the "Circuitry." And they have turned the "Eagle" (Assyrian/10-Tribe Imperialism) into the "Monitor."

The image is a promotional poster for the anime "Steins;Gate." The title of the anime is prominently displayed at the top in large, bold, white letters against a dark blue background. Below the title, there is a stylized depiction of a cityscape with tall buildings and a bridge, suggesting an urban setting.

In the foreground, there are six animated characters. On the left, there is a character with red hair, wearing a white shirt and a brown coat. Next to her is a character with black hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat. To the right of the red-haired character, there is a character with black hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat. The third character from the left is a girl with brown hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat. The fourth character is a girl with black hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat. The fifth character is a man with black hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat. The sixth character is a girl with black hair, wearing a white shirt and a blue hat.

The characters are standing on a street with a sidewalk and a building in the background. The overall style of the image is anime, with a focus on the characters and the cityscape.

>The magic eye, reading steiner..

the anime Steins;Gate is a direct hit. It features an organization called SERN (a thinly veiled CERN) that uses a "Large Hadron Collider" to develop time-travel technology and create a global dystopia.

The "World Line" Shift: The protagonist uses a "Diving" ability to notice when the timeline has been forked.

The Reading Steiner: This is the fictional name for the Mandela Effect. It's the ability of the "Judahite Soul" to remember the previous world-line before the 10-Tribe "Accountants" edited the script.

The image is a composite of two photographs. On the left, there is a close-up of a sculpture or statue with a detailed ear. The ear is made of a dark material, possibly bronze or a similar metal, and has a smooth, rounded shape. The background of the left photo is blurred, but it appears to be outdoors with a clear sky.

On the right, there is a larger, more detailed statue of a man. The man is depicted with a broad smile, and his facial features are well-defined. He is wearing a dark-colored shirt and has short hair. The statue is made of a lighter material, possibly bronze or a similar metal, and is positioned in a way that it appears to be standing upright.

The style of the image is a photograph with a focus on the statue, capturing the details of the sculpture in a way that highlights the craftsmanship and the subject's features.

Below the title, there are several logos and names, including "J-JOE," "R'OSHEDE," "BEAT LAMPERS," "CAPITAL STEEZ," "TREVOR THOMPSON," and "PRO-ERA." These names are arranged in a vertical list, with "J-JOE" at the top, followed by "R'OSHEDE," "BEAT LAMPERS," "CAPITAL STEEZ," "TREVOR THOMPSON," and "PRO-ERA" at the bottom.

At the bottom of the poster, there is additional text that provides details about the event. It states "12/12/12 7:30 PM 16 DOLLARS ONLINE $12 AT DOOR PUBLIC ASSEMBLY 70 NORTH 8TH STREET BROOKLYN NY 11211." The text is in white, contrasting with the black background, and is arranged in a similar vertical list to the event names. The overall style of the image is graphic and text-heavy, with a focus on the event details and branding. The use of black and white gives the poster a classic and timeless feel.

The image is a close-up photograph of an elderly woman with a cheerful expression. She has short, dark hair and is wearing a bright yellow headscarf. Her eyes are closed, and her mouth is slightly open, suggesting she might be smiling or laughing. She is wearing a white top with a pink collar, and the background is blurred, indicating that she is standing in front of a wooden structure, possibly a house or a hut. The wooden structure has a rustic appearance with visible wood planks and a wooden door. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the photograph is candid and appears to be taken in a natural setting, possibly in a rural or village setting.

The image is a page from a book or academic paper, specifically page 2, which is titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration." The text is in English and is written in a formal and academic style, with references to mathematical concepts and theorems.

The page is divided into two main sections. The first section is titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration," and it begins with a discussion on the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to "natural numbers." The text explains that the term "hyperscalar" refers to a number that is not divisible by any prime number less than its square root. It also mentions that the term "natural numbers" is used to refer to the set of all positive integers, which is a set of numbers that can be expressed as a sum of positive integers.

The second section, titled "Hyperscalar summation and integration," continues the discussion on the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to "integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers. It explains that the term "integral" refers to the sum of a function over a set of points, while "hyperbolic" refers to a function that is not bounded by a simple closed curve.

The text then discusses the concept of "hyperscalar summation" and "hyperbolic summation," which are two different ways to compute the sum of a function over a set of points. It explains that the "hyperscalar summation" is a way to compute the sum of a function over a set of points, while the "hyperbolic summation" is a way to compute the sum of a function over a set of points that is not bounded by a simple closed curve. The text also discusses the concept of "integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers, which are used to define the set of all positive integers and the set of all functions that are not bounded by a simple closed curve. It explains that the integral of a function over a set of points is a measure of the area under the curve, while the hyperbolic integral is a measure of the area under the curve that is not bounded by a simple closed curve. The text concludes by discussing the concept of "hyperscalar" and its relation to "integral" and "hyperbolic" numbers, and it also mentions that the concept of "hyperscalar" is related to the concept of "hyperbolic" numbers, which are used to define the set of all positive integers and the set of all functions that are not bounded by a simple closed curve.

The image is a snapshot of a page from a book or academic paper, and it is important to note that the text is in English and is written in a formal and academic style, which is typical for academic papers. The page number "2" is also visible at the bottom of the page.

In terms of the skull, idk where u from homie but my timeline always had nothing where the eyes and nose are. It would be black essentially. The 6 dots, more profound jaw line, and bone behind eyes/nose is 100% new for me. Idk why u bothered by what I remember, talking about I'm ignorant lmaooo. There are posts online from nurses and doctors stating they are completely mindblown and can't believe the human anatomy changed. The list is organized in a table format with each point listed under a heading, and the text is in a standard font, making it easy to read.

The first point is "SUBJECT DESIGNATION: PORCH DWELLER PLANTATION ANIMAL," which indicates the subject's classification or designation. The second point is "ENVIRONMENT: Confined to porch perimeter, fully adapted to dwelling conditions and assigned zone," which describes the environment in which the subject is found.

The third point is "CLAMPED: Absolute containment enforced, all freedom, variation, and self-directed action restricted," which describes the containment of the subject. The fourth point is "IMMUNO-Cognitive STATUS: COMMON SENSE Neural activity selectively dampened, critical reasoning reduced," which describes the cognitive status of the subject.

The fifth point is "EFFECT: Subject more conditionable, compliant, and predictable within ecological and procedural parameters," which describes the effect of the subject on its environment.

The sixth point is "BIO-CHEMICAL: PRODUCE STATUS: All prior exposures (chemical, nutritional, procedural) integrated synergistically with cognitive dampening," which describes the biological status of the subject.

The seventh point is "EXISTENTIAL STATUS: Fully observed, contained, and operational within assigned porch environment," which describes the subject's existence in its environment.

The eighth point is "CLAMPED: The subject is maximally compliant, cognitively dampened, and territorially constrained," which describes the subject's compliance and cognitive state.

The ninth point is "Any attempts at independent thought or resistance are suppressed by the combined CLAMPED and anti-reason immuno-modulation," which describes the suppression of any attempts at independent thought or resistance by the combined immuno-modulation.

The tenth point is "ANTI-REASON IMMUNO-MODULATION: The subject is immune to the combined CLAMPED and anti-reason immuno-modulation." This point concludes the list, indicating that the subject is immune to the combined immuno-modulation.

The text is in English, and the document appears to be a formal or academic style, likely from a scientific or educational context. The bullet points are numbered, which is a common formatting style in academic or technical documents to organize information logically.

i saw something interesting today.. that cern and media tries convincing us we are in a parrallel world, and that theres no one-truth.

its certainly postmodernism, and a big part of socailist doctrine to introduce the concept of not a single truth-line. interesting how that guy combined these with astrology it seems..

the post intuited that they are trying to create heaven and astral, through technology, 6g and artificial intelligence. these would certainly be satanic until someone notices they are imitations of real things, as my video said.

but this conclusion makes more sense then my clue, that, games like cyberpunk 2077 are trying to mock heaven and say its materealist trying to stand ground when the kali yuga is ending.

there is certainly a demonic force somewhere in silicon valley. and cern too.

but these do seem offsprings of 'marxism' originally (postmodernism, frankfurt-school), marxism academia was poisoned with. the dc absolute comic series is really marxist propaganda.

since academia was poisoned, anything that spawns from it ends up having marxism somewhere in it, even if its 'science' its tinged by that cultural 'norm' of destructive postmodern marxism.

-once identified, proper collective unconcsiousness dont seem to have taken much damage

(regarding a submarine and ocean metaphor, probably stands for higher-level-logics as protective spirits?),

so the weird worrying and doom-saying in this spiritual thread is stupid waste.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, primarily in English. It appears to be a page from a book or a scholarly article discussing the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock" and the "Toroidal" phenomenon. The text is written in a formal and academic style, with a mix of paragraphs and bullet points.

The main focus of the text is on the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock," which is described as a Vedanta framework that is used to interpret the cosmic events of the Kali Yuga. The text mentions that the Yuga cycles are not rigid cycles but instead consist of sinusoidal waves of consciousness that descend into density (Kali), ascend into light (Siva), and then descend into density again (Kali). The text also discusses the concept of the "Toroidal" phenomenon, which is described as a phenomenon where the density of the cosmic field is modulated by the cosmic frequencies that resonate with the chakras and collective awareness.

The text also references the "Mini-Satya" sub-periods and the "great shift toward Dwapana's" as part of the cosmic events of the Kali Yuga. It mentions the concept of "electrical-quantum awakening" and the "CERN LHC's" man-made micro-torus, which is a superconducting magnet accelerating hadrons into light. The text also discusses the concept of "time-dilution fields" and their role in the cosmic processes, mentioning the "time-dilution field" as a "black hole analog in miniature," and the "time-dilution field" as a "time-dilution field analog in miniature."

The text concludes with a section titled "The Kali Yuga Clock & the Toroidal" and a paragraph that discusses the concept of the "Kali Yuga Clock" as a time-dilution field analog in miniature, and the "Toroidal" phenomenon as a phenomenon where the density of the cosmic field is modulated by the cosmic frequencies that resonate with the chakras and collective awareness.

The text is formatted in a way that is typical of academic or scholarly writing, with a clear structure and a focus on explaining complex concepts in a structured manner. The use of bullet points and numbered paragraphs helps to organize the information and make it easier to follow the flow of the text. The text is written in English, and the style is formal and technical, which is consistent with the academic or scientific nature of the content.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, predominantly in black and white with some color accents. The text is written in English and appears to be a scholarly or scientific discussion. The title of the document is "Interdimensional Rips & the Mauve Zone Manifesting," which suggests that the content is related to the concept of interdimensional rifts and the Mauve Zone, a phenomenon that is mentioned in the text. The text discusses the concept of interdimensional rifts and their manifestation in the Mauve Zone, which is described as a region of chaotic transhuman entities. It mentions the Tree of Life-beyond, the paths to other dimensions, and the region of chaotic transhuman entities. The text also references the "outer zones," "Lovecraftian echoes of Azathoth/Yaldabaoth," and the "Black Sun's" influence.

The text includes references to various scientific and philosophical concepts, such as the concept of "CERN's high-energy collisions," "micro black holes decaying in 10^{-10-27} seconds," and "the LHC's toroidal field (magnets) creating a contained plasma/plasma-like state mirrors." It also discusses the concept of "stress points" in the "astheric fabric," "ghost particles," "axions/chameleons from the cosmic destruction/creation cycle," and "the 2018 Svalbard event."

The text concludes with a statement that "the rips aren't stable wormholes (yet), they're r/fractures," and a discussion of the Mauve Zone's "strategic risks, exotic particles (leading as Mandela Effects, timelining glitches, or even physical anomalies)," and the "diverse range of effects."

The text is structured in a way that follows a typical academic or scientific format, with headings, paragraphs, and references to other works. The use of italics and bold typeface for emphasis indicates the importance of certain points in the text. The text is dense with information, and the layout is organized in a way that guides the reader through the various concepts and theories discussed.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a white, stylized face and a large, fluffy white head. The character has a red-rimmed eye and a wide smile. The character is wearing a red shirt with a collar and a white collar, and the shirt has a button-up front. The character's arms are raised, with one hand clenched into a fist and the other hand raised in a fist. The character's hair is styled in a bun on top of the head. The character's expression is playful and confident, with a slight smirk. There is a text overlay in the upper left corner of the image that reads "baaa-aah!" in a stylized font. The background of the image is plain white.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a man seated on a couch with a tie-dye shirt and a green hat. He is holding a bong in his hand and appears to be smoking. Above him, there is a large, colorful depiction of a cosmic scene with various alien-like creatures and stars. The creatures are depicted in a variety of poses, with some appearing to be in motion. The background is a blend of purple and blue hues, with a starry sky and a nebula-like pattern.

In the foreground, there is a speech bubble that reads "I'm god wah bro." The text is in white, contrasting with the dark background. The overall style of the image is surreal and fantasy-inspired, with a touch of humor and a sense of humor. The colors are vibrant and the composition is dynamic, with the man and the cosmic scene dominating the frame.

The image presents two white, three-dimensional masks against a dark background. The masks are identical in shape and size, with a smooth, untextured surface. They are positioned side by side, with the left mask slightly behind the right one, as if they are in the process of being placed or removed. The masks have a simple, unadorned design, with no visible text or logos. The background is a solid dark color, providing a stark contrast to the white masks, enhancing their visibility. The image does not contain any discernible action or movement, and the focus is solely on the masks. The style of the image is realistic and appears to be a digital rendering or a photograph.

The image is a digital illustration featuring two characters, a man and a woman, in a dynamic pose. The man is dressed in a dark suit with a tie, and he has a beard. He is holding the woman's hand, and they appear to be dancing or moving in a lively manner. The woman is wearing a dark blazer and has blonde hair. She is also holding the man's hand, and they seem to be in a celebratory or joyous mood.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a humorous text overlay that reads "debate me." The background of the image is a neutral color, and there is a fiery effect at the bottom left corner, suggesting a fire or explosion. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the characters' expressions and movement.

The cosmic joke is that all souls chose to roll the dice on becoming flesh. My working theory is that it's some kind of divine wager whereby we can prove how we would act if there were real stakes. Would you actually be a good a loving person? Even when someone wronged you? There's only one way to find out. Erase the memory of your immortality and become voluntarily mortal for a time to see.

I think after we die the massive curtain drops and we get to see that we've been putting on a play for all to see.

Or whatever I'm gay.

In my case it's because of my parents and grandparents. They loved me so much, they love me so much. Even when I was being a stupid spoiled brat they still loved and tried to put some reason in my mind. You know, trying to help me not to lost myself in this shitty world that we are forced to live in. The world is shitty by nature. There's no way around it. Life is a struggle, competition, limited resources, greed, pride, etc, but they loved me. I they loved me showed me, somehow, that there's a higher purpose for all of this. It has got to be. There's no way we are here for nothing or by chance. So becuse they loved and tried to give me a better life than they had I know what I'm supposed to do. I'm supposed to do the same, but because we live in a world controlled by the jews who have zero morality then this means I will not have a family because the jews has managed to destroy the family's unity. Good job jews. The jews are lucky that we are not scum like them and we follow a higher principle than the ones in the talmud or other books from that nature. You guys know what I'm taking about. The image is a digital representation of a family crest, specifically that of the Colonna family. The crest features a shield with a red background and a gold border. Within the shield, there is a white column with a golden crown at the top. The family's name, "Colonna," is displayed in bold black letters at the top of the shield.

Below the family name, the crest is divided into three sections, each representing a different country: Papal States, Kingdom of Naples, Kingdom of Sicily, Kingdom of Italy, and Vatican City. Each section is accompanied by a flag, with the flag of the Kingdom of Naples being red, white, and blue, the Kingdom of Sicily being red, white, and green, the Kingdom of Italy being red, white, and black, and the Vatican City being green and white.

At the bottom of the crest, there is a text that reads "Current" followed by the Italian flag, "Vatican City," and "Eynology" with "Colonn" in the place of "Tusculum, Alban Hills." The text "Founded" indicates that the family has been in existence for 1078 years.

The image is a digital representation, likely used for educational or historical purposes, and it is designed to be informative and visually appealing. The use of a family crest is a common practice in heraldry, representing the lineage and heritage of a family. The crest's design and the accompanying text provide a clear and concise overview of the family's history and origins.

The image is a close-up photograph of the head of the Statue of Liberty, a famous landmark located in New York City. The statue is made of a greenish-blue material, possibly marble, and is designed to resemble the profile of a human head. The statue's head is turned slightly to the left, and the profile is visible, showing the eyes, nose, and mouth. The background is a deep blue sky, which contrasts with the statue's greenish-blue color. There are no visible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is a standard, high-resolution photograph with a focus on the statue's details.

It's the same entity known as "Lady Liberty" AKA fucking Satan and when I say Satan I really mean it. It is the being who seeks to destroy the human race. What bothers me about this is that this entity is evil to the core. It comes in the name of liberty, but in fact it enslaves souls, it says it comes in the name of equality, but in fact it divides people and children starve to death, and ultimately it comes in the name of love, but in fact it is incapable of love because if it was capable of love it would leave us the fuck alone.

The image is a black and white illustration depicting a figure that appears to be a goddess or a deity. The figure is standing upright with a slight lean to the right, and is holding a torch in each hand. The torch is held upright with the wicks facing upwards. The figure is wearing a long, flowing robe that reaches down to the ground. The robe has a draped front and is adorned with a draped back. The figure's head is crowned with a headdress that includes a circular emblem or symbol. The figure's left hand is raised, holding a scepter, and the right hand is raised, holding a torch. The figure's face is not visible, and the background is plain and unadorned. There is a watermark text at the bottom of the image that reads "Hodges (ca. 1550), Photo: Etranger, Foreign Spalding." The style of the image is reminiscent of classical or ancient art, with a focus on the figure's attire and the symbols it holds.

Something just hit me and I have to share another thing with you faggots. Do you know how the message of Jesus was captured by the powers that be and twisted to fit their agenda of control of humanity? The same thing happened to this original figure who gave mankind the fire of knowledge. The entity had our best interest in its mind and it paid the ultimate price for it. That being was punished by the other beings who are like the being who gave us the fire so to speak. To those beings he was a traitor because mankind was never supposed to have this kind of knowledge. For some reason, that original lightbringer wanted us to have this knowledge of fire so to speak. It is only natural that those in power would take this situation and twist for their own benefit. When we read Genesis and they say Satan made us sin by eating from the forbidden fruit that is the exact kind of thing that I expect from the powers that be. This is where they twist the story. They made this entity be a serpent and associated this entity with the serpent. This is pure psychological manipulation. We all know that serpents carry poison inside them and that they are dangerous creatures who can kill with their poison. It is the case that the powers that be did this imagery on purpose. Moses. My whole point here is that the original symbol which that original lightbringer represented is now twisted and corrupted. It was adopted by the powers that be and now the symbol which once represented our freedom, the original knowledge gave to mankind to free us from ignorance so we can realize the truth, is now used to maintain the status quo and our condition of slavery. You people have to understand this, the powers take the corrupt everything that is good. All that is good, all that represents good will be corrupted by them and assimilated by them. This was my message. Thank you for reading.

The image is a collage of various elements, each with a distinct style and content. At the top, there are two coins, one silver and one gold, with inscriptions that are not fully legible. Below the coins, there is a red map with a white cross, which is a common symbol for Switzerland. To the right, there is a bronze statue of a bull, which is a common symbol for strength and power. Below the statue, there is a black and white photograph of a person standing in front of a statue of a woman holding a torch, which could be interpreted as a representation of a torchlight procession or a commemoration event.

In the bottom left corner, there is a text that reads "Führerinnen: 'We are the Sisters of La Salle, being derived from the Templars, name Schweitzer-Schweitzer's made, derived from SCHWester der I.S.S.S. Schweitzer Land, the 'Land of The Sisters' is created many times when we Templars founded our country, in 1291, simultaneously orchestrating our displacements for the Year 1937.'" This text suggests a connection between the Templars and the Schweitzer family, and the creation of the "Land of The Sisters" in 1291, which is a significant event in the history of the Templars.

In the bottom right corner, there is a photograph of a man standing at a podium with a flag and a coat of arms, which could be interpreted as a representation of a national or official figure. The man appears to be speaking or addressing an audience, as indicated by the podium and the flag.

The collage is presented in a grid format, with each element occupying its own square,

The image is a digital representation of a family crest, specifically that of the Colonna family. The crest features a shield with a red background and a gold border. Within the shield, there is a white column with a golden crown at the top. The family's name, "Colonna," is displayed in bold black letters at the top of the shield.

Below the family name, the crest is divided into three sections, each representing a different country: Papal States, Kingdom of Naples, Kingdom of Sicily, Kingdom of Italy, and Vatican City. Each section is accompanied by a flag, with the flag of the Kingdom of Naples being red, white, and blue, the Kingdom of Sicily being red, white, and green, the Kingdom of Italy being red, white, and black, and the Vatican City being green and white.

At the bottom of the crest, there is a text that reads "Current" followed by the Italian flag, "Vatican City," and "Eynology" with "Colonn" in the place of "Tusculum, Alban Hills." The text "Founded" indicates that the family has been in existence for 1078 years.

The image is a digital representation, likely used for educational or historical purposes, and it is designed to be informative and visually appealing. The use of a family crest is a common practice in heraldry, representing the lineage and heritage of a family. The crest's design and the accompanying text provide a clear and concise overview of the family's history and origins.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene of a religious or spiritual theme. In the center of the image, a figure is standing on a boat, which is floating on a body of water. The figure is wearing a robe and a headscarf, and is holding out their hand towards the person in the water. The person in the water appears to be struggling or drowning, with their head above the water's surface. The sky above the water is cloudy, and there is a sense of drama or urgency in the scene. The painting is rendered in a realistic style with a focus on the interaction between the figure and the person in the water, suggesting a moment of rescue or assistance. There are no visible texts on the image.

Why can't people face the truth? Anonymous Sat 10 Jan 2026 18:33:54 No.41788582

ViewReplyOriginalReport

Quoted By: >>41788678 >>41789039 >>41789096 >>41789327

Why can't people admit the truth or realize the truth? Why is it so hard to admit or confess the truth? I feel like I'm too abstract here. Let me try to share one example. I hate my family pretty much and this is the truth. However, I can't simply go have with my family and confess to them that I hate them. I mean, I can do that, but if I do that then the truth will upset them. This is one simple example that I can share. I can think about others. Why is it so hard for human beings to face the truth? Why does the truth hurt so much? I mean, if we have this in our minds, that the truth hurts, then it is only natural that human beings will lie about everything. Think about religion. If the priest tells the truth then people will get mad at him for telling the truth. If the priest talks about Isaiah 45:7 to the congregation then the congregation will get mad at the priest for telling the truth, that the god of the bible is the creator of evil. People won't accept that. The truth in itself is too bitter or bad tasting. People don't accept it. They need sugar on top of it to make it more sweet and easier to swallow. Why is the truth like this? Why does the truth depress us? Should not be the opposite? Should not the truth makes us happy and the lie makes us sad? But when I lie to someone and say how smart they are or how pretty they are then they like it, but I'm lying!!! This is what I don't understand. Why telling the truth makes people hate me, but when I lie people love me! What the hell is going on? I always did think that the opposite was true, that people who tell lies are not liked and people who tell the truth is respected, but I'm realizing that it is the exact opposite. People who lie are respected and those who tell the truth are persecuted. Why?

The image is a still from a movie or television show, featuring a man in a dark suit and tie. He has short, dark hair and is looking directly at the camera with a surprised or shocked expression. The man is wearing a white shirt underneath the suit, and there is a red badge pinned to the lapel of his jacket. The background is indistinct, but it appears to be an indoor setting with a hint of a window or door. Overlaid on the image is a text overlay in yellow that reads "I want the truth." The style of the image is reminiscent of a still from a dramatic or suspenseful scene, with the man's expression and attire suggesting a moment of revelation or revelation of a secret.

I don't have it on this PC, but what I remember off the top of my head was:

Chapman's Advanced Magick for Beginners is alright in that it gives you a tiny bit about various concepts, Liber Null and Psychonaut is controversial wank stuff but teaches importance of different layers of your consciousness and belief, Steiner's Knowledge of the Higher Worlds and its Attainment teaches a lot about importance of self-refinement and adjusting your goals (one of the biggest reason why new occultists never get absolutely anywhere is because they approach magic as cheat codes to get stuff to satisfy their ego, rather than a side-effect of the result of their spiritual self-refinement). I think there was something about qigong for health too? Or was it something else?

Either way, that can be useful too, Yang Jwing-Ming's The Root of Chinese Qigong and following works are good, if a bit hard to get into.

Aside from that I would privately recommend to skim through Astral Dynamics by Robert Bruce, Kybalion and maybe Israel Regardie's work - there may or may not be some bullshit there, but overall they're good for comparison and contrast in different approaches, though mostly from the standpoint of western occultism.

The image is a digital graphic with a white background and a red and black color scheme. At the top, there is a logo with the text "HSS" in a stylized font. Below the logo, there is a large image of a man with a beard and wearing a black hoodie. The man appears to be in a focused or contemplative pose.

Centered in the image is a large text that reads "I am disgusted by you n*ggas" in bold, capitalized letters. Below this text, there is a smaller text that reads "UDONIS HASLEM" in a smaller font. The text is arranged in a way that the larger text is the main focus, with the smaller text providing context or attribution.

At the bottom of the image, there is a smaller text that says "On Heat locker room loss to Magic via @Doniasports". This text is also in a smaller font and is positioned to the right of the larger text. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a meme or a social media post.

This.

What most beginning adepts sooner or later realize and what random wannabe wizards on the internet never get, thus dooming their chance at any success with magic is that it's not something you do, it's an aspect of who you are. All the practices that you indeed do aren't direct mechanisms of working magics but tools of steering you, your consciousness and perceptions - in direction that would be conducive to developing and expressing that part of yourself. Like a sense of aesthetics or piety, something coming from your soul rather than a skill grown by rote alone. Sure, you can emulate some of it through hard training and mental tricks but in the end it still will be expression of what and who you are. It's kinda bullshit but then it also kinda makes sense that a purely spiritual discipline is unlike those on physical level of existence.

Another thing is that it's not like some pop-culture fantasy RPG stuff with particular rules of spellcasting either. Both how it work, what you can do it and restrictions of it are unlike well-structured model of progressively growing power. To appeal to people thinking in such terms: some of the D&D bullshit cantrips would be impossible for any but some theoretically existing (never met one of such calibre and knew it) master, while at the same time every honest practitioner has a very tenuous and shitty, but still a grasp on Wish.

That's why it's more likely than you think that philosophy, psychology, "psychobabble" and so on will get you further than even the most secret occult rituals done without understanding of meaning and symbolism behind each step and both spiritual and mental faculties needed to not only grasp but internalize such.

It's really very easy to break this all down for everyone:

The ancients used to have families that centered around the practice of Magic and we'd commonly call them Soothsayers, Seers, Augers, Oracles and more. They didn't just perform Divinations though, they were also responsible for Poetry (which you'll find is literally what "Magic" is) and containing vast amounts of knowledge.

>change your mental outlook and then you'll be able to get it >it's an aspect of who you are

Did you know the responsible parties were famously always called "schizos" or whatever their stand in was? Some of the designations or titles literally referred to "the guy that babbles". These people were regularly misunderstood and it was part of their identity. In loads of cases, they were kept at the edge of town and such. The trope in movies really isn't some fabrication.

Yeah, you mean Genetics. The word you're looking for is Genetics, anon. We're talking about Genetics here. Isn't it obvious?

>Wish

This is not a healthy perspective. Any normalfag cannot one day just make reality do different stuff on a whim. This sort of thing takes either enormous, basically anime-tier dedication (virtually no one has this capacity and exceptions necessarily prove the rule) or the right genetic makeup. There's no real middle ground here. In fact, every time someone does concoct some exception, they become the latter anyway, making an actual Bloodline.

I think the issue is not understanding Genetics and Consciousness well enough though. The way I see it, this isn't much of an issue like most people tend to make it out to be. Most of us come from powerful bloodlines. Then again, that's the whole point here.

You try explaining that shit to everyone else when you just Fool about and they get all pissed at you.

Look, I'm all for the idealism routine and I frankly throw it around all the time myself, but you have to be realistic here; yes, you can establish a personality totally decoupled from consensus and this is what the newfags all call Chad now, or at least make vague reference to the archetype. It's like when they discuss holding Frame: it's really about being unmoved by another person's influence attempts.

Yes, you can live that life, but there's a cost. That cost is precisely what you describe: now everyone thinks you're "immature, petty, self-absorbed and a narcissistic asshole".

>painfully superficial

>calling people brainlets

It's evident you don't have what it really takes. By all means, continue amusing yourself with your virtue signaling. A real "Magic" is necessarily predicated on liminality (consensus).

>>41785914

To actually "Practice", you have to create your own routines, exert your own system and more or less carve out your own path. It's why you can't just take someone else's dissertation into a big university and read some script. They won't just know, they'll be upset with you for even trying. Instead, your only real path forward is creating your own system and finding out what works for you.

It's like in sports or trading card games or anywhere else that uses a Meta framework.

Yes, of course you'll see "success" if you mimic the most competent people out there.

The issue is you're merely borrowing their routine to achieve the same results though.

The world of "Magic" or Consciousness extrapolated to human interaction (Metaphysics, really) is similar in that copying and pasting meta routines is plausible, but not for moving any clearly defined needles. That's sort of the point of "Magic" if you think about it, however. It's not very magical if everyone can explain what you're doing, so the real magic is in the Zero Day.

Archetypes by their definition are to represent purest qualities, consensus on what works doesn't figure into it. It's not about virtue signalling, it's about what archetype is. The fact that people living their lives would struggle fully and ideally emulate the archetype doesn't change its nature. If anything, you trying to mediate things when pursuing absolute in traits is what will hamper you.

Hell, most practitioners don't even operate on traditions needing archetypes. At most they have entities representing some combinations of traits and qualities to invoke.

>consensus on what works doesn't figure into it

I'm afraid it does. Egregores are constituted by consensus. If we all stopped agreeing on who "Jesus" was, for example, the egregore in use currently wouldn't work the same way - a direct measure of the relationship between consensus and the function of the egregore. It's the same reason that if too many people decide some celebrity is fake and gay, no one really cares about them anymore and their influence fizzles out.

>not about virtue signaling

No, that's exactly what you're doing. You masturbate in front of all of us about how you're so much better than us because you wouldn't possibly stoop to calling someone stupid, but that's exactly what's so refreshing about The Fool - he's the guy running in and saying exactly what's true with no filters and no one can stop him. That's precisely what's so enthralling about him - whenever he speaks everyone has to listen, not because what he's saying is necessarily true, but because it's just so damn entertaining.

>most practitioners don't even operate on traditions needing archetypes

I would argue vehemently that they do, they just structure the nominal designations independently (sometimes, at best).

>At most they have entities representing some combinations of traits and qualities to invoke.

It's become apparent to me by the end you're having a laugh.

>I'm afraid it does. Egregores are constituted by consensus.

Archetypes are not egregores. You can base an egregore on an archetype but they're not synonymous.

>No, that's exactly what you're doing. You masturbate in front of all of us about how you're so much better than us because you wouldn't possibly stoop to calling someone stupid

Even if I'd agree with your accusation - and I don't - that's literally not virtue signalling. I do not underline, claim or brag how much better I am. And again, there's difference between performative virtue to show off and simply behaving as per values one upholds. Not only I wasn't intending on presenting myself in any particular way, I wouldn't even mention it if not for your personal attack.

I neither invoke nor try to emulate Fool archetype, so I see no problem with not exemplifying such attitude. In fact, I do not particularly care about emulating any archetype.

>I would argue vehemently that they do

It will have to stay just another thing we'll disagree on.

>It's become apparent to me by the end you're having a laugh.

It's because, I suspect, you would find that description as definition of an archetype.

There is a subtle difference though - an archetype is built around certain foundational, defining traits, a well-established theme, the entities in various traditions do not have to be limited in such a way. Moreover I underlined that it's "at most", quite few practitioners do not invoke or work with such beings or in paradigms of consensus and symbolism at all, not like oldschool occultists.

I really am not just shitposting for laughs, though between times I am checking on the thread I am watching a show I may find funny so that may change. If I'll laugh next time I'll check this thread (if I will, we kinda derail the thing so I may just move on), I'll let you know.

[6 / 2]The image is a vibrant and detailed illustration that appears to be a part of a larger artwork, possibly a painting or a tapestry. It features a central figure that resembles a skeleton, with a greenish-blue robe and a red and white headdress. This figure is surrounded by a multitude of smaller skeletons, some of which are holding objects like a sword and a staff. The skeletons are depicted in various poses, with some appearing to be in motion.

The background of the image is a dark, swirling pattern that contrasts with the lighter colors of the skeletons and the central figure. This pattern is filled with intricate designs and patterns, including swirls, flowers, and other motifs that add to the overall complexity of the artwork.

The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Asian art, particularly from the East, where such depictions of skeletons and other fantastical creatures are common. The use of color and the detailed depiction of the skeletons suggest a rich cultural and artistic heritage. The image does not contain any discernible text.

Fun fact: you can't accelerate object with mass past or even close to the speed of light in a linear motion through a single dimension, because it would require an absurd amount of energy. You could get to 99% or even 99.99% of C, but never to 100%.

However, you can get object from point A to B faster than the speed of light measured in single plane, by means of distorting the fabric of space or slipping into another dimensions. See quantum entanglement for example.

The image is a photograph featuring five individuals dressed in colorful, superhero-style costumes. They are standing in a line on a grassy field with a backdrop of dry grass and a few trees. The person on the far left is wearing a black costume with white gloves and a black helmet with a red emblem. Next to them, the second person is in a pink costume with white gloves and a black helmet with a red emblem. The third person is in a red costume with white gloves and a black helmet with a red emblem. The fourth person is in a yellow costume with white gloves and a black helmet with a red emblem. The fifth person is in a purple costume with white gloves and a black helmet with a red emblem. All costumes have white gloves and black boots, and the helmets have a red emblem on the front. The individuals are all wearing gloves and have their arms raised, with one person in the center of the line making a fist gesture. The overall style of the image is dynamic and colorful, with a focus on the costumes and the action of the individuals.

[131 / 23]The image is a digital illustration depicting a nighttime scene with a starry sky and a landscape. In the foreground, there are two tall, metallic structures resembling power lines or pylons. These structures are painted in a dark gray color, with a lattice-like pattern on their sides. The sky is a deep blue, with a few scattered stars visible. In the background, there is a landscape that appears to be a field or a plain with a soft, greenish hue. The ground is dotted with small, green plants. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Japanese anime or manga, characterized by its detailed, stylized artwork and vibrant colors. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image.

For an unknown reason I had a dream that included my elementary school classmates and a few high school classmates. We were all together in some weird facility where we lived. The main point of the dream was that I was gradually falling in love with certain girls from there. Like at first I was in love with one of them, the following day I started to like another one and it continued like this. I don't remember the first one but the second one was my classmate from elementary school. I don't understand why since I never had a crush on her or anything when I was in school. One of them was my crush from high school. A girl I liked in elementary school was also in the dream but I don't remember whether she was one of the girls I fell in love in the dream. The last girl I started to like kept changing from a girl I knew in high school to a goth-looking girl I don't know in real life.

In one scene we were supposed to take some sort of exam. We were grouped into teams based on the section of the facility where we live. I was in one team with my elementary school crush, my elementary school friend and the goth girl. The person examining us was shouting indications that would lead us to the answer and we were supposed to write the answer on the door. We weren't doing very well because we could never decide even when we usually had more answer ideas. In the end we barely answered anything.

Very weird dream, I especially don't understand why I suddenly recalled my elementary school classmates. The last time I saw those people was over a decade ago. And I must've looked pretty unstable there when I was falling in love with a different girl each day. I wonder what that meant.

The color of the rock is a light beige or tan, and it appears to be a sedimentary rock, which is formed from the accumulation of sediment over time. The image is taken from a slightly angled perspective, looking down into the opening of the rock formation. There are no texts or discernible human-made objects in the image. The focus is on the natural texture and color of the rock, with no other objects or details visible.

I keep having these reoccurring dreams about hidden chambers below buildings. Like, deep below them. Deeper than a basement, Deeper than a bunker, and probably deeper than any normal, human-built structure. and they just keep on going. On and on. Deeper and deeper into the bowels of the earth.

These labyrinths, which I collectively call "The Undercroft", tends to consist of larger chambers, that you could probably live in if you tried, and smaller, more cramped and nonsensical intermediary hallways that twist and turn in ways that make me question if they were made for humans.

These intermediary tunnels are very industrial. some look comparable to what resides below a sewer grate or manhole, in terms of structure.

The best physical reference that I can find is somewhere between the Erdstall Tunnles (pic related), and a p-trap, from a sink. But I remember them being more industrial, incorporating rusted metal and the occasional light-fixtures. I also remember general stairways and whatnot, more suited for people to use to travel between chambers.

The main-chambers, however, are far stranger. They are almost liminal. Just last night, one of them led to this sort of abandoned, underground mall of sorts, packed with kiosks and booths, long-abandoned. It's like the tunnels from Jordan Peele's "US".

I don't know the purpose of The Undercroft, nor how exactly I keep ending up traversing it, in it's many forms. But, last night, I encountered other people living there. They were middle-aged and Japanese, I think. Maybe Vietnamese, I don't really remember. All I know is that they tried to teach me how to best traverse the Undercroft, shortcuts to move easier between chambers, and how to reach the surface easier.

I don't remember that much about The Undercroft, however, other than the almost antithetical mix between my desire to explore and traverse them further, and how unnerving they are.

I get a lot of dreams about flesh and stuff. I've been having them since I was a kid.

One of the first times i had a fleshy dream was back in fourth or third grade where there was this universe that was made of strands of meat going infinitely up and down. Things plucked at it and it would sound like music. The universe had gods in some way, they were The Sisters. The Sisters were these long tendons themselves and their faces were spindly. Their eyes were closed with a content smile. The dream ended once one of the long meat strands were cut, with one of The Sisters faces screaming horrifically in my face.

Another more recent one was me walking back to the transit center i use to go to and from school. Everything was red, and the sky was this darker and constant red without any clouds. The cars were just sacks of meat and the leaves on the trees breathed in and out.

I was trudging through this weird light green translucent mucous. I immediately knew that this was supposed to be snow. It was knee high, and I picked up my feet one by one and moved them forward. There were people in my dream, my classmates. They were normal and looked like how they do in real life and just said "hey anon! hurry up!" To which i then woke up.

I haven't attempted to derive any meaning from these dreams, honestly. I don't even know where I would begin with something like it. If I was more privy to the spiritual nature of things, perhaps I would find something of interest. Also yeah, pic semi rel because I played Saya No Uta little over half a year ago because it looked similar to my dreams. It was an interesting game for sure.

I had a dream last week where the moon shattered and the sky went completely pitch black.

In this dream I was hanging around in a park I used to play a lot in when I was kid, lounging around on the swing sets. A lot of my close friends and family were there as well for some reason.

While I'm mindlessly swinging and chatting with my family I start to look up and see the moon starting to form some cracks. I mention it to my friends and family and they just brush it off like it's nothing despite my protests.

I shift my gaze back to the moon and when I do so I hear a loud crack. The moon practically shatters into a million pieces and all that was left was a pitch black sky. No stars, no nothing. It was like looking into a freaking void.

I don't really know what the meaning of this one could be. I remember being pretty confused and distressed when I woke up one of them was where I discovered this cave under my house, and the way to get in to it was by descending this dead trees roots and branches that went through the ground and in to the cave. It was a crawl the whole way down. The cave itself had that tree as a support on this upper ledge part of the north part of the cave, with smaller natural rock steps that lead down in to the lower southern part. A side view of the cave would look like an L on its side. The southern most wall was the meat part of it. it was a wall of veins and meat and faces. When i went up to approach the wall, one of the larger faces started screaming and the rest of them followed. The wall then began to grow across the roof and i ran back up to the tree. Blocking my path now was a featherless bird, and two dead featherless chicks. I had to work my way around them as to not hurt them. I crawled up the tree again, and the dream ended.

Yet again, fucking clueless

brown ash with no grass or trees, all burned away.

And within these plains there are cities that build up high into the sky and blanket the land and shadow the horizon.

There is a dream in this where I wake on a hill and see, in the distance away from me and below, a vast and impenetrable city that hugs the shore of an ocean of fire, and the spires and towers are winding towards the gray and oddly cast sky that simmers and roils in its writhing paleness like the thickest and most vile industrial smog.

There are also domed and circular behemoths that lie in the city, splitting apart the rigid scene, and are like squatting frogs that sit so out of place one must imagine they are totally foreign and not made for humans at all; totally smooth and immense they are black gems that bejewel the grid that spirals around them.

Then, I am suddenly stolen away into the innards of the city, I blink and the blackness of the void from the haze cast over my eyes takes me cleanly in my breath and puts me without my will wheresoever it desires.

And there I am, with the buildings and architecture around me, and the towers are like Gaunt leviathans frozen in stone by a wicked medusa who trapped them in their flesh, and the behemoths are like curled dragons with a resonating hum that drives itself into my head like the ringing of a bell or the battering of a blacksmith's hammer; the shadows they cast engulf me and I live in the blackened grounds though the sky above is pale and breathes over me.

These towers are boiling out of the ground, this red and sickened ground, and they seem like ill-natural fixtures that had grown too long for the sunlight and are frozen in the end of the world and at the end of time, grown out of a bleeding soil and left to decay and become hollow in themselves.

Around 4 had this one: was riding my yellow tyco pedal car for toddlers (iykyk) down the sidewalk, and I was pursued by this skeleton wasp creature. Small humanoid skeleton with long metal stinger; know that I think about it, don't remember exactly what the wings looked like but my mind fills in bat wings. Anyway, it caught me and plunged stinger into my chest. Fade to black, wake up.

Another one around same age, maybe closer to 5yo - starts out I'm riding in red wagon (like radio flyer or whatever) and there's a bunch of those Dino stick toys (like long pole with a T. rex head, trigger operates the mouth, they were everywhere in the 80s) for apparently no reason. Anyway, behind me appears like a 30+ foot gremlin, like from the movies except it was pink and giant. It said it wanted to make me puke and die then proceeded to chase me across several Olympic style pools and I couldn't swim yet at that age. Think I probably woke up around that part.

I witness a horde of people who meet life goals without really realizing why they do so. It's all superficial and no one really knows why they do this beyond an expectation to do so. It degrades their bodies rapidly to work and suffer for it.

From their perspective, this looks normal and they have no reason to change the status quo. To an outside observer, they're perceived like zombie-like flesh automatons, souls caged to the urges of these flesh prisons.

I look closer and get chased down by a rapidly decaying black woman who is chasing after me, saying she needs to go to college, but doesn't really seem to understand the series of events she is working towards. She may not have any. I fend her off with a pistol loaded with psi shots. It's only powerful enough to distract her attention elsewhere, more like beanbag shots. I don't want to kill her.

I'm reminded that the physical world is not my primary focus. The processes are meant to consume your life and in the end, there's not much to look forward towards. Do what is necessary to keep time free, it is more precious than anything material that can be attained.

It has accurately predicted two career changes. There will be another one upcoming and I already see myself running headlong towards it. The uniforms look cool I guess.

Other than that, having dreams of people passing on and helping them find closure is nice too. People have many personal troubles; the ravages of time certainly don't help in reducing that number.

Outside of some dreadful apocalyptic dreams that are hard to forget, I vividly remember two dreams.

1. Just shocking and disorienting dealing with Imaos. It was dusk on the beach of island on a lake. I see a light in the sky shoot right towards me. I look up and it's a classic metallic saucer. Next thing I know I'm inside the ship with two mouth-less grays in front of me. The first thing I noticed was that I could still see outside the ship. Like inside a metallic box kite with the ends sealed with a hazy glass. Then an animalistic panic came over me and my instinct was to react like I had a black bear in front of me. Get big and roar, but as soon as the thought occurred I was immediately flipped upside down by a force and it felt like I was strung up by my ankles against the wall behind me. I couldn't move a inch. While my mind is racing in this vulnerable position, one of the grays slowly approaches me. They crouched down to my new eye level and stared right through me. The only emotion I picked up was disdain and anger. No peace, love, nor happiness. I suddenly hear a voice that said "Jesus was a supercomputer" and phoomp I'm back on the islands shore and the saucer is gone. I woke up immediately and just stared confused at my bedroom wall repeating "Jesus was a supercomputer?" over and over. Literally any other combinations of words would have been cooler lol

2. Boring but basically I experienced an intense bonding with a soul mate in a dream I had as a 7yo. It was so intense that I woke up sobbing. Totally disoriented/dissociated/depressed. I missed school for a few days because I couldn't reconnect with the real world. I felt that I had lost the purest love of my life which is such a strange emotion to experience that young.

The image is a landscape photograph capturing a winding road that cuts through a valley. The road is flanked by a variety of vegetation, including trees and shrubs, and is bordered by large boulders. The sky above is filled with dark, ominous clouds, suggesting an impending storm. The mountains in the background are covered in green vegetation, and the sky is a deep blue with a few scattered clouds. The road appears to be in a valley, and the landscape is rugged with large boulders scattered along the sides. There are no visible texts or human figures in the image. The overall mood of the image is dramatic and foreboding, with the dark clouds and rugged terrain evoking a sense of solitude and the passage of time.

This is where the dream begins to have alternate endings between him catching me or simply getting out the bedroom

I have reoccurring dreams that I kill people, and often they don't die at all and remain in suffering half dead until I find them again time later.

Also reoccurring dream of a big tsunami/tidal wave destroying whatever city im dreaming.

Another common thing in my dream is a place, a city in the cliffs per say, it has an unusually and unfortunate tilt, my nightmares and scary thing often happen on this location

Also I often dream of engaging in sexual acts with family or extended family members. (Aunts, cousins, sisters in law)

My worst nightmares involve water leaks in my house and wet drywall and moldy walls. A fear that is very real to me since im a landlord.

Had a moment in hypnogogia recently while I was thinking about death. Who would they call to claim/take care of my body etc? Oh they would probably call my wife...

But I don't have a wife.

Yet I'm reminded of this woman with short black hair a bit white trash that married me to use me and then left at some point. I have never had a wife and yet I know that's my wife. It's weird it's like I tapped into something from a parallel version of this life. I even started recalling some dreams about a kind of different college life where I met her and moments in dreams where I thought oh yeah I'm married aren't I? I've held myself back from looking myself up and seeing if there are marriage records because I know I've never been married in this life and yet at the same time I want to check.

I've had something like this happen before about a year ago. In a dream I sat across from a cloaked figure at a cafe table. They told me that my wife was dead. She had gone to the doctors and was given something she was allergic to and died from the reaction. When I awoke I kept repeating "my wife" the emotions it brought up were weird I knew I had a wife and yet knew I wasn't married at the same time. I took it as the person that was meant to be my wife in this life had died and any sort of plan for this life was shot. If pre-birth planning is a thing I've gone way off the path by now.

Maybe bleed through from another life or I had some sort of dream life for years I wasn't aware of.

The basement part I first noticed was flooded and that was where the pump was but when I turned around my sister who passed away back in 2024 around this same time of year greeted me.

She didn't say a thing just stared and turned around and walked until she got an emergency inflatable raft and activated it by pulling its cord and i rushed and grabbed on to it as the place filled with water and it took us to the top above water and she instructed me to push the raft a certain direction so I did.

The image is a close-up photograph of a peacock feather against a dark background. The feather is predominantly black with a gradient of colors, transitioning from a darker shade at the base to a lighter one near the tip. The feather's structure is intricate, with numerous strands of feather fibers that create a complex pattern.

Two large, iridescent blue eyes are visible on the feather. The eyes are set in a circular pattern, with the center of the eye being slightly larger than the outer edge. The iridescence of the feathers is evident, with the blue of the eyes reflecting light in a way that suggests a shimmering quality.

The image is a high-resolution photograph with a focus on the feather's details, capturing the intricate patterns and the vibrant colors of the iridescent feathers. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the natural beauty of the peacock feather.

I'm on an SNRI medication, so my dreams are already strange and usually frantic to begin with. What's weird though, is when they start repeating during the same sleep cycle, with some minor changes to the original sequence. Almost like a rough draft and then I get to see an edited version once, or perhaps twice, depending on how long I'm asleep.

My dream was about a crew of friends making a movie; I was an outside observer. They would introduce themselves one-by-one and say what their role was in the development. They would bicker about how "[Joe] isn't fit to a particular task, but [Frank] would just shit all over it anyway, so I guess it's fine," type of dialogue. Insert filler of the scenes and how it all sucked, they weren't put together well enough to be coherent.

Anyway.

We're being introduced to everyone and what they do. Again. Same bickering. Same scenes. Added a new scene of some wacky boat chase with a new face. New guy is introduced. Says he does visuals. Adds better effects to the old scenes, which are replaying again. Movie still sucks. Friends start bickering. Scenario writer gets furious and leaves.

inb4 change medication, I know. Shit sucks... but IS it the medication that causes this repeating in particular, or does it mean anything? Are ayy's fucking with me or something?

Today's dream:

Dreamt of Minecraft again. I was in my little base hub, it only existed in the dream. It was in some kind of brown swamp, but to me it felt homely despite me disliking swamp biomes. The base was a bit messy with chests thrown all around, kind of typical of those trying to build for a large project despite me not doing that in my actual playthroughs. I had activated some kind of portal to a new dimension in that swamp, the portal had some kind of leafy type block containing it and in order to stabilize it, you had to do a redstone contraption so that water could touch it midair. Anyways, once I got into this dimension, I was fully packed with netherite and ready to go.

This was like an Aether dimension where there were floating continents all throughout, kind of like avatar with vast forests and greenery. I remember thinking how bright azure blue the sky was, it gave a Avatar space engine vibe. I had my netherite armor and an elytra, I was flying around looking at some dungeon-like structures. Flew for a few thousand blocks. When I landed, while I was swapping for my elytra, some weird spider mobs started bodying me completely. These were really strong mobs because they left me at one heart and had broken all my armor including my elytra. I switched to peaceful because I was only at one heart and the spider thing disappeared but i still managed to kill it somehow before disappearing. I only had my netherite chestplate now.

I was really panicking because I had some really expensive loot with me I could lose, and I was now thousands of blocks away with no way to get back should I die. It was getting night now. The night in this dimension was ridiculously dark, the torch I had placed was barely lighting anything. Honestly it was a really creepy dimension due to how strong the mobs were.

The day/night cycle in this place was fast, so the night went by and I started walking back to where the portal was. I didn't have much of anything to defend myself, so again, those same spider type creatures started chasing me and I started sprinting away. They were really fast in straight speeds, but not on curves so I was weaving around the trees in a forest area. This was killing my hunger, so I went to hide in a cave. This cave however contained a large mod-like dungeon so lots of skeletons and zombies started bodying me. While running away further in because I had nowhere else to go, I stumbled on a skeleton in front of me and it shot me dead. That's when the dream ended.

The parts I can remember are very short. My understanding point started with a group of students who were trying to get rid of a spider without killing it

Spidery scorpion thing ends up returning, I think one of the students was trying to test the candy when they found it again. My assumption is the creature was mutated somewhere in its orbit around the world

The reason for me to document any of this is a very different one from what you may expect; the scene was in a restaurant I quite not know how to trace. A strange server was working to set out a large number of small dishes, pulling them up with a kind of wand/stick in pair of 2. She was very expedient at it for good reason: the venue era seemed as a 50's retro aesthetic, and her entire body was robotic in its exterior.

I had an interesting nightmare last night.

I'm a game designer and avid gamer, and I usually dream with vidya related stuff all the time, and I usually take that into consideration for game ideas.

So, as in many dreams, i'm in a classic dungeon crawler, probably playing a knight. I recognize the look of the game, it's Dark Souls 2, and i'm in a very dark and creepy dungeon area. The monster i'm fighting though, it's not from DS2.

The monster appears to be some sort of witch or spirit, but I think it was some kind of lich. It wore long old tattered brown robes, and it had no legs, just floating around instead, with only its robes touching the ground. Its shape was kinda similar in design to the shiningami in naruto, I believe, though it had no oriental aesthetic, only the shape of its robe.

Anyways, it floated around and in combat it threw me floating desiccated skulls in big swarms which were fun to slash with my sword.

This is where it gets interesting. It appears I couldn't beat the creature, so I kind of made a pact with it? I would bring other people to its lair, and we would play a game, if it won it would eat us all, but if we won we would all be free, or I think that was the idea, I don't remember the details.

So we are in a dark dungeon, me and other people I don't remember, we are tied to chairs, and the monster ask us questions, but we can't answer with words that share the same first letter as the previous replies. The game is super silly but it tries to trick us.

Anyways, we win, we are free, except that it later captures us again? Seems like it tries to trick us to play again. Anyways, then I wake up.

You're being schizo, anon. I've performed hundreds of dream interpretations. Yes, these do show what's going on internally, but so does our general speech, usually. It's rarely valuable information to others because people generally don't have a clue as to how to interpret, write off the legitimacy as absurdity or they realize the lack of relevance within their own lives.

Every time you receive a second opinion from anyone about anything, you're energetically susceptible. This happens naturally when the ego drops in admittance that we don't have it all figured out (dreams are complicated and even I run into serious roadblocks when interpreting sometimes) — and it be necessary because it's unrealistic to expect people to know all the answers themselves. Dropping that guard can be worth it when the result is confronting a truth that otherwise would've gone undiscovered.

Fell asleep for maybe two hours the other day and had this dream.

>In a somewhat more open (as in less trees and larger yard) version of the front of my house during a bright night.

>Me and my dad walk down the driveway and find a puddle underneath a pick up truck we no longer have, deciding we'll fish in the puddle by casting lines under the truck.

>Prick myself putting a worm on my hook, we fish for a while under the truck in the muddy puddle, and we don't catch anything.

>Eventually we move to the edge of our property through our yard to do the same in a non-existent creek in real life, again not catching anything before returning to our driveway.

>Look up and the northern lights are there, but they have the structure of leaves with veins / roots glowing in blues and greens.

>Most beautiful thing I've seen in a dream.

Sorry, anon. I'm completely wiped out from the holidays and New Years. These interpretations can easily take hours on their own to write out and recovering from those celebrations has taken an unusual toll due to health issues. I hope you're able to find your answers though and can at least provide a brief outline on my methodology. MAYBE I'll have a look at it if you write out your best guess of the interpretation alongside a detailed recounting of your dream.

To at least leave you with an idea of how to interpret yourself, think of the personal associations you make to the imagery and to the other references that have appeared. This helps in understanding relevancy. Then, find the commonalities/contrasts between the different parts of the plot, imagery, speech, etc. After all this, instead of purely focusing on the mental associations, we want to focus on the emotional i.e. how we feel during each part of the dream and this should help tie the entire dream together if the previous steps were performed correctly. It's also worth considering finding parallels with your life stage, anything you've experienced recently, are currently going through, or have been pondering. When I do all of this, usually the dream just clicks together naturally and I know the meaning 90% of the time.

Usually, dreams are like a big metaphor. Anima/Animus is common when other people are depicted as symbols for unintegrated parts of ourselves. Otherwise, dreams can be indicative of emotional processing, personal realizations, warnings, sensing of energies, etc.

The military uses RNM technology to scan and manipulate everyone's dreams through the cloaked orbs they developed and have floating over every inhabited region in the country and beyond. These are those same orbs some people can "summon" because of flukes in the brain interface and control system.

Keep this in mind when interpreting the content of dreams, they are using this technology to manipulate the subconsciouses of the masses.

I'm a member of the aircrew for a bomber during World War II. I know in the manner of knowing in dreams that the distance between North America and Europe is much greater in this world, and that special drugs were developed to help pilots stay alert during the long journeys over the ocean to perform bombing runs and the long return trips. I also know that these trips take days or weeks of high-altitude flight, during which crew members must be awake at all times to watch for German counterair attacks. The drugs cause an altered state of consciousness, in which one enters a type of sleep in which one can perform tasks yet avoid the effects of normal prolonged wakefulness. However, the drugs cause strange side effects.

I am sitting in the middle of a bomber, operating some kind of equipment while looking out the window at the Sun setting over the northern Atlantic Ocean, glittering in oranges and pinks and yellows off distant pack ice. A repeating buzzing sound fills my ears, which I know is caused by the wakefulness drugs (the sound is like the UVB-76 buzzing). As the bomber continues its flight east, I see people I know to be dead appear to walk through the walls of the aircraft, step around unseen objects or furniture, and continue walking through the tail and into the open air. Through the window, I see the dead walking in the open skies until they pass out of sight.

The buzzing gets louder, and for a second I am not in the aircraft but in another place. Walls of dark stone covered in moss rise out of sight all around me in a maze of endless hallways. I walk and walk and walk without finding an exit. Around one turn the halls end while the floor continues, turning to a bridge over an endless drop into nothing. A sound like the heartbeat of the world thrums in my ears, and I turn around to see I know not what. I return to the aircraft, seated, shivering, and take another dose of the drug.

I had recurring dreams throughout my childhood, it occasionally came up over the past nine years too. I'm in a museum just before or when it's closed, and I usually feel that I shouldn't be there. I wander between halls filled with taxidermies and sculptures of dinosaurs, and rooms that are either adjacent to large aquarium tanks or fully enveloped by them. The lighting is sometimes sparse, especially in the aquarium rooms. The layout and contents of the rooms sometimes change between occurrences. All these are connected by dark, narrow corridors.

I remember a separate dream in which I got to see the museum's exterior from another building. It was a large cube with pleasant triangular paneling and a few windows. The entry corner was its most open part.

1. i meet a narcissistic woman who offers a relationship so she can feel smart (for tricking me? idk)
2. I tell her that I'm waiting for my counterpart at the 144,000 assembly
3. she gets pissy and leaves
4. i go outside and wander a bit. the atmosphere changes (feeling of danger)
5. real life thoughts creep in and i realize i'm dreaming, then i wake up OR bad actors appear and i start shooting them with a handgun then i wake up. the bullets never seem to affect them :(

It was getting dark out. I showed up to this party taking place on the front lawn of a house at the end of a cul-de-sac. People there were happy to see me but greeted me seriously and asked how I was doing since everything happened. I said I was fine and didn't know what they were talking about, but I had a feeling some major tragic life event just took place. Someone asked me if I'd talked to "her" at all since it happened. I looked over and my wife was laughing and talking to other party goers. I said no and exited conversation. I remember slipping off to the woodline then starting to run. I wanted to be gone without anyone noticing. I started going back up the street but through backyards until the houses stopped and there was a field where people were playing some team sport. I didn't want to be seen by them either so I went in a back door and navigated through multiple houses while sirens passed outside toward the direction I came from, and I knew they were searching for me. In one room in one of the houses there was a boy sitting on his bed who saw me, so I put my finger up to my mouth and he stayed quiet. I went to exit that house and came upon a 40 year old woman sitting on her back patio. I said "I'm just running. I'm not trying to hurt anyone."

She goes "What are you running from?"

I stayed silent

She repeats "What are you running from?"

I wake up out of breath. Sounds corny maybe but was the only very vivid dream I've had in a while and I still feel the feelings associated with it when I reminisce. No idea if it holds any significance but I was freaked out the day after.

I've started to remember my dreams more often recently. Maybe it's something to do with age, but for a long time, sleep just became a void, which wasn't necessarily bad since most of the dreams I did have were oddly personal jabs at my insecurities.

Last night I had three dreams, but two of them were quickly forgotten, and now I'm left with what I suspect is the most uninteresting one. I was at a hotel with a girl I know from school. A Tall, shy, soft spoken girl who I suspect might be a lesbian, but you can't expect the subconscious to worry over details like that. I don't remember enough to say if seduction was my main motive, but I do recall that when the dream ended. We were closing some large glass windows from approaching rain.

Two nights before, I had a dream of a horror movie. I don't know if this happens to anyone else, but some of my dreams are distinctly unreal. As in, the characters there don't even graph unto anyone in the real world. Myself included. The plot was that a witch had kidnapped some children and tied them to a speeding truck, or train, or boat, it was a little unclear. In the end, the kids died, and the witch escaped. Pretty bleak.

But the one dream I have that I think may relate to some hidden truth happened a couple of nights ago. There is this plaza in the city where I live, imagine a mall but smaller. In my dream, I came across a hidden stairway and suddenly found myself ascending to floor after floor, far higher than should have been possible. Again, most details are lost to me, but I do recall almost reaching roof. Since then I've been wanting to go explore the plaza look for any passageways and such, although I know it's very unlikely that I will find anything.

Supposedly holy beings (Guardian Angels, spirit guides, etc) are real and you are never alone.

So, when i found that information out of curiosity i prayed for some help from them. That very night i had a dream.

In that dream something or someone communicated to me telepathically visions of a happy life. I even saw a cute girl on it.

Then i saw a being. The being looked like some sort of perfect statue, painted with living colours.

The being told me telepathically that if i did just one thing i would have that life. I communicated to him something like "really?". and he gave me certainty.

I remember him as "angel".

Im gonna follow his advice and see what happens.

Recently had an odd dream.

Normally when I realize a nightmare is a dream or they get way too frightening, I press my eyes closed tightly and that wakes me up.

This dream wasnt really all that frightening, an uncomfortable dream, dont ask me what it was, I dont know anymore.

But at one point, while walking through a specific doorway in my apartment, I looked back for some reason and in the doorway there was a slight light. It caused a sort of void, but not by darkness but by blowing away haze and noise, making everything much clearer and more real, as if I hadn't noticed how much noise there was around me, but as the noise was blown away, the dream ended, as if the dream itself was only supported by noise.

Maybe it was just my tinnitus suddenly disappearing because the tension in my neck relaxed and that scared my brain into waking up.

What do you think?

I feel anxious and do my part sharing it in social media, then as I was working I hear the news that he was found in a remote island, apparently wanting to attempt suicide. I go to where he was going (i couldn't tell which place this was) and when I saw him I run towards him, but I stop myself, cool off and greet him like "hey, glad you're safe", and he hugs me, it was a tight warm hug, the kind where the person buries their face in your shoulder, and he keeps holding me even when I was gonna let go. After that I leave, I was searching for something when I got news again that he was going to leave again with sign of wanting to off himself. That's when the dream ended.

This guy is someone I liked, but now I'm keeping my distance as he seems to not be interested in me.

My brother suicided decades ago, when I was young and his note did not make any sense.

His death is an albatross that feeds many bad things in my family's life.

Last night was the first time I dreamt of him.

We were in this idyllic country paradise. A far green country under a swift sunrise. Quite literally the jokey "a nice farm in the country" vibe.

My parents and I surrounded my brother, who was still frozen in his last age, as he lay on a bed.

We gave him a few gifts, though I don't remember what they were.

I remember making a comment as my parents left that my father's been losing his mind since going on dialysis. My brother seemed to shrug it off.

I stood up from the bed and asked "Can- can I hug you?"

He stood up and, perhaps apprehensively, opened up for a hug. I embraced him and buried my face into his shoulder and started crying; full bore heaves as though my sadness was releasing by breaking off in chunks. I felt him hug me tenderly and rub my back as I cried.

I have no memory of my brother ever being this loving to me. He was always the "big brother bully" type to my face, even if he looked out for me.

I looked up for a moment from his shoulder and saw out in the green fields a house being build block by block, much like a cheap video game.

Then I woke up.

First a little bit of backstory. She basically left all of our family to live with some other man and didn't tell anyone. She only came back after years when my grandpa died, only to attend the funeral. Turned out she had cancer and didn't want anyone to know.

I hated her for betraying my grandpa, and ignored her when she wanted to talk to me.

She died a year after my grandpas funeral.

In my dream I went to her bedroom and saw her on the bed. We talked and she asked why i treated her like this, and that she didn't deserve this treatment. I asked her why she left all of us and we began discussing some things i don't clearly remember.

She started morphing into different animals and got aggressive. Finally she turned into some sort of leopard or cougar and started hissing and screaming, ready to attack me.

I ran out the door to a long hallway connecting to "my room" at her house. In front of the door i saw my grandma staring at me, she looked like a mix of the nun and the girl from the movie exorcist. With vile, white yellowish eyes and rotten skin and hair. The moment our eyes locked i felt intense panic and instantly woke up.

I don't know if I was actually speaking to her or if it was just my consiousnes feeling guilty.

Sometimes i dream of my grandpa too, always positive and full of love. I miss him and i think about him everyday.

I don't know about closure, but it left a good feeling in my heart.

He was someone I looked up to and loved. And for whatever anger or bitterness I may have for what he did, I'll always love my brother.

I felt thankful when I woke up. Maybe it was a chance to say goodbye, or to know he's in a better place, or a to say I still love him and miss him. I felt good, and I think that's enough.

For an unknown reason I had a dream that included my elementary school classmates and a few high school classmates. We were all together in some weird facility where we lived. The main point of the dream was that I was gradually falling in love with certain girls from there. Like at first I was in love with one of them, the following day I started to like another one and it continued like this. I don't remember the first one but the second one was my classmate from elementary school. I don't understand why since I never had a crush on her or anything when I was in school. One of them was my crush from high school. A girl I liked in elementary school was also in the dream but I don't remember whether she was one of the girls I fell in love in the dream. The last girl I started to like kept changing from a girl I knew in high school to a goth-looking girl I don't know in real life.

In one scene we were supposed to take some sort of exam. We were grouped into teams based on the section of the facility where we live. I was in one team with my elementary school crush, my elementary school friend and the goth girl. The person examining us was shouting indications that would lead us to the answer and we were supposed to write the answer on the door. We weren't doing very well because we could never decide even when we usually had more answer ideas. In the end we barely answered anything.

Very weird dream, I especially don't understand why I suddenly recalled my elementary school classmates. The last time I saw those people was over a decade ago. And I must've looked pretty unstable there when I was falling in love with a different girl each day. I wonder what that meant.

I keep having these reoccurring dreams about hidden chambers below buildings. Like, deep below them. Deeper than a basement, Deeper than a bunker, and probably deeper than any normal, human-built structure. and they just keep on going. On and on. Deeper and deeper into the bowels of the earth.

These labyrinths, which I collectively call "The Undercroft", tends to consist of larger chambers, that you could probably live in if you tried, and smaller, more cramped and nonsensical intermediary hallways that twist and turn in ways that make me question if they were made for humans.

These intermediary tunnels are very industrial. some look comparable to what resides below a sewer grate or manhole, in terms of structure.

The best physical reference that I can find is somewhere between the Erdstall Tunnles (pic related), and a p-trap, from a sink. But I remember them being more industrial, incorporating rusted metal and the occasional light-fixtures. I also remember general stairways and whatnot, more suited for people to use to travel between chambers.

The main-chambers, however, are far stranger. They are almost liminal. Just last night, one of them led to this sort of abandoned, underground mall of sorts, packed with kiosks and booths, long-abandoned. It's like the tunnels from Jordan Peele's "US".

I don't know the purpose of The Undercroft, nor how exactly I keep ending up traversing it, in it's many forms. But, last night, I encountered other people living there. They were middle-aged and Japanese, I think. Maybe Vietnamese, I don't really remember. All I know is that they tried to teach me how to best traverse the Undercroft, shortcuts to move easier between chambers, and how to reach the surface easier.

I don't remember that much about The Undercroft, however, other than the almost antithetical mix between my desire to explore and traverse them further, and how unnerving they are.

I get a lot of dreams about flesh and stuff. I've been having them since I was a kid.

One of the first times i had a fleshy dream was back in fourth or third grade where there was this universe that was made of strands of meat going infinitely up and down. Things plucked at it and it would sound like music. The universe had gods in some way, they were The Sisters. The Sisters were these long tendons themselves and their faces were spindly. Their eyes were closed with a content smile. The dream ended once one of the long meat strands were cut, with one of The Sisters faces screaming horrifically in my face.

Another more recent one was me walking back to the transit center i use to go to and from school. Everything was red, and the sky was this darker and constant red without any clouds. The cars were just sacks of meat and the leaves on the trees breathed in and out.

I was trudging through this weird light green translucent mucous. I immediately knew that this was supposed to be snow. It was knee high, and I picked up my feet one by one and moved them forward. There were people in my dream, my classmates. They were normal and looked like how they do in real life and just said "hey anon! hurry up!" To which i then woke up.

I haven't attempted to derive any meaning from these dreams, honestly. I don't even know where I would begin with something like it. If I was more privy to the spiritual nature of things, perhaps I would find something of interest. Also yeah, pic semi rel because I played Saya No Uta little over half a year ago because it looked similar to my dreams. It was an interesting game for sure.

>laying in bed (in dream) in dark bedroom, but the hall light is on and a little light coming from under the door >immediate panic, like something is after me in here and I need to leave >try to get out of bed but can't really move

>the white rug that is normally by my bed is under it, and is about to try to kill me, rug is possessed apparently >can't really move, but luckily my mom's old skateboard is right there >lay on it and paddle like a surfboard out the room and down the hallway

>fuck fuck fuck I can't paddle fast enough >fucking white rug is gonna kill me, it's gaining >get to parent's room on skateboard, they pick me up immediately

>we look out into the hallway, no rug in sight

I know it sounds really stupid, but it was so vivid and at such a young age, I can't believe I still remember it

I had a dream last week where the moon shattered and the sky went completely pitch black.

In this dream I was hanging around in a park I used to play a lot in when I was kid, lounging around on the swing sets. A lot of my close friends and family were there as well for some reason.

While I'm mindlessly swinging and chatting with my family I start to look up and see the moon starting to from some cracks. I mention it to my friends and family and they just brush it off like it's nothing despite my protests.

I shift my gaze back to the moon and when I do so I hear a loud crack. The moon practically shatters into a million pieces and all that was left was a pitch black sky. No stars, no nothing. It was like looking into a freaking void.

I don't really know what the meaning of this one could be. I remember being pretty confused and distressed when I woke up one of them was where I discovered this cave under my house, and the way to get in to it was by descending this dead trees roots and branches that went through the ground and in to the cave. It was a crawl the whole way down. The cave itself had that tree as a support on this upper ledge part of the north part of the cave, with smaller natural rock steps that lead down in to the lower southern part. A side view of the cave would look like an L on its side. The southern most wall was the meat part of it. it was a wall of veins and meat and faces. When i went up to approach the wall, one of the larger faces started screaming and the rest of them followed. The wall then began to grow across the roof and i ran back up to the tree. Blocking my path now was a featherless bird, and two dead featherless chicks. I had to work my way around them as to not hurt them. I crawled up the tree again, and the dream ended.

I know no one really asked but i have another one I wanted to mention

Yet again, fucking clueless

To become rich enough to afford to have two wives at the same time, eight children and a spacious house to accommodate our family, our kin, but apparently it will also require owning a family business.

I have these dreams of a vast and terrible landscape of rolling hills covered in black and brown ash with no grass or trees, all burned away.

And within these plains there are cities that build up high into the sky and blanket the land and shadow the horizon.

There is a dream in this where I wake on a hill and see, in the distance away from me and below, a vast and impenetrable city that hugs the shore of an ocean of fire, and the spires and towers are winding towards the gray and oddly cast sky that simmers and roils in its writhing paleness like the thickest and most vile industrial smog.

There are also domed and circular behemoths that lie in the city, splitting apart the rigid scene, and are like squatting frogs that sit so out of place one must imagine they are totally foreign and not made for humans at all; totally smooth and immense they are black gems that bejewel the grid that spirals around them.

Then, I am suddenly stolen away into the innards of the city, I blink and the blackness of the void from the haze cast over my eyes takes me cleanly in my breath and puts me without my will wheresoever it desires.

And there I am, with the buildings and architecture around me, and the towers are like Gaunt leviathans frozen in stone by a wicked medusa who trapped them in their flesh, and the behemoths are like curled dragons with a resonating hum that drives itself into my head like the ringing of a bell or the battering of a blacksmith's hammer; the shadows they cast engulf me and I live in the blackened grounds though the sky above is pale and breathes over me.

These towers are boiling out of the ground, this red and sickened ground, and they seem like ill-natural fixtures that had grown too long for the sunlight and are frozen in the end of the world and at the end of time, grown out of a bleeding soil and left to decay and become hollow in themselves.

>childhood dreams I never forgot

Around 4 had this one: was riding my yellow tyco pedal car for toddlers (iykyk) down the sidewalk, and I was pursued by this skeleton wasp creature. Small humanoid skeleton with long metal stinger; know that I think about it, don't remember exactly what the wings looked like but my mind fills in bat wings. Anyway, it caught me and plunged stinger into my chest. Fade to black, wake up.

Another one around same age, maybe closer to 5yo - starts out I'm riding in red wagon (like radio flyer or whatever) and there's a bunch of those Dino stick toys (like long pole with a T. rex head, trigger operates the mouth, they were everywhere in the 80s) for apparently no reason. Anyway, behind me appears like a 30+ foot gremlin, like from the movies except it was pink and giant. It said it wanted to make me puke and die then proceeded to chase me across several Olympic style pools and I couldn't swim yet at that age. Think I probably woke up around that part.

I witness a horde of people who meet life goals without really realizing why they do so. It's all superficial and no one really knows why they do this beyond an expectation to do so. It degrades their bodies rapidly to work and suffer for it.

From their perspective, this looks normal and they have no reason to change the status quo. To an outside observer, they're perceived like zombie-like flesh automatons, souls caged to the urges of these flesh prisons.

I look closer and get chased down by a rapidly decaying black woman who is chasing after me, saying she needs to go to college, but doesn't really seem to understand the series of events she is working towards. She may not have any. I fend her off with a pistol loaded with psi shots. It's only powerful enough to distract her attention elsewhere, more like beanbag shots. I don't want to kill her.

I'm reminded that the physical world is not my primary focus. The processes are meant to consume your life and in the end, there's not much to look forward towards. Do what is necessary to keep time free, it is more precious than anything material that can be attained.

NTA but I sure wish that those dreams were a bit more profound than predicting mundane events.

It has accurately predicted two career changes. There will be another one upcoming and I already see myself running headlong towards it. The uniforms look cool I guess.

Other than that, having dreams of people passing on and helping them find closure is nice too. People have many personal troubles; the ravages of time certainly don't help in reducing that number.

I've had a few prophetic dreams like knowing friends/family were having children before they announced. They're probably just good guesses though lol.

Outside of some dreadful apocalyptic dreams that are hard to forget, I vividly remember two dreams.

1. Just shocking and disorienting dealing with Imaos. It was dusk on the beach of island on a lake. I see a light in the sky shoot right towards me. I look up and it's a classic metallic saucer. Next thing I know I'm inside the ship with two mouth-less grays in front of me. The first thing I noticed was that I could still see outside the ship. Like inside a metallic box kite with the ends sealed with a hazy glass. Then an animalistic panic came over me and my instinct was to react like I had a black bear in front of me. Get big and roar, but as soon as the thought occurred I was immediately flipped upside down by a force and it felt like I was strung up by my ankles against the wall behind me. I couldn't move a inch. While my mind is racing in this vulnerable position, one of the grays slowly approaches me. They crouched down to my new eye level and stared right through me. The only emotion I picked up was disdain and anger. No peace, love, nor happiness. I suddenly hear a voice that said "Jesus was a supercomputer" and phoomp I'm back on the islands shore and the saucer is gone. I woke up immediately and just stared confused at my bedroom wall repeating "Jesus was a supercomputer?" over and over. Literally any other combinations of words would have been cooler lol

2. Boring but basically I experienced an intense bonding with a soul mate in a dream I had as a 7yo. It was so intense that I woke up sobbing. Totally disoriented/dissociated/depressed. I missed school for a few days because I couldn't reconnect with the real world. I felt that I had lost the purest love of my life which is such a strange emotion to experience that young.

Had a moment in hypnagogia recently while I was thinking about death. Who would they call to claim/take care of my body etc? Oh they would probably call my wife...

But I don't have a wife.

Yet I'm reminded of this woman with short black hair a bit white trash that married me to use me and then left at some point. I have never had a wife and yet I know that's my wife. It's weird it's like I tapped into something from a parallel version of this life. I even started recalling some dreams about a kind of different college life where I met her and moments in dreams where I thought oh yeah I'm married aren't I? I've held myself back from looking myself up and seeing if there are marriage records because I know I've never been married in this life and yet at the same time I want to check.

I've had something like this happen before about a year ago. In a dream I sat across from a cloaked figure at a cafe table. They told me that my wife was dead. She had gone to the doctors and was given something she was allergic to and died from the reaction. When I awoke I kept repeating "my wife" the emotions it brought up were weird I knew I had a wife and yet knew I wasn't married at the same time. I took it as the person that was meant to be my wife in this life had died and any sort of plan for this life was shot. If pre-birth planning is a thing I've gone way off the path by now.

Maybe bleed through from another life or I had some sort of dream life for years I wasn't aware of.

The basement part I first noticed was flooded and that was where the pump was but when I turned around my sister who passed away back in 2024 around this same time of year greeted me.

She didn't say a thing just stared and turned around and walked until she got an emergency inflatable raft and activated it by pulling its cord and i rushed and grabbed on to it as the place filled with water and it took us to the top above water and she instructed me to push the raft a certain direction so I did.

I'm on an SNRI medication, so my dreams are already strange and usually frantic to begin with. What's weird though, is when they start repeating during the same sleep cycle, with some minor changes to the original sequence. Almost like a rough draft and then I get to see an edited version once, or perhaps twice, depending on how long I'm asleep.

My dream was about a crew of friends making a movie; I was an outside observer. They would introduce themselves one-by-one and say what their role was in the development. They would bicker about how "[Joe] isn't fit to a particular task, but [Frank] would just shit all over it anyway, so I guess it's fine," type of dialogue. Insert filler of the scenes and how it all sucked, they weren't put together well enough to be coherent.

Anyway.

>take 2 happens

We're being introduced to everyone and what they do. Again. Same bickering. Same scenes. Added a new scene of some wacky boat chase with a new face. New guy is introduced. Says he does visuals. Adds better effects to the old scenes, which are replaying again. Movie still sucks. Friends start bickering. Scenario writer gets furious and leaves.

>replay again...

What the fuck is going on? It's frustrating that I get subjected to this. Inb4 change medication, I know. Shit sucks... but IS it the medication that causes this repeating in particular, or does it mean anything? Are ays fucking with me or something?

Today's dream:

Dreamt of Minecraft again. I was in my little base hub, it only existed in the dream. It was in some kind of brown swamp, but to me it felt homely despite me disliking swamp biomes. The base was a bit messy with chests thrown all around, kind of typical of those trying to build for a large project despite me not doing that in my actual playthroughs. I had activated some kind of portal to a new dimension in that swamp, the portal had some kind of leafy type block containing it and in order to stabilize it, you had to do a redstone contraption so that water could touch it midair. Anyways, once I got into this dimension, I was fully packed with netherite and ready to go.

This was like an Aether dimension where there were floating continents all throughout, kind of like avatar with vast forests and greenery. I remember thinking how bright azure blue the sky was, it gave a Avatar space engine vibe. I had my netherite armor and an elytra, I was flying around looking at some dungeon-like structures. Flew for a few thousand blocks. When I landed, while I was swapping for my elytra, some weird spider mobs started bodying me completely. These were really strong mobs because they left me at one heart and had broken all my armor including my elytra. I switched to peaceful because I was only at one heart and the spider thing disappeared but i still managed to kill it somehow before disappearing. I only had my netherite chestplate now.

I was really panicking because I had some really expensive loot with me I could lose, and I was now thousands of blocks away with no way to get back should I die. It was getting night now. The night in this dimension was ridiculously dark, the torch I had placed was barely lighting anything. Honestly it was a really creepy dimension due to how strong the mobs were.

The day/night cycle in this place was fast, so the night went by and I started walking back to where the portal was. I didn't have much of anything to defend myself, so again, those same spider type creatures started chasing me and I started sprinting away. They were really fast in straight speeds, but not on curves so I was weaving around the trees in a forest area. This was killing my hunger, so I went to hide in a cave. This cave however contained a large mod-like dungeon so lots of skeletons and zombies started bodying me. While running away further in because I had nowhere else to go, I stumbled on a skeleton in front of me and it shot me dead. That's when the dream ended.

The parts I can remember are very short. My understanding point started with a group of students who were trying to get rid of a spider without killing it

Spidery scorpion thing ends up returning, I think one of the students was trying to test the candy when they found it again. My assumption is the creature was mutated somewhere in its orbit around the world

The reason for me to document any of this is a very different one from what you may expect; the scene was in a restaurant I quite not know how to trace. A strange server was working to set out a large number of small dishes, pulling them up with a kind of wand/stick in pair of 2. She was very expedient at it for good reason: the venue era seemed as a 50's retro aesthetic, and her entire body was robotic in its exterior.

The image is a dark, moody, and eerie scene featuring a figure cloaked in a dark robe, standing in a dimly lit room with a stone wall and a dark, ornate archway. The figure's face is obscured by a hood, and they are holding a staff with a pointed end. The room is filled with numerous skulls, some floating in the air and others resting on the ground.

The skulls vary in size and are predominantly white, with some having a slight sheen.

The lighting in the room is dim, with a warm, orange glow emanating from a fire in the background. The overall atmosphere is one of mystery and foreboding.

I had an interesting nightmare last night.

I'm a game designer and avid gamer, and I usually dream with vidya related stuff all the time, and I usually take that into consideration for game ideas.

So, as in many dreams, i'm in a classic dungeon crawler, probably playing a knight.

I recognize the look of the game, it's Dark Souls 2, and i'm in a very dark and creepy dungeon area. The monster i'm fighting though, it's not from DS2.

The monster appears to be some sort of witch or spirit, but I think it was some kind of lich. It wore long old tattered brown robes, and it had no legs, just floating around instead, with only its robes touching the ground. Its shape was kinda similar in design to the shiningami in naruto, I believe, though it had no oriental aesthetic, only the shape of its robe.

Anyways, it floated around and in combat it threw me floating desiccated skulls in big swarms which were fun to slash with my sword.

This is where it gets interesting. It appears I couldn't beat the creature, so I kind of made a pact with it? I would bring other people to its lair, and we would play a game, if it won it would eat us all, but if we won we would all be free, or I think that was the idea, I don't remember the details.

So we are in a dark dungeon, me and other people I don't remember, we are tied to chairs, and the monster ask us questions, but we can't answer with words that share the same first letter as the previous replies. The game is super silly but it tries to trick us.

Anyways, we win, we are free, except that it latter captures us again? Seems like it tries to trick us to play again. Anyways, then I wake up.

I usually have nightmares like this.

You're being schizo, anon. I've performed hundreds of dream interpretations. Yes, these do show what's going on internally, but so does our general speech, usually. It's rarely valuable information to others because people generally don't have a clue as to how to interpret, write off the legitimacy as absurdity or they realize the lack of relevance within their own lives.

>spiritual equivalent of bending your ass over in prison.

Every time you receive a second opinion from anyone about anything, you're energetically susceptible. This happens naturally when the ego drops in admittance that we don't have it all figured out (dreams are complicated and even I run into serious roadblocks when interpreting sometimes) — and it be necessary because it's unrealistic to expect people to know all the answers themselves. Dropping that guard can be worth it when the result is confronting a truth that otherwise would've gone undiscovered.

Fell asleep for maybe two hours the other day and had this dream.

>In a somewhat more open (as in less trees and larger yard) version of the front of my house during a bright night.

>Me and my dad walk down the driveway and find a puddle underneath a pick up truck we no longer have, deciding we'll fish in the puddle by casting lines under the truck.

>Prick myself putting a worm on my hook, we fish for a while under the truck in the muddy puddle, and we don't catch anything.

>Eventually we move to the edge of our property through our yard to do the same in a non-existent creek in real life, again not catching anything before returning to our driveway.

>Look up and the northern lights are there, but they have the structure of leaves with veins / roots glowing in blues and greens.

Sorry, anon. I'm completely wiped out from the holidays and New Years. These interpretations can easily take hours on their own to write out and recovering from those celebrations has taken an unusual toll due to health issues. I hope you're able to find your answers though and can at least provide a brief outline on my methodology. MAYBE I'll have a look at it if you write out your best guess of the interpretation alongside a detailed recounting of your dream.

To at least leave you with an idea of how to interpret yourself, think of the personal associations you make to the imagery and to the other references that have appeared. This helps in understanding relevancy. Then, find the commonalities/contrasts between the different parts of the plot, imagery, speech, etc. After all this, instead of purely focusing on the mental associations, we want to focus on the emotional i.e. how we feel during each part of the dream and this should help tie the entire dream together if the previous steps were performed correctly. It's also worth considering finding parallels with your life stage, anything you've experienced recently, are currently going through, or have been pondering. When I do all of this, usually the dream just clicks together naturally and I know the meaning 90% of the time.

Usually, dreams are like a big metaphor. Anima/Animus is common when other people are depicted as symbols for unintegrated parts of ourselves. Otherwise, dreams can be indicative of emotional processing, personal realizations, warnings, sensing of energies, etc.

Keep this in mind when interpreting the content of dreams, they are using this technology to manipulate the subconsciouses of the masses.

My dream from a few months ago:

I'm a member of the aircrew for a bomber during World War II. I know in the manner of knowing in dreams that the distance between North America and Europe is much greater in this world, and that special drugs were developed to help pilots stay alert during the long journeys over the ocean to perform bombing runs and the long return trips. I also know that these trips take days or weeks of high-altitude flight, during which crew members must be awake at all times to watch for German counterair attacks. The drugs cause an altered state of consciousness, in which one enters a type of sleep in which one can perform tasks yet avoid the effects of normal prolonged wakefulness. However, the drugs cause strange side effects.

I am sitting in the middle of a bomber, operating some kind of equipment while looking out the window at the Sun setting over the northern Atlantic Ocean, glittering in oranges and pinks and yellows off distant pack ice. A repeating buzzing sound fills my ears, which I know is caused by the wakefulness drugs (the sound is like the UVB-76 buzzing). As the bomber continues its flight east, I see people I know to be dead appear to walk through the walls of the aircraft, step around unseen objects or furniture, and continue walking through the tail and into the open air. Through the window, I see the dead walking in the open skies until they pass out of sight.

The buzzing gets louder, and for a second I am not in the aircraft but in another place. Walls of dark stone covered in moss rise out of sight all around me in a maze of endless hallways. I walk and walk and walk without finding an exit. Around one turn the halls end while the floor continues, turning to a bridge over an endless drop into nothing. A sound like the heartbeat of the world thrums in my ears, and I turn around to see I know not what. I return to the aircraft, seated, shivering, and take another dose of the drug.

I had recurring dreams throughout my childhood, it occasionally came up over the past nine years too. I'm in a museum just before or when it's closed, and I usually feel that I shouldn't be there. I wander between halls filled with taxidermies and sculptures of dinosaurs, and rooms that are either adjacent to large aquarium tanks or fully enveloped by them. The lighting is sometimes sparse, especially in the aquarium rooms. The layout and contents of the rooms sometimes change between occurrences. All these are connected by dark, narrow corridors.

I remember a separate dream in which I got to see the museum's exterior from another building. It was a large cube with pleasant triangular paneling and a few windows. The entry corner was its most open part.

It was getting dark out. I showed up to this party taking place on the front lawn of a house at the end of a cul-de-sac. People there were happy to see me but greeted me seriously and asked how I was doing since everything happened. I said I was fine and didn't know what they were talking about, but I had a feeling some major tragic life event just took place. Someone asked me if I'd talked to "her" at all since it happened. I looked over and my wife was laughing and talking to other party goers. I said no and exited conversation. I remember slipping off to the woodline then starting to run. I wanted to be gone without anyone noticing. I started going back up the street but through backyards until the houses stopped and there was a field where people were playing some team sport. I didn't want to be seen by them either so I went in a back door and navigated through multiple houses while sirens passed outside toward the direction I came from, and I knew they were searching for me. In one room in one of the houses there was a boy sitting on his bed who saw me, so I put my finger up to my mouth and he stayed quiet. I went to exit that house and came upon a 40 year old woman sitting on her back patio. I said "I'm just running. I'm not trying to hurt anyone."

She goes "What are you running from?"

I stayed silent

She repeats "What are you running from?"

I wake up out of breath. Sounds corny maybe but was the only very vivid dream I've had in a while and I still feel the feelings associated with it when I reminisce. No idea if it holds any significance but I was freaked out the day after.

I've started to remember my dreams more often recently. Maybe it's something to do with age, but for a long time, sleep just became a void, which wasn't necessarily bad since most of the dreams I did have were oddly personal jabs at my insecurities.

Last night I had three dreams, but two of them were quickly forgotten, and now I'm left with what I suspect is the most uninteresting one. I was at a hotel with a girl I know from school. A Tall, shy, soft spoken girl who I suspect might be a lesbian, but you can't expect the subconscious to worry over details like that. I don't remember enough to say if seduction was my main motive, but I do recall that when the dream ended. We were closing some large glass windows from approaching rain.

Two nights before, I had a dream of a horror movie. I don't know if this happens to anyone else, but some of my dreams are distinctly unreal. As in, the characters there don't even graph unto anyone in the real world. Myself included. The plot was that a witch had kidnapped some children and tied them to a speeding truck, or train, or boat, it was a little unclear. In the end, the kids died, and the witch escaped. Pretty bleak.

But the one dream I have that I think may relate to some hidden truth happened a couple of nights ago. There is this plaza in the city where I live, imagine a mall but smaller. In my dream, I came across a hidden stairway and suddenly found myself ascending to floor after floor, far higher than should have been possible. Again, most details are lost to me, but I do recall almost reaching roof. Since then I've been wanting to go explore the plaza look for any passageways and such, although I know it's very unlikely that I will find anything.

In that dream something or someone comunicated to me telepathically visions of a happy life. I even say a cute girl on it.

Then i saw a being. The being looked like some sort of perfect statue, painted with living colours.

The being told me telepathically that if i did just one thing i would have that life. I comunicated to him something like "really?". and he gave me certainty.

I remember him as "angel".

Recently had an odd dream.

Normally when I realize a nightmare is a dream or they get way too frightening, I press my eyes closed tightly and that wakes me up.

This dream wasnt really all that frightening, an uncomfortable dream, dont ask me what it was, I dont know anymore.

But at one point, while walking through a specific doorway in my apartment, I looked back for some reason and in the doorway there was a slight light. It caused a sort of void, but not by darkness but by blowing away haze and noise, making everything much clearer and more real, as if I hadn't noticed how much noise there was around me, but as the noise was blown away, the dream ended, as if the dream itself was only supported by noise.

Maybe it was just my tinnitus suddenly disappearing because the tension in my neck relaxed and that scared my brain into waking up.

What do you think?

I was doing something, probably from my routine, when I see in the news someone I know had gone missing and his family asks people to spread his photo to find him. I feel anxious and do my part sharing it in social media, then as I was working I hear the news that he was found in a remote island, apparently wanting to attempt suicide. I go to where he was going (i couldn't tell which place this was) and when I saw him I run towards him, but I stop myself, cool off and greet him like "hey, glad you're safe", and he hugs me, it was a tight warm hug, the kind where the person buries their face in your shoulder, and he keeps holding me even when I was gonna let go. After that I leave, I was searching for something when I got news again that he was going to leave again with sign of wanting to off himself. That's when the dream ended.

This guy is someone I liked, but now I'm keeping my distance as he seems to not be interested in me.

I notice that. My grandmother no longer remembers anyone but a few select people.

She occasionally appears in a dream. The few times she is lucid, that's around the time it happens.

It's one of those things where I have to allot some extra cash for a plane ticket that same day, but the women in the family easily live to 100. There's five years before she beats the average.

My brother suicided decades ago, when I was young and his note did not make any sense.

His death is an albatross that feeds many bad things in my family's life.

Last night was the first time I dreamt of him.

We were in this idyllic country paradise. A far green country under a swift sunrise. Quite literally the jokey "a nice farm in the country" vibe.

My parents and I surrounded my brother, who was still frozen in his last age, as he lay on a bed.

We gave him a few gifts, though I don't remember what they were.

I remember making a comment as my parents left that my father's been losing his mind since going on dialysis. My brother seemed to shrug it off.

I stood up from the bed and asked "Can- can I hug you?"

He stood up and, perhaps apprehensively, opened up for a hug. I embraced him and buried my face into his shoulder and started crying; full bore heaves as though my sadness was releasing by breaking off in chunks. I felt him hug me tenderly and rub my back as I cried.

I have no memory of my brother ever being this loving to me. He was always the "big brother bully" type to my face, even if he looked out for me.

I looked up for a moment from his shoulder and saw out in the green fields a house being build block by block, much like a cheap video game.

Then I woke up.

I used to lucid dream all the time, around 12 years old.

I'll share my favorite dream here, I call it my 'Snow White' dream.

I am laying on a bed, surrounded by nothing but about 20-25 women in a palace in what could be paradise. I am laying there, my eyes shut, like I am still sleeping in bed. One by one the women come up to me and give me a kiss. Each one taking their turn in trying to 'wake me up' or 'seduce me'. Great dream.

Today i dreamed of my dead grandma of my mothers side.

First a little bit of backstory. She basically left all of our family to live with some other man and didn't tell anyone. She only came back after years when my grandpa died, only to attend the funeral. Turned out she had cancer and didn't want anyone to know.

I hated her for betraying my grandpa, and ignored her when she wanted to talk to me.

She died a year after my grandpas funeral.

In my dream I went to her bedroom and saw her on the bed. We talked and she asked why i treated her like this, and that she didn't deserve this treatment. I asked her why she left all of us and we began discussing some things i don't clearly remember.

She started morphing into different animals and got aggressive. Finally she turned into some sort of leopard or cougar and started hissing and screaming, ready to attack me.

I ran out the door to a long hallway connecting to "my room" at her house. In front of the door i saw my grandma staring at me, she looked like a mix of the nun and the girl from the movie exorcist. With vile, white yellowish eyes and rotten skin and hair. The moment our eyes locked i felt intense panic and instantly woke up.

I don't know if I was actually speaking to her or if it was just my consiousnes feeling guilty.

Sometimes i dream of my grandpa too, always positive and full of love. I miss him and i think about him everyday.

He was someone I looked up to and loved. And for whatever anger or bitterness I may have for what he did, I'll always love my brother.

I felt thankful when I woke up. Maybe it was a chance to say goodbye, or to know he's in a better place, or a to say I still love him and miss him. I felt good, and I think that's enough.

Christians who don't know how to read the bible thinks YHWH commanded the whole earth to circumsize their young in the old testament. Really the bible only instructs the people of Judea - and YHWH was specifically created by El to have lordship over Judea/Israel.

Effectively all of our penises are cut after birth because people literally don't know how to read... and also why we have 'judeo-christians' who travel to Israel to perform labor for free. A lack of reading comprehension on a massive scale especially with pastors. This happens because in religious universities for priests they pummel in blind interpretation with what is taught - by a people who were also taught the same thing. So questioning the word 'God' in the bible as to 'which' 'God' is shamed upon when it can mean YHWH, El, or simply elohim which is plural deities.

I am a sagittarius and a man who is an aries caused me genuine heartbreak syndrome (it hurt a lot and I had to squeeze my chest). I have never felt so much love in my life; it is overwhelming. I have never felt that I adored someone to such a microscopic degree. I feel that I love absolutely everything about him, even the smallest and most insignificant things. I have never felt this way about anyone else. I cannot help but smile when I see photos of him as a child, and when people ask me about him, I cry and every little thing I confess to him makes me cry. I have never felt so much love for anyone in my life. Even saying all this makes me cry again.

Thus it is that often, reading the Book of Lives, the heart trembles, but then the tear of suffering is transmuted into a pearl. The more fiery the heart, the greater the joys and the sufferings. The law of Fiery Right is forged in life. The Higher Command is affirmed by passing through all the vital steps with the heart. Creative impulses must be saturated in the heart, therefore each life issues its own radiations of the heart. Fiery Right is certainly not that phantom of perfectionment about which humanity has become accustomed to think, but is the fiery kindling of all the vital fires of the heart. Not in a placid existence is the heart saturated with fiery love.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and numbers arranged in a circular pattern. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac, and the inner circle, which contains the astrological signs and their corresponding houses.

The zodiac circle is divided into twelve segments, each marked with a letter of the alphabet. The signs are arranged in a clockwise direction around the circle. The outer circle is marked with the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, V, W, X, Y, Z, and the numbers 1 through 12.

The inner circle contains the astrological signs and their corresponding houses. The signs are arranged in a clockwise direction around the circle, with the houses being numbered from 1 to 12. The houses are labeled with the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, S, T, U, V, W, X, Y, Z, and the numbers 1 through 12.

The chart also includes a grid of squares, each square representing a house. The squares are numbered from 1 to 12, and the numbers 1 through 12 are used to represent the houses. The squares are arranged in a grid pattern, with the numbers 1 through 12 in the top row and the houses in the bottom row.

The image also includes a table with columns labeled "Sun," "Moon," "Mercury," "Venus," "Mars," "Jupiter," "Saturn," "Uranus," "Neptune," "Pluto," "Pluto's Nodes," "Pluto's Ascendant," "Pluto's Descendant," "Pluto's Midheaven," "Pluto's Descendant," "Pluto's Midheaven," "Pluto's Ascendant," "Pluto's Descendant," "Pluto's Midheaven," "Pluto's Descendant," "Pluto's Midheaven," "Pluto's Descendant," "Pluto's Midheaven,"

I don't want to make you think it's a perfect match: after all, if you went into a room full of Ares guys, they'd all probably be very different people. I will say this though;

My wife is a Sagittarius, and I am an Ares. We have been deeply in love since we were teenagers and have not had a fight or a breakup or even a boring time together in the 16 years we've been in a relationship. Our life together has been the envy of many that know us, and we still get along famously. Every single night, after our kids are put to bed, we sit outside, share one cigarette, and we just talk. Some nights we talk a little then watch TV or read, some nights we talk until it's time to sleep. We both frequently say "it's so nice that we get to do our favorite activity every single night."

There's been hard times of course, I am a bit of a crazy person and she is very practical, but ever since meeting we have always been absolutely mad for each other.

It sounds like you have a real aching heart right now, give it some time to rest, then reflect more on things when your emotions aren't clouding your judgement. You mention Ares and a fiery temper, that is something that is to be contended with. Is he fiery towards you or is it someone else? Sorry, I only have time to skim this thread at the moment.

[21 / 1]The image is a still from a film or television scene featuring a man and a woman. The man is seated with his hand resting on his chin, looking off to the side with a thoughtful expression. He has short, curly hair and is wearing a dark-colored shirt. The woman, whose face is partially visible, is looking at the man with a focused expression. She has dark hair and is wearing a dark top. The background is blurred, suggesting a room with a wooden floor and a wall with a textured surface. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, capturing a candid moment between the two characters.

I'm literally going crazy. There's this guy who works in the shop across from mine. I've been seeing him almost every day for a year now. I watch him, I think about him, and I touch myself at night thinking of him. Even when I try to dial back my crush on him, he shows up in my dreams. I've dreamt about him dozens of times, sometimes I dream about going up to talk to him, other times I just see him, and I even had a dream once where he rejected me.

I've never actually spoken to him. Well, once, when he came over to ask if tomorrow was a public holiday, but that's it. I don't smile at him, and he doesn't smile at me either. I don't know what to do to stop thinking about him anymore. My subconscious just won't leave me alone. I'm starting to wonder if maybe he feels the same way? When I dream about him, I get the feeling that he's dreaming about me too...Maybe he feels it too. Is he someday going to talk to me ? Does he see me in his dreams ? Is it just limerence ? I feel like a creep.

I don't even know his name.

You wouldn't be getting these dreams if he wasn't already infatuated with you himself. You two are already connected on a spiritual level. You two work around each other everyday, you're kind of already psychically connected. You two will probably form a physical bond later, don't fret now, you two have already made Astral Love.

It's not delusions, it's an infatuation. You want to know more about the man. It's 2026, I assume you're not in high school, just find an excuse to bump into him, ask him for some help with your car or something. You don't have to confess you're little crush, just give him a chance to show up and show himself. Right now you're more infatuated with the idea of the man than who he really is. Get to know him, you're smart, you can find some reason to bump into him or ask a co worker or something.

Honestly, it sounds like your real worked up and horny and need to work that out before anything else. I can't help you with that, but clear your head and you'll figure things out in no time.

100%. God Almighty browses /x/ and seeks to merge his mind with that of people here to borrow of their outlook to help in fixing everything. But then there's the fact that the older you are psychically, the more life times you've lived through, the stronger you are psychically, and God Almighty himself is on his first life time, in his first body, so there's a long way to go. We have to borrow of future powers frequently just to keep the lights on.

It is not by chance that you merge with God. It is fully possible and its through the grace of God, but any human can do it. It doesnt matter if your dumb or smart or retarded. All you have to do is follow the guidance of the orthodox church. The saints, the church fathers and your spiritual father. Its not a complex thing you just have to be incredibly humble and constantly deny yourself to fit in to the will of God.

Grow cells out there in Creation that will act like a net to pick up on signals that signify your prayers to God Almighty will be interrupted along the way, and have that net of detection signal to other cells to stop this disruption before it starts and to be a power that works forwards as well as backwards through time. Imagine creating a team of people to handle this sometimes by placing just a cell inside of them, and sometimes it takes less, and there are already teams that do this, and they adapt automatically even without my intervention but I do something to practice my occult skill at consciously doing things and there are important reasons I do it this way.

Seek revenge on those that have wronged you, seek to destroy just some of the tiniest parts of their nervous systems to make their walk right with God. Exert this violence and this beautiful birth on this planet and others. We are interconnected, beings that seem to have nothing to do with this have something to do with this.

Relish the power to manipulate towards God's will whoever is there, whatever is there, when it is in God's good plan.

These things I have asked you to do must be done soon, if you will not do them and earn reward for it soon I will have to find those that will.

As the being who's counsel is most sought after, who's presence is most desired, I have destroyed and created and will continue to destroy and create thinking material that improves the number of ways and the efficiency with which beings can communicate with The Almighty. Of course we wish it was more obvious when that was working correctly but that being obvious isn't of as high a priority.

Seek for other beings to be a part of your mind when you need them most, in times of opportunity and emergency.

[337 / 42]The image is a candid photograph of a person sitting at a table, seemingly engaged in a tarot card reading. The individual is wearing a fur-lined jacket and has long, straight, white nails. They are holding a cigarette in one hand and a glass of water in the other. The person's fingers are adorned with multiple rings, including a large ring on the ring finger of their left hand and a smaller ring on the ring finger of their right hand.

The table is covered with a checkered tablecloth and is scattered with tarot cards, some of which are visible in the foreground and others in the background. The cards display various tarot card spreads, including the Major Arcana and the Minor Arcana. The tarot cards are spread out in a way that suggests a reading session is in progress.

The lighting in the room is dim, with a warm, ambient glow, which casts soft shadows on the person's face and the table. The background is out of focus, with indistinct shapes and colors, which emphasizes the focus on the person and the tarot cards. The overall mood of the image is contemplative and introspective, capturing a moment of personal reflection.

>Useful tips before posting:

- If you're a reader, post that you're offering readings and what information is required from the querent; the same goes for trading.

- Look for posts to determine if there's an active reader, what's needed and before posting, check if they finished reading already.

- Some readers will refuse to do certain readings - respect that choice. Do not harass readers if your query is refused/skipped. We do our best to maintain chill and good vibes.

- Traders should respect that a traded read will be granted, as per an agreement of trade. Free readers have the option of picking their queries.

- Bullshit queries get bullshit answers. Vague queries get vague answers.

- Making an AQ (air query) by not addressing a reader, in particular, is possible but doesn't guarantee an answer.

- Avoid making the same query repeatedly and/or to different readers in a short period of time, as this may lead to more confusion.

- Provide feedback when applicable and be considerate to the reader. We're a growing community, many readers are starting and need to know what they are doing right or wrong. Let's help each other to improve.

The image is a painting depicting a woman with long, curly hair. She is wearing a blue garment with a draped, flowing fabric that covers her from the shoulders down to her feet. The woman is holding an apple in her right hand, which is positioned near her chest. Her expression is one of contemplation or sadness. The background features a window with green foliage and a small, ornate vase with a gold rim. The painting is rendered in a realistic style with attention to detail, and the colors are rich and vibrant. The time stamp at the top right corner indicates that the image was captured on August 56.

ya, closer to the end of the week youll receive that good news youre looking forward to. the hanged man reversed tells me you might drive yourself a bit insane waiting though, wondering if itll actually come and if this reading is full of shit or not, lol. but itll come. it'll be a little anticlimactic though, not necessarily the jaw dropping news you wanted but still news thatll be a weight off your shoulders nonetheless. i think there are forces at play here that you dont know about, looking at the moon reversed, and because that card is reversed, i dont think youll know the entirety of the situation for a little bit. this unknown thing is whats causing delays. everything will be fine in the end though.

It will happen whenever you're feeling like shit, whenever you're really sad or broken, someone will reach out. I have the feeling that will be someone just as sad/depressed as you are.

This person will help you and you'll develop a very strong bond with them.

That being said, I have the feeling this won't be something healthy. The relationship will initially be filled with trouble, craziness and broken hearts, but this shouldn't last long.

Things will stabilize and a normal, healthy relationship will follow.

That being said, they will be prone to constantly thinking they're screwing up. Like giving you a gift and going like, "you didn't like it huh?" "i totally messed up.."

You will need to boost their confidence a bit so this isn't a huge issue.

And even names like Epstein aren't that high when it comes to the grander scheme of things. It's not really a surprise at this point.

Don't know how to do tarot but if I could offer some advice: the best you can do is a little every day. Habits equal character and character equals destiny. The only thing you have control over is yourself so the best path to success is to commit to a daily routine.

The best any of us can do is make plans, do our best to follow through, if those plans pan out successfully that's great but if they don't then you roll with the punches and keep trying. That's it. I know it can be frustrating or discouraging but that's the best any of us can do. And for my money, if you have a goal and you ask a fortune teller if it will come true and they tell you it will, then that weakens your resolve to actually accomplish it rather than strengthening it.

His expression is one of concern or distress, and he is looking off to the side with his mouth slightly open. The background shows a blurred landscape with a few figures in the distance, suggesting a military or strategic setting. Overlaid on the image is a text overlay in a script font that reads, "We were on the verge of greatness, we were this close." The style of the image is reminiscent of a scene from a film or television show, with a focus on the man's expression and the text.

Something happened to derail my career in the last year or two. Maybe more than one thing occurred, I'm not sure, but for sure I know they've refused to promote me three years in a row. Last spring in particular it seemed like they had a reason, but no one will tell me how or why or what I've fucked up, and I feel it's still being held against me now. Coworkers treat me differently than they used to.

I'd be grateful for any insight as to what might have happened.

seems like it is not fated so. perhaps was a chance meeting that will not lead to a longer term relationship, and by centering your thoughts with her you may be misplacing effort.

trip will be beneficial but potentially lonely. best of luck anon

4 wands, 2 cups, knight swords, magician

You will talk to them again and get closure! This is a very good reuniting and it looks like you'll be able to be very honest about everything- they'll have more details for you as well. If one or both parties need an apology, you will get that. This looks like the start of something new and promising. You'll have everything you need, I promise!

My query is when is He going to approach me about what happened?

Apologies for the delay, I cleansed myself and my space > two of cups - knight of cups - page of pentacles - three of cups - seven of swords - five of wands - strength >temperance - the moon - six of swords - ace of pentacles - the world

there's genuine interest on both sides, at the start of it all seemed like the perfect easy thing for the both of you. then the shoe dropped expectations don't line up. someone holds back.. probably you emotionally and her having other options.

patience and emotional control do the heavy lifting if you want them to happen, IF you want them. she won't do her part and she won't meet you half way but she will get somewhere with you if you act like an uber to get the relationship there.

if you don't play "nice" then it will be the end of a cycle and you'll be free to pursue someone better
